Heading the PHE scorers was Jewson with eight while team-mate Fisher netted seven, Washer four and Haist, Elliot, Higenell and Barnhill were good for trios. Drewitt contributed five to the red and gold total with Tanner and Shier getting four each while Hisey added three.

Another hockey score, this time in the seventh group. The Knox College icemen asserted their superiority in the group race by edging the Emmanuel entry 3-2 yesterday afternoon. The Emmanuel squad exhibited passing aptitude but lacked the scoring punch to take the win. They got both their counters in the first period but they were not sufficient to stop the Knoxmen in the person of Putnam who netted all the winner's tallies and MacDonald who got assists on each.

Both SPS splash polo teams found themselves on the cold side of yesterday's two meetings as the seconds lost to St. Mike's a 4-0 and the fourths bowed to the Architecture entry 8-2.

Anderson led the Architects victory with a four goal performance with Goldman and Crang adding doubles. Defosse and Neill were the scorers for the SPS fourths. In the second encounter Louie di Cossato got his first shutout as Weichorek, Wiley, Sullivan and Fish Billsborough drove in a goal apiece for the 4-0 win.

UWO Director To Come

Usherettes have been chosen for each performance. There may be a few extra girls needed for some of the performances and Eva Peace, House Manager, says she is carrying these extras in case some of the chosen regular usherettes cannot attend.

Invitations to attend the All-Varsity Revue have been sent to other universities. From the University of Western Ontario, the director of the university production, "Purple Patches," which was staged in November, has accepted the invitation, and AVR officials are expressing the hope that other directors will take advantage of the offer.

VARSITY SPORTS

Speaking Of Sport

Ed. Note: This is the second of three columns by Mr. Dnieper on the subject of Athletic Scholarships. The third follows to-morrow.

The whole situation of subsidized athletics was duplicated in (or sprang from) a nationwide trend towards professional football in college stadiums. In the Carnegie Foundation Report on American and Canadian College Athletics, the results of a survey were made public. Out of 112 schools studied, only twenty-eight were found to be relatively uncontaminated by subsidation. Varsity was one of these, and was given special mention as one of the few North American schools absolutely free of any scouting or inducement of athletes. Western was significantly left out of the "clean" list.

Varsity has operated in a relatively clean league for many years. Unfortunately, this no longer applies. Varsity is now operating in a dog-eat-dog league. Most of the abhorrent practices of the professional American universities have already crept into some of the schools in the CIAU.

The notable example is the University of Western Ontario, and another is Queen's. Actually, Queen's is the college that first started this business in the CIAU of inducing athletes to attend certain colleges by the use of material considerations. Way back in the late twenties or early thirties the alumni began seriously to subsidize players; and one of the earliest was Abe Zvonkin, who left high school and got a job digging ditches in Hamilton. After a year of digging ditches and playing for the Hamilton rugby club, he is suddenly studying at Queen's and playing football.

At Queen's this practice grew and grew and grew until just before the war they were reaching as far as Oregon for their material. Paul (Pappy) Rowe, who plays with the Calgary Stampeders now, spent two years at the University of Oregon, and then decided to go to Queen's. He applied for entry into the third year, but the Board refused and put him into first year. When a member of the press interviewed his father, the Reverend Thrimble Rowe, Rev. Rowe said "Why yes, my boy is going to Queen's. Thery're so nice to him there; he gets free tuition and board, and all just because he plays football so well." Another interesting detail is that Ross McKelvey was registered at Varsity for several days, but he left Varsity to attend and play for Queen's. Quite odd.

However, this seems to be more the work of the alumni than the college, but at Western things are more open. Since Johnny Metras came to Western, their policy of scouting and paying players has jumped considerably. We are afraid that we have to put the full blame on Metras. We are inclined to believe that the championships won by Western were less attributable to Metras's coaching ability than to his ability for organizing scouting and subsidization. It is too bad that a college coach sacrifices his scruples (if he has any) for a coaching reputation.

Anyhow, the system at Western is really in high gear. Metras has about four assistant coaches who during the regular season act as scouts on opposition teams and in the off season act as scouts for football players in high schools and pro ranks. Examples: Gerry Fitzgerald of St. Catharines—he wanted to come to Varsity; his coach (Spups McNulty) advised him to go to Varsity, since Varsity has the best PHE course in Canada. Fitz registered at the U of T, then bang! Metras offered him several considerations. Jim Carroll of St. Catharines was almost the same, except that Metras didn't even let him get far enough to register at U of T. Andy Sokol played for the Sarnia Imperials, and all of a sudden he plays for Western. How much? $1,400!

Right now, Metras has his hooks into a young man from St. Kitts, promising him the sun and the moon if only he'd come to Western. This gentleman is now in his fourth year and Metras wants him to quit high school and go into Western with his junior matric only! The consideration? all expenses! The name? see us in the Varsity office, because we promised the kid privacy.

And not only is Metras going against agreements made with the other colleges in this, but also in the matter of game scouting. The CIAU teams agreed not to scout each other because of the expense: so what do we see? We see Western's assistant coach Mike Yuhasz up in the Varsity Stadium press box for the McGill game mapping every one of the plays of the Blues. If one didn't know that Metras was a professor, one might think he was downright dishonest.

McGill only last year began offering inducements to players; and that in the very mild form of loans that theoretically must be paid back. However, McGill has taken the plunge, and who knows how far they'll swim in the next few years?

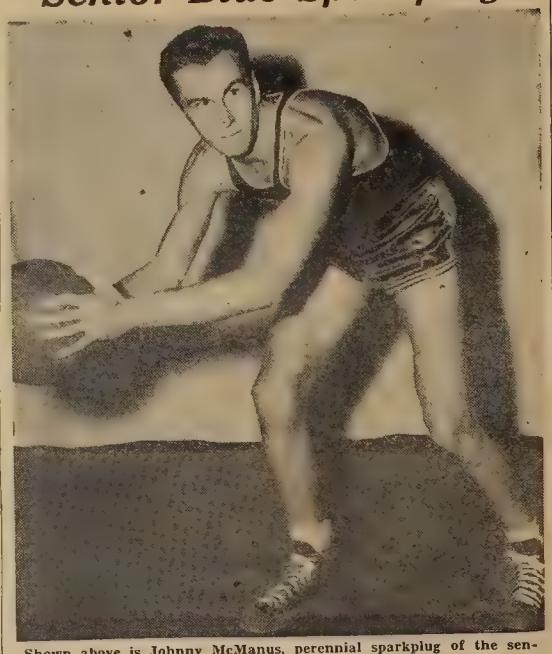
Buffalo State Teachers Shade Hoop Blues 52-50 In See-Saw Shooting Tilt

By BRUCE MacDONALD

The Senior basketball Blues had the crowd on its feet several times during the main feature of the Sports Nite at Hart House last night as they dropped a hard-fought 52-50 decision to the Buffalo State Teachers College in what was one of the best hoop tilts to grace the lower gym for quite some time.

Shooting accuracy, on the part of both squads, was little short of phenomenal, particularly in the first half. For the Blues it was McManus who hooped 10 points on deadly set shots alone, along with Jack Gray and Jimmy Bell who led the scoring attack. Matching basket for basket with the Blues were such marksmen as Henry Trabold, high scorer for the game with 16 points, Milt Garfield and Andy Grabowski.

It was the foul shots that made the difference. Faced once again with a taller team, the Blues were forced into fouling in an attempt to stop hook shots from the keg and the Buffalo boys took good advantage of the opportunity, sinking 14 out of the 35 foul shots awarded them. That makes a difference of 8 all-important points when compared with the Varsity record of 6 successes in 16 tries.



After some outstanding shooting, the half time score was 29-27 for the visitors. As play rolled into the last minute, the red lights read Buffalo 52, Varsity 46. Then Johnny Braithwaite exploded for two breakaway baskets within 5 seconds. However, the Buffalo squad succeeded in freezing the ball, and were still in possession when the final whistle blew.

Lineups

Buffalo — Westcott (3), Garfield (13), Grabowski (11), Eddins (9), Trabold (16), Pearson.

Varsity — Wigle, Carruthers (2), Gray (7), McManus (14), Bell (8), Huycke (3), Henderson, Luck (6), Gibbs (2).

Senior Blue Sparkplug

Shown above is Johnny McManus, perennial sparkplug of the senior basketeers. John was top marksman for the locals last night as he pumped in fourteen points in the see-saw encounter with Buffalo State Teachers College. He was particularly deadly with his set shot which accounted for al but two of his total.

Juniors, Intermeds Win Basketball Tilts

INTERMEDIATE

By JOHN DUGAN

The Intermediate Basketball team settled once and for all last night the oft discussed question as to whether their brand of hoopla is better than that in the inter-faculty leagues as they romped to a decisive 44-26 win, their third in a week over the Senior SPS Inter-faculty entry.

The Skulemen seemed to baffle the little Blues for the first few minutes of the game, but once they had settled down, the Intermediates dispelled all doubts as to their superiority, pulling away rapidly to a ten point lead which had increased to fifteen by half time as they led 26-11.

When the teams returned to the floor for the second half, the Varsity team lost no time in pulling into an even more imposing lead as they racked up six quick field goals and held their opponents scoreless for almost five minutes. As the last quarter started Coach Lowes put in two of his Juniors who proceeded to display some fancy ball-handling and footwork.

Casey Latinovich was high scorer for the evening as he netted four field goals and two free throws for ten points for the Engineers. He was followed closely by Don Barber of the Blues with ten, and John Mackenzie with nine. Doug Kettle finally broke his scoring famine with a neat eight points. Al Stevenson's capable playmaking was again a highlight of the game. Al Brown's rebounding combined with Buster Brown's aggressive play sparked the play throughout. Casey Latinovich was the ball-of-fire for Skule along with Walt Wigle and Bob Wilson, who fouled out in the fourth Quarter.

Despite the score, the Engineers played some good basketball and have a lot of talent on their club. They also have quite evidently received some capable coaching. They should be quite a threat in their own loop.

Varsity Intermediates — Barber 10, Mackenzie 9, Kettle 8, Ken Brown 7, Denton, Al Brown 3, Cole, Wilson 2, Rogers, Stevenson, Grover.

Senior SPS — Latinovich 10, Pogontcheff 5, Wigle 3, Gregory, Willsie, Pierce, Wilson 4, Chorestecki, Moran, Buchanan, Braithwaite.

JUNIOR

Coach Barry Lowe's jumping junior basketeers put on a healthy drive in the backstretch last night to walk away with a 45-36 decision from the YHMA junior city loop entry at Hart House. This strategic victory boosts the juniors into a tie for first spot in the inter-city league with the Central Y quintet. The two teams will meet next Wednesday to decide the sole ownership which entails a bye into the playoffs.

Led by dependable Dave Bernstein and Bill Wilson the juniors came from behind an 18-12 deficit in the second half to come to even terms in a see-saw third period. The last stanza saw the Varsity squad go crazy in the scoring department to salt away the contest.

Bernstein led the scorers for the winners with a sparkling eighteen point effort. Rangy Dave shot with both hands to great effect throughout the game while Bill Wilson saved his scoring talents for the last half wherein he racked up ten points. Glover and Jackson added five points each for the Varsityites and Al Dancey hooped up a trio.

Bloomberg was tops for the Y men with ten followed by Lockwood with seven and Glick, Myasaki, and Zeretski with four each.

Lineups

YMHA — Sherman, 1; Greenblatt; Glick, 4; Bloomberg, 10; Lockwood, 7; Nisker, 2; Lustig; Keshen, 2; Gotlieb; Magner; Zaretski, 4; Myasaki, 4.

Varsity — Jackson, 5; Coopersmith, 2; Wilson, 10; MacDonald, Bernstein, 18; Dancey, 3; Strauss; Elmer; Iwaniki; Binnington, 2; Dalgleish.

Interfaculty Sports

Forestry A's puck chasing entry in the interfaculty hockey race assured themselves of a playoff spot this year with their 6-2 victory over SPS thirds yesterday at the local ice palace. They will play down along with the Dent A's as the third group representatives.

The six greenshirt tallies were divided evenly among Daly, Banks, Dreyer, Clarke, Keenan and Masterson with Poole assisting on the last named score. The game was a one-all tie at the end of the first half but the Skulemen could not match the five goal drive in the latter stanza put on by the winners. For the SPS team Voss and Mackie were the marksmen.

It was Forestr A's again who turned up on the winners column on the one o'clock hoop score sheet in the major loop. They took a close 24-22 decision over the SPS IV aggregation yesterday at Hart House in one of these photo finish affairs. The foresters forged an eight point lead in the first period and added another two in the second to the margin. Skule picked up strength in the last period to outscore the winners 9-1 but could not add the last basket to knot the count.

Keen, a steady performer with the woodsmen topped their scoring list with eight points while McPhail added seven and Earle, Davis and Balkwell got deuces. For Skule it was Foster with six, Simpkin with four and Speed and Servos with two per.

In the four o'clock action the PHE III's handily outshifted the Vic thirds to hand them a 37-15 drubbing. The sport-special team started slowly in the first frame but came back strongly to pile up a back breaking lead in the second and final periods to take the decision with ease.

Mock Parl'ment Votes Merger Of PC's-Libs

A virtual return to the two party system would take place in Canada if the motion passed by the UC Parliament yesterday afternoon were actually adopted. The Parliament voted 21-14 that the Progressive Conservative and Liberal parties should merge.

The session was held in the Queen's Park Legislative Chambers, and the Parliament was seated in the traditional fashion of the Legislative Assembly. Elmer Sopha, _V, occupied the Prime Minister's chair; the other heads of the government were Chuck Cohen, III, and H. Krever, III. Jack Geller, II pass, and Harold Carter, III pass, led the unsuccessful opposition.

"Living In Sin"

Leading off for the government, Sopha charged that two parties were "living in sin," and announced an illegitimate alliance which, he said, should be ended by an official alliance. He also stated that "at fundamentals the two parties are as one."

Geller replied that if this was true, then the CCF and LLP should also join, while the PC's and Liberal may have agreed occasionally, they have often disagreed at basic policy levels.

Incongruities Noted

Other speakers for the government pointed to the many candidates being elected on far less than majority votes, to the political chaos in France due to multiplicity of parties, and to the similarity in the actions of the Dominion and Provincial governments. The opposition members, on the other hand, contended that the proposed motion would wipe out any hope of an effective opposition, and maintained that there was a wide basic difference in theory between the Liberals and the Progressive Conservatives.

Hugh MacLennan Feels Art Cruel Best Is Tragic

Montreal—Feb. 2—(CUP)—"Never in history has art been more uncompromising in its picture of cruelty, disintegration and despair," said Hugh MacLennan, Canadian author, in an address at McGill University yesterday. "As I look back on the art of the past half century, nothing seems to me so tragic as the fact that so little of the best of it has produced genuine pleasure."

Art should be enjoyed, more than appraised, continued Mr. McLennan. He pointed out that our present art is concerned with the disintegration of man and society. "It is remarkable how many neurotics have been attracted to this art which reflects disintegration."

Drama for Today

Courtesy McGill Daily—An ancient Greek writing the tragedy of Hamlet would have changed the ending and improved it. Laertes would not have wounded Hamlet before the swords were exchanged, and so Hamlet would have survived the duel. He would then be struck and killed by lightning. The audience would murmur, "What's the use . . . 'twas Fate."

Carabin Weekends Costly For NFCUS-ISS Committee, Ask Greater SAC Aid

Requests for increased financial and other support by SAC of future Carabin Weekends were passed unanimously last night in Trinity College by the campus ISS and NFCUS committees. The two committees made their recommendations in light of their experience in organizing the Carabin Weekends this year.

Ask Financial Support

(SAC Finance Commissioner, Earl Orser, said last night that he considered it unlikely that the request would be granted unless the present SAC fee of three dollars was raised. Orser emphasized that he was speaking for himself and that his committee and the SAC in general had not discussed the question yet.)

The requests, which will be presented to SAC at its next meeting, ask SAC to make the Weekend an official effort by SAC. They also suggest more financial support than was given this year and acceptance by SAC of responsibility for any financial obligations required to organize the Weekend.

Dick Sadlier, chairman of the Carabin Weekend committee this year, reported at yesterday's NFCUS Committee meeting that his group had barely managed to pay for the visit of the Carabins to Toronto this year.

"But we had difficulty getting donations from business firms, and I don't think we made any friends among them," he added.

The Toronto Carabin Weekend activities this year were sponsored by SAC only to the extent of a partial subsidization of travel expenses, and through the work done on the Weekends by the NFCUS Committee, which is on SAC advisory committee.

The motions to be presented by the NFCUS and ISS committees to SAC read: "That the SAC assume chairmanship of the Carabin Weekend with a representative appointed by the Working Committee of NFCUS and one by the local committee of ISS, this being contingent upon the financial assistance and responsibility of SAC."

Carabin Weekend Committee Chairman Dick Sadlier reported at yesterday's NFCUS committee meeting that total expenditures for the Carabin's visit to Toronto totalled over $302, and receipts were a few dollars more.

He said the Montrealers' "hosts" (University of Toronto students who visited the University of Montreal last fall and therefore this term took the visiting Montrealers into their homes as guests) had to pay $2.50 each to help pay for the Weekend here.

Jane Hill, ISS representative on the Carabin Weekend committee, said at the meeting yesterday that it might be possible to have the Carabins here for a longer visit next year.

She said it was hoped cultural activities would be of greater importance during the Carabin Weekend next year.

"How Now..." Etc.

Connie Young, assisted by Professor Eugene Joliat, makes a recording of her French pronunciation in the Phonetics Lab in the U.C. basement. As she improves more recordings will be made, and errors discovered and cancelled out. This invention, developed during the latest war, has aided greatly in the learning of foreign languages.

Antiques, Modern Mikes Interest 'Old Gentleman'

By HERB WOOD

An "ethical old gentleman with a keen interest in research" and running an antique jewellery shop in New York has made it possible for the University of Toronto to buy a microscope worth nearly 4,000 dollars, for a fraction of its cost.

This Universal Microscope, capable, among other things, of taking microscopic pictures with plain or polarized light which may be reflected from, or transmitted through the specimen. It is reputed to be unique in the world. There are less than half a dozen in North America.

Wife Is Boss

"Mr. Rosenberg in New York loves instruments and only sells what his wife won't let him keep," said Professor Solandt, head of the Dept. of Physiological Hygiene.

Besides taking micro photographs, the screen may be used as an observation window instead of the eye piece, to inspect specimens. A piece of tissue paper may be placed over the screen to trace the object. Again, through a simple adjustment, the image may be projected on a table beside the instrument. The stage or platform carrying the specimens is at the top of the instrument and will take objects up to eight inches square.

University Is Favourite

The microscope was built in Austria by the Reichert Co. and was brought by the publishers of Life and Time to New York for illustrating a special series of articles on botanical studies. The instrument fell into disuse when this project was dropped. Mr. Rosenberg obtained the microscope, and in spite of receiving better offers, held it until its purchase was okayed by the university.

Professor Solandt once had done Mr. Rosenberg a favour, and ever since he has been partial to the university. He makes it a point to acquire any instrument that would be suitable for the university.

In the Universal Microscope, light source, camera, and microscope are held in permanent alignment with respect to each other by a simple massive steel forging, thus eliminating fuzziness due to vibration.

Paris Residence Features Special National Designs

By MARY THOMPSON

Paris, Jan. 20—(Staff—The Cité Universitaire is the official students' residence of the University of Paris. It is located at the extreme south end of Paris in a spacious park, which was given by the city to the university. Some fifteen countries have built residences for their students who have come to Paris to study. Each house incorporates into its architecture something distinctly national of the country to which it belongs. The Indo-Chinese house resembles an Eastern Temple; the Argentine house is distinctive with its white stucco walls and red tile roof, whereas the Dutch and Swiss houses are the latest modern design.

Built in 1927, the Maison Canadienne was the first foreign residence in the Cité Universitaire. The money for its construction was donated by the late Senator Marcelin Wilson of Montreal. The government of Quebec contributes $5,000 annually toward the upkeep of the Maison. Unfortunately the other provinces do not contribute at all, even though the Maison welcomes students from all parts of Canada.

Not Distinctly Canadian

The architecture of the house is not exactly reminiscent of anything distinctly Canadian, although the decor of the salon is embellished by maple leaves on the curtains and lighting fixtures, and by the head of a Canadian moose. About eighty students can be accommodated in the building, among whom this year we are privileged to have Paul Wilson, the grand-nephew of the founder.

The centre of student activities in the Cité is the Maison Internationale. Like the International Houses in New York, Berkeley, and Chicago, this one was built by the Rockefeller Foundation. The larger building contains a swimming pool and gymnasiums for both men and women, a bowling alley and games rooms, lecture rooms and ballrooms, and a theatre which seats nine hundred. Another smaller building houses a post office, a hospital, and

The SAC Story

Mice Have Tender Feelings, Too

By JOAN EDDIS

(This is the fourth of a series of articles dealing with the Students' Administrative Council and its many activities.)

My, but those All-Varsity Revue chorines are energetic! A few weeks ago the kicking of a chorus line knocked down the plaster at the Zion Church on College St. That was bad enough but not all. Some of the Banting mice succumbed from shock after the calamity.

The whip cracker, business manager and stern budget keeper coordinating the All-Varsity Revue committee is Nipper Benson, Music's SAC rep. Nipper, if you remember, achieved notoriety in the Revue last year for her throaty, night club rendition of "La Belle Parisienne".

Over 150 Workers

The amount of work that goes into such a revue is tremendous. About 150 people are kept hopping by 14 committee heads in order to turn out a show that is original —not just a rehash of various campus productions. Nipper is busy enough just handling the executive end so that the jobs of writing and producing fall, to Irwin "Pastie" Pasternak (an artsman who refs basketball in his spare time) and Benny Wise, I Eng.

The Censor Committee, which met recently to approve the show, laughed uproariously but didn't touch a word . . . at least, only one word. In one scene a fond mama tells her daughter, "Now you go up to bed,—alone." The committee deleted "alone".

Bass Viols Awkward

The SAC Music committee under Joyce Rous, IV St. Hilda's, is just as active as the Revue Committee but along somewhat different lines. Under its direction prospers the University Symphony orchestra of about 80 players, who bring their own instruments. This has some disadvantages. For obvious reasons those playing the bass viol show up only one in four of the Sunday night rehearsals.

The orchestra is planning to give its second concert of the year about the end of February. The All-Varsity mixed chorus of about 120 voices (also a Music Committee project will combine with the orchestra to present an elaborate classical program in Convocation Hall.

MISS ROUS

Every afternoon at five, the Music Committee sponsors record hours in the new Mechanical Building which make use of the extensive Carnegie Record collection. Joyce hopes that additions will be made to the collection, particularly of Canadian composers and recordings, but this is impossible at present due to a very limited budget. For the present the only additions to campus music will be the new songbook being compiled for the SAC by Al Heisey, II Eng., Bill Marwick, III Music, and Susie Davidson, III UC.

Produce Weekly Program

The Radio Committee under Harris McPhail, II Inst. Man., also makes a "sound" contribution. Every Thursday they produce a half hour show over CJRT FM, the Ryerson Institute station. As there are only about 1200 FM sets in the Toronto district their audience is limited but the program can be picked up on television sets at 88.3 megacycles — the Rochester band.

The Radio Workshop, directed by the committee, gives instruction to over fifty enthusiasts on announcing, producing, and the technical side of radio.

Frats Strike Competition At UBC 'Letter' Dance

Vancouver, Feb. 2 — (CUP) — Something new has been added to UBC social life. The Annual Greek Letter Mardi Gras has competition. The Ball, which is patronized by all the fraternities on the campus has chosen a "South Pacific" theme for its floorshow.

But a "Plebeian Mardi Gras" has been announced by campus clubs. This ball will not be patronized by fraternities . . . instead the sponsoring parties are IRC, CIO, AFL, CCF Newman and UN Clubs.

The Ubyssey has seen fit to run pictures of the fraternity contenders for Queen of the Mardi Gras complete with all sorority labels. The contenders for "Queen of the Plebeian Mardi Gras" are all union photographed, and representatives of unions.

We'd Like To Know

We would like to know why the Board of Governors at this University refuses to permit the Directorate of the Athletic Association to make public its financial report.

We know that there is nothing in the University Act as passed by the Provincial legislature which suggests that the Governors should give this permission; neither is there anything which suggests that they should not. We also know that neither the Board of Governors nor the Athletic Directorate has anything to hide. We are convinced that the student gets far more for the money he spends on athletic fees here than students do at any other Canadian university.

Recently the SAC requested information from the Athletic Association regarding their finances and were told that the Athletic Directorate was willing to give it, but that the Board of Governors said "No." The same thing happened two of three years ago. Why should this be?

The purpose of the Athletic Association is to benefit students by providing facilities, such as the stadium, the arena, playing fields, and equipment, and by organizing a comprehensive sports program. The Athletic Directorate is the administrative body of the Association. It has done a good job.

The Athletic Association is financially independent of the University, except that inasmuch as it is a university organization its financial policy must be approved by the Board of Governors.

Most of the Association's revenue comes directly from students via athletic fees and admission fees to games, athletic nights and similar activities. Money also comes into the Association from the judicious rental of the arena and the stadium, which were built primarily for the benefit of students. Most of the total revenue is spent annually on athletic activities in which students participate. Surpluses go into a trust fund which is controlled by the Board of Governors and is used only for Athletic Association expenditures. It is not used to finance other university activities. It goes for building additional physical plant requirements for athletics.

Students in this university, acting through their duly constituted body, the SAC, which exists with the approval of the Board of Governors and the Caput, have asked for information. This information concerns them, and it is within the power of the Board of Governors to give them access to it.

We suggest that the Board of Governors reconsider its decision. We do not think that a change in policy on this point would establish a dangerous precedent.

Our Readers Write

Doubts Our Word?

Editor, The Varsity:

I should like to point out an anachronism in the feature column Mid-Century Highlights in The Varsity, Thursday. It discribes the "stellar event of the University social season of 1903", the unveiling of the Memorial bird-bath.

Your columnist states: "The sole mishap of the afternoon occurred when Mrs. Hortense Avoirdupois sprang a stay and catapulted three junior members over Soldier's Tower."

If your writer has been near the Tower in the last thirty-one years, two months, three weeks and two days, he may have seen the corner stone, upon which is written,

"This stone was laid by His Excellency the Duke of Devonshire, K.G., Governor-General of the Dominion of Canada on the XI day of November—Anno Domini, MDCCCCXLX (1919)".

Perhaps the SAC should buy a history of the University of Toronto for The Varsity.

Patrick J. Byrne,
St. Mike's, I.

Ed. Note: Reader Byrne is absolutely right. It was Mrs. Cornelius Clappsaddle III, who sprang the stay.

Right? Wrong?

Editor, The Varsity:

To continue with what is right, and wrong, with publications at the University and to settle the matter of our duel, which will not take place since neither can find seconds willing to undergo the torture of The Varsity being read aloud, until one of the principals runs screaming from the room. The reasons I feel Tolkie Olke might well be discontinued is that it duplicates with wasteful expense that which can be well handled by The Varsity.

The Varsity is unfortunately not doing the job that it could in this respect. There is a rather disgusting lack of the broad general covering of all the campus news which a campus paper owes its public. About four or five minority clubs supply 90% of the bilge we find in Varsity's columns and Ivan Aron supplies the rest. With all due respect for the religious beliefs of others, I would gladly believe that over 50% of the students are devout Baha'is. I note that many of the people working on The Varsity seem to consider it merely a school of journalism and forget they have a duty to the rest of the campus, which is sadly neglected.

Pik Replies

Editor, The Varsity:

A letter to the editor must be short. Even when replying to a full column editorial, it must be short!

The editors have taken a full column to say two things which might better be said over the phone: (1) that they aren't biased; (2) that they don't like the "formula of liberal mention of prominent college types," in college columns such as Vic's Corner.

As to point No. 1, they claim they have no bias due to college or society affiliation. The statement was made in a purely objective way, and in its essence, is true to some extent. The editors later admit this, in a round about way, but suggest that such a statement was not made in the light of pure objectivity.

The editors suggest that some dissatisfied publicity director has begun to "beef" in public. The editors could not be farther from the truth! Relationships between Vic and The Varsity have been most satisfactory. We are happy with the news coverage.

The editors observe with obvious scorn the "news content" of the Corner. Let them consider these facts: (1) three colleges and faculties are each paying approximately $200 a year to get a bit of "college color," to keep the ordinary student in the individual college up on college activities (which are usually of interest to him). (2) History indicates that student executives in past years have felt the need of such columns. (3) Of the 13,350 readers of The Varsity, one might very conservatively estimate that 80% are "college types." They like to read about the other college members just as much as they like to read the "wonderful stories" about the SAC and Varsity staff. (4) That since the University of Toronto is made up of separate colleges and faculties, perhaps its official newspaper might cater more to the colleges.

But don't misunderstand me. I have not said that students in the colleges want college color in their paper. Facts merely indicate that this may be so.

Vic's Corner has already asked Vic students to make their comments on the merits of a "college column." Perhaps they will want it; perhaps they won't. Only they, the student body, can say. What I should ask of The Varsity is this: to assist in conducting a poll of Varsity readers to see if they do want some college color in their newspaper.

Now if the majority say they do, then we may run into a little trouble of college bias until the editors have formulated a workable policy which will cater to some of the needs of each college. If they say they do want it, then it should be the job of The Varsity to allot the space. The colleges should not have to purchase space to give themselves material which their own illustrious editors frown on as being unnewsworthy.

But right now, let's find out if they want it!

Pik.

Congratulations, Yet!

Editor, The Varsity:

We would like to offer congratulations to writer Bruce Underhill for his excellent letter on the current AM and D controversy published in yesterday's Varsity. We know that his sentiments is representative of a large part of the student body, and it is therefore time that this department of the paper returned to its high artistic principles of last term.

We made the mistake of haranguing the AM and D Editor about the editorial note at the end of Mr. Underhill's letter, but were informed that he had not inserted it. Does this mean that the Editor-in-Chief is responsible? For the benefit of fellow readers this note reads as follows:

"Reader Underhill may take heart from the fact that his cancellation of any subscription could cut us no more deeply than did his 'blast' above."

Does the Editor intend us to believe that he is satisfied with the current insipidity and inanity of the AM and D column? If so, he insults the intelligence of the most moronic student in the University.

Jim Morrison, Vic. II
E. Beecher Menzies, Vic. III

Ed. Note: (1) Yes, the editor-in-chief is responsible. (2) No, he is not satisfied.

Study A Must But Play Too Says Myers

"There is simply no known substitute for effort, and no form of magic can take its place", said Dr. C. R. Myers, Professor of Psychology speaking at the Mental Health Discussion Group on the "Approach to Examinations," last night.

With the proper approach to examinations, he continued, a given amount of effort, great or small, can be expended in a way to produce the most results.

Start Now

Preparation for exams should start early, in February or March if possible. This takes the form of having a place to study, with a desk and hard chair, and a plan indicating when certain subjects will be studied. It is also necessary that a student be able to read at least 350 words a minute.

The actual studying, Dr. Myers pointed out, should be done in 40 or 50 minute periods with a break of 2 to 5 minutes in between. It is important for students to maintain their normal routine in habits of sleeping and eating so that maximum efficiency during study periods can be reached.

Some Work, Some Play

Emotional control is necessary the speaker claimed, if the time spent on study is to be valuable. This mean that there must be time allotted to play and a change of scenery and atmosphere. Dr. Myers suggested that students insulate themselves deliberately against unnecessary emotion.

Review of work must not only be early to be effective, but must also be active, the speaker said. That is, students must write and make note of what they read.

Avoid the hazards of last minute conferences before examinations, the speaker warned. They only lead to confusion which decreases confidence, and increases tensions.

"Remember the poor examiner, that he is a human being and a person capable of wrath, likes and dislikes, irritations and annoyances," Dr. Myers said.

Display Designs In Prints Room At Art Gallery

Results of a nation-wide contest to stimulate interest among art students in the rapidly-expanding field of display design, will be presented for public inspection in an exhibition at the Art Gallery of Toronto, opening today, and running to February 19. Sponsored by the Canadian Association of Display Designers and Builders, the Exhibition is to be held in the Print Room, above the main entrance to the Gallery.

At the grand opening to be held on Feb. 6, at 4.30 p.m., the judges, Carl R. Mangold, prominent Swiss industrial designer practising in Montreal, Vincent DeVite, Toronto painter and designer, and Douglas Cooper of Imperial Oil Ltd., chairman of the Exhibition Committee of the Ass'n. of Canadian Advertisers, and C. M. Charters, president, Can. Ass'n. of Display Designers and Builders, will announce the winners.

Executives of the Canadian National Exhibition, Trade Fair, and Winter Fair will view the students' work.

Hunt Armour, Lily Ponds To Decorate Arts Ball

Have you ever chased a suit of armour (with nobody in it) around Toronto for three days?

You haven't? Well, we know somebody who has, and the F.B.I. should know about it. John Ruch, II Art and Archaeology, and decorator for the U.C. Arts Ball, spent from Monday to Wednesday of this week trying to borrow a suit of armour for the medieval motif of the ball. In his spare time, he also chased up a "lily pond' for the U.C. rotunda.

But about that suit of armour. First he visited the Royal Ontario Museum, the natural place, it seemed. No, they were sorry. Too fragile for a university dance (whatever that means).

On To Mallabar's

Next on the list was Mallabar's Costume Rental. Ruch tried on a suit. With a bruised knee, a cut on the neck and the realization that Mallabar's suits cost more than the budget could afford, he staggered on to the Royal Alec.

"Sorry", the manager said, "medieval operas all this week." They were really very nice about it, Ruch said. It gave him a great lift.

Stainton and Evis, office supplies, the next lead advised that they had a suit two years ago, but it now belonged to a fellow named Peckover. Peckover was traced and said he would lend the suit, on display at the Ryan Art Gallery, if a sale could be guaranteed.

Throwing caution and the request for a guarantee to the winds, Ruch dashed to the Ryan abode. He arrived half an hour after the suit had been sold. It was a near mortal blow.

Hound-dog Diligence

But Ruch was undaunted. With the diligence of a hound-dog, he pressed onward to the antique shops on Yonge Street. All he could find were china, books and furniture.

Back in his room at 73 St. George Street, he bemoaned his predicament to Tony Brown, III Orientals. "Why don't you phone Stoodleigh's Restaurant on King Street," Brown advised. A quick call revealed that Stoodleigh's had a suit of armour and would be glad to loan it.

"I'll have to talk to Brown more often", Ruch groaned as he collapsed in the phone booth.

Search for Fountain

The story of the committee's search for a water fountain for the rotunda is another story Ruch related. Visits to monument and plumbing companies and the big department stores produced one lead, a 1,000 marble job at Connolly Marble Co. They'd loan it, all right, until they found a large crack in the bottom and decided it shouldn't be moved.

In its place will be six foot metal "flower pond", property of Professor John Satterly of the Physics Department. (Now we know where he gets all those goldfish he shatters in his liquid air experiments).

"The Dale Estate has given us 200 daffodils and 200 tulips which will adorn the flower pond," Ruch said.

Charitable Gift Act Arouses Dissension At Liberal Forum

Liberal Club members Bob Smylie, I Law, and Keith Davey, I Law, met head-on in debate yesterday over the principles of the Ontario Charitable Gifts Act, during a discussion in Room 5 UC, of whether or not the Club will ask abolition of the Act when they attend the Ontario Liberal Party Convention in May.

Defends Act

Smylie defended the whole principle of the Act and declared its famed "retroactive clause" is not retroactive at all.

Davey replied that the whole Act is harmful, and added, "I don't see how anyone could read the Act and not believe it is retroactive."

Smylie said the Act is necessary, because rich families have learned to avoid succession duties and taxes that prevent concentrations of too much wealth. Such families simply set up charitable trust foundations to own and administer their family business interests. The families kept control by putting themselves in the boards of trustees that controlled the trusts.

Ontario As Model

He said the United States national and state governments have noticed this, and plan to pass legislation similar to the Ontario act. "We should be proud that Ontario is the first to take action," he added.

Regarding the "allegedly retroactive" nature of the Act, Smylie commented that the Act is analogous to one requiring steamships to have a certain number of lifeboats. Some ships would not have room for enough lifeboats and would have to be done away with. If the Charitable Gifts Act was retroactive, so was the lifeboats Act.

He said a true example of retroactive legislation would result if the Act abolishing Canadian appeals to the Privy Council contained a clause making void previous decisions of the Privy Council.

Davey retorted that the Act is retroactive, since it changes a man's will after he is dead.

He said the whole act is wrong because it harms charities, was not mentioned in the Conservative Government's election platform nor in its Speech from the Throne, and is meant to destroy "the voice of the Government's political opposition"—(The Toronto Daily Star).

"Air Transport" International Law In RCI Address

Air Vice-Marshal Alan Ferrier will address the Royal Canadian Institute on "Air Transport" at 8:15 p.m. this Saturday in Convocation Hall.

The Air Vice-Marshal will trace the development of aviation in parallel with Shakespeare's Seven Ages of Man up to the fourth age. He will then discuss civil air transport and the development of domestic and international air law and will speculate about the implications flowing from the concept of ownership of the airspace.

The lecturer believes that the justification for the economic function of air transport lies in the fact that it is an essential element of national strength in both peace and war. He will point out in his lecture that technical progress is now beyond the stage of proving that air transport is economically feasible and is now struggling towards the goal of making it commercially profitable.

The most formidable barrier, he believes, to the exploitation of the vast potential short and medium haul markets is the time delay and inconvenience associated with the surface stage of air travel from the seat in the home or office to the seat in the aeroplane and thence again to the seat in the hotel.

Air Vice-Marshal Ferrier is with the Air Navigation Bureau, International Civil Aviation Organization, in Montreal. He was educated at Berkhampstead School and McGill University. He served with the Royal Engineers in the First World War and later joined the Royal Canadian Air Force being appointed Air Vice-Marshal in 1942. From 1942 to 1944 he was a member of the Air Council of Canada for Aeronautical Engineers. He has recently joined the International Civil Aviation Organization in Montreal.

The lecture will be illustrated with motion pictures and is open to the public.

Powerful Synchroton Opened At Queen's

Kingston, Feb. 3 — (CUP) — The 70,000,000 volt synchroton, the most powerful machine of its kind in Canada, was officially opened yesterday at Queen's University. Generating rays 2,000 times more powerful than X-rays and 35 times more powerful than those used in any form of medical treatment, the synchroton is capable of turning energy into matter.

M & P Lassies

Prefer Maths To Men

BY LENORE KERT

Ask the girls in first year Maths and Physics about their course, and they will tell you that they made a mistake in ever entering it. Ask the girls in fourth year about the course, and the result will be a dead silence. The silence will be a "dead" one, not because intellectual pursuits have killed these coeds, but simply because there are no females in their graduating year at present. Perhaps this situation will be remedied by the two girls who are now in their third year.

Since some of the freshies in the course do not seem overly-pleased with their choice, one wonders why they made that decision in the first place.

Why Didn't They Enter?

"Mathematics intrigued me", said Joan Woodbury, I M. and P., and it was natural for her to follow this bent. The study of these subjects during their final years in high school and the interest in these fields that was awakened then seems to have been the motivating factors in the case of most of the girls.

It may be a woman's privilege to change her mind, but boys have been known to take advantage of this right too. That explains the fact that approximately 20 of the 80 students in first year last September have left to take such a cinch (?) course as Honour Science. Pass Arts has also claimed a share of them.

Darkest Before Dawn

The girls who are still in the course work along with their fellow future-mathematicians and physicists, doing their best to grasp at least a particle of what the professor is saying. Sometimes it is almost like a game — the first one to understand what the lecturer is discussing, wins. At present there are just a few winners, but there are plenty of bewildered students. The intricacies of the course do finally get cleared up and so the phrase "It's always darkest before the dawn" (or some such other trite remark) should reassure all those who are confused.

Most of the girls have not spent much time wondering what they will do after graduation—at present the main thing is endeavoring to make that graduation a reality. The number of failures is relatively high, and keeping oneself out of this category is a fulltime occupation. Most of those who have made plans for the future are aiming towards a research job, or intended to teach.

Severe Weeding-Out

In certain arts courses, it is pretty well up to you regarding the time and effort put into your work. Maths and Physics goes one step further — unless you do an adequate amount of work (and that means a goodly amount) you just do not pass. This rather severe weeding-out process is an assurance that all those who do graduate will be of top quality — and in this atomic age one certainly hopes that our scientists are the finest available.

The above paragraph sounds rather like a speech, but what I am trying to say is this—The main reasons for taking the course should be that you are willing to work hard and are genuinely interested in mathematics, or that you too agree with the coed who would much prefer to settle down with a geometry problem than a man any day!

Art - Music - Drama

CBC Wednesday Night

This week's broadcast of the CBC Wednesday Night featured more-or-less contemporary works whose merits were for the most part not fully realized by the performances.

In a thoughtful, scholarly manner English critic Giles Romilly outlined D. H. Lawrence's life and how his writing was affected: his fierce rejection of his father, his disillusionment after the Great War, and the resulting "struggle for identity" which pervaded his whole literary career.

Mavor Moore read several poems, among them The Bride, On the Balcony, Snakes, When Wilt Thou Teach the People? and Ship of Death. Illustrating the poet's feelings concerning himself and modern civilization from social, political, and metaphysical points of view, they dovetailed with the preceding commentary. However, Mr. Moore's metallic voice lessened the emotional impact of the poems.

Kurt Weill's American folk opera Down In the Valley, which was first performed in this country by the UC Music Club last year, had its Canadian radio debut under the able conducting of Eric Wild. Chief fault is in the composition itself, a tragedy in both senses of the word. The libretto and especially the musical score seem to be neither truly "folksy" nor more seriously artistic, but rather an artificial in-between.

Tour de force of the evening was Tommy Tweed's hour-long dramatization of Stephen Leacock's The Speculations of Jefferson Thorpe. Continuity was maintained by the narrator, who explained barber Thorpe's rise and fall as a stock tycoon to an insipid friend. It did not sound like Leacock. This, along with protracting a story which to begin with is slow-paced, submerged a great deal of the quaint humour. Nevertheless, most of the actors were able to rise above the script to humorous heights as memorable Mariposa "characters."

Toronto Symphony Orchestra

I was pleasantly surprised by the excellent performance by the Toronto Symphony, Wednesday night. Sir Ernest had perfect control of the orchestra, and they, in turn, appeared to be trying harder than usual.

One of the greatest works by any modern composer is the Concerto for Orchestra by Bela Bartok. It is not pretty music, nor is it pleasant or full of lyric beauty. It is brutal and true, the truth mirrored through a critical mind which did not see the world in rosy hues. A paradox is implied by the title, but what Bartok demonstrates is a concerto-like structure using single or groups of instruments in the solo part.

The first movement opens with a gentle string passage onto which the brass choir leaps with the bold statement of the theme; rather sloppy brass Wednesday night. There is fugal development and a series of false climaxes which build up a kind of tense expectancy.

An off-rhythm melody, nostalgic, yet happy, introduces the second movement. Both string and woodwind sections were very precise in this movement capturing all the nuances and keeping the rhythm definite.

The third movement is a surrender, a rejection of life and a welcoming of death. The transition to the waltz of the fourth movement is accompanied by a harp duet and an accelerando to a dance theme. Finally in the last movement the mood changes and there is a surge of hope. The harmonics simplify, become more brilliant and dramatic. This is Bartoks' "life-assertion." The sudden finale almost says that with the recovering of faith in life the composer need say no more.

The program-opener, the Academic Festival Overture—Brahms was the best performance of the evening, with tempo, cues and intonation just right. However, in the finale some of the phrases were squashed by the strings and brass.

A rather dreary Serenade for Strings by the English composer Lennox Berkely received its first Toronto performance. It is amorphous and remarkably lacking in vivid dynamics. In some ways it reminds one of a movie soundtrack.

Haydn's Symphony No. 103 in E flat "With the Drum Roll" is most remarkable in the use of this drum roll. It belongs to that period when music had no message to thunder, and is gay, then stately, all with the utmost serenity. The tympanist and flautist deserve praise for their roles especially in the last movement.

Altogther an excellent concert with brilliant orchestra and brilliant conducting.

Healey Willan

Dr. Willan gave his third of four organ recitals in Convocation Hall, Monday at five. Few people attended but there were more there than have been for several years. At these rcitals one can be fairly certain of getting something other than the "same old stuff" for a programme.

Dr. Willan plays new each time from the nineteenth century school of English organ music. The piece in this case was a Finale Jubilante by John E. West. It opens with a dignified subject of joyous theme. The piece is brought to an uplifting conclusion with a statement of the opening theme in the pedals followed by a burst of sound from the full organ.

Two preludes by Karg-Elert produced some moments of tranquil beauty. The first, God of the Heavens and the Earth is in the form of a pastorale and maintained throughout a movement of melody and accompaniment. The second, How brightly shines yon morning star is a beautiful piece of pastel tone colour with the chorale melody heard accompanied by a gently swaying figure of thirds and sixths.

The opening number, Preluge and Fugue in C minor by J. S. Bach without any great display of virtuosity achieves a deal of depth and colour. The fugue begins with a very quiet subject and works its way very gradually toward the fortissimo conclusion which is all the more effective for being held in check until close to the end of the work.

An Adagio in E by Gustave Merkle proved to be full of melody and grace. At the centre of the programme was the Sonata in A minor by Borowski. While not containing any great depth of expression it proved very "interesting" and "entertaining". It contained a good deal of lyrical melody and tonal passages of some beauty with a vigorous chordal opening. The last movement proved lively and rhythmical.

Wednesday Five O'Clock

The Canadian Artists Trio presented the third of the Wednesday series of five-o'clock chamber concerts this week at the Royal Conservatory Concert Hall. Samuel Hersenhorn, violinist, Cornelius Ysselyn, 'cellist and Leo Barkin, pianist, fused their musical forces in a thrilling performance of works by Mendelssohn and Shostakovitch.

Indications on the score to the Mendelssohn D minor Trio called for the individual movements to be played "agitato," "tranquillo," "leggiero," "appassionato". The Canadian Artists seemed reluctant to leave the agitated mood of the first movement, but pushed through the remaining sections with no let up in emotional intensity. As a result, those qualities which I associate with tranquillity or lightness were absent in the second and third movements. I would have appreciated a greater variety of moods with less emotional excess.

The E minor Trio of Shostakovitch proved not too startlingly experimental. Interesting enough in its exploitation of technical effects (combinations of harmonic and muted string tones, and the chaconne-like treatment of the Largo movement, for instance) the purely musical ideas seemed stifled. Shostakovitch seems reluctant to take a deep breath since the state has "taken a paternal interest" in his development. The rustic air of the Khatchaturianesque final movement and the antique modes employed throughout the work would seem to suggest that not only the critic but also the composer are forced to adopt "chatty, familiar, down-to-earth" means of securing audience (synonymous with state) support.

The artists demonstrated a remarkable balance between ensemble subordination and solo personality with the result of rewarding the all-too-sparse audience with a musically satisfying hour. The next concert, on February 15, will feature Andre de Ribaupierre, violinist and Boris Roubakine, pianist.

The Pillow Case

In answer to the many sparked remarks shot through the pages of this week's Varsitys concerning the quality and purpose of the Art, Music and Drama reviews, I suggest our purpose to be this:

(1) To represent accurately the nature and character of an event;
(2) To attempt a provocative, vivid analysis of the event, and
(3) From that analysis to make a judgment of the event as art.

I believe there can be as many kinds of criticism as there are kinds of art. "Criticism," says Thomas Carlyle, "stands like an interpreter between the inspired and the uninspired, between the prophet and those who hear the melody of his words, and catch some glimpse of their material meaning, but understand not their deeper import."

Every critical treatise from Bradley's Shakespearean Tragedy to Frye's Fearful Symmetry is a searching autobiography, however objective it may be in theme. The critic performs a clinic upon himself every time he takes his pen in hand. To ask the critic to keep himself out of his criticism, to detach himself, his emotions, reactions and ideals is like asking an actor to keep himself out of his role.

Science and Engineering

By JOE HARRISON

This is the second and last in a series of articles on the electronic calculator and its relationship to human behaviour.—J. H.

By Ivan Aron

The human brain stores information in much the same manner as does an electronic calculator and turns the information into action in a manner analogous to the operation of various thinking machines. It is natural to ask whether we can trace "diseases" in thinking machines analogous to various mental complaints. The answer is definitely yes. True only a few examples exist at present, but cybernetics, the "science of control and communication in the animal and the machine", as Norbert Wiener calls it is still in its infancy. When psychologists and neurologists get around to admitting that theoretical mathematicians and physicists can tell a thing or two about the brain, an idea they still vigorously deny, we can expect remarkable advances.

Open Cycle System

Let's get down to a few concrete examples. Consider a large heavy gun which must be aimed in accordance with decisions reached by a calculator, the decisions being predictions of the position of an aircraft seen by radar. The logical thing to do is take the decision, which comes in the form of an electrical current, amplify this current and make it run a motor in the gun mount. This is called an open cycle system.

But wait a minute. The gun is heavy. There is friction in the bearings. The motor may not move it as far as it ought to go. The thing to do is to set in a detector which measures the position of the gun, compares it with the position the calculator says it should have, and use the difference—the "error signal" — to operate the motor. This is now a closed cycle and it is always trying to reduce the error signal to zero. We have a closed cycle in the body's actions. In reaching for an object your eyes tell us how far the object is from your hands. This is the error signal which your brain translates into commands to your arm and hand muscles — and so another forkful of spaghetti starts on its way to your mouth.

The Error Signal

Now suppose, in the case of the gun, some momentary disturbance sends a "false" signal into the loop. The gun swings to cover this disturbance. If the motor is fast enough, it swings past its proper position. The detector reports this, and an error signal starts out to make the gun swing back. If the circuit has not been properly designed, the gun will overshoot, come back overshooting still more, and will oscillate more and more violently. It may cause considerable damage if not stopped.

Put someone suffering from purpose tremor in front of the plate of spaghetti and see what happens. The purpose tremor patient has some damage in his cerebellum, the part of the brain that controls the proportion of muscle response to error signal. His hand goes into the same type of oscillation that afflicted the gun mechanism and the spaghetti ends up in a beautiful mess all over the place.

Tabes Dorsalis

Another disease which is explained by cybernetics is Tabes Dorsalis. In this affliction, the patient can walk only when ordered to do so and then he can walk only when he watches his feet. The part of the spinal cord which carries the error signal from the legs has been destroyed by syphilis. He must now rely on his eyes and balance sense to control his walking motions.

Professor Wiener has made studies of purpose tremor on the basis of his cybernetics theories and has had notable success in predicting the amount and speed of oscillation in terms of the muscular tension. A very thorough exposition of all branches of the subject, including what information is, how the mind and thinking handle it, and any other interesting points is to be found in Wiener's Cybernetics (John Wiley & Sons). It is the standard, in fact almost the only, reference work on the subject. Much can be learned even without reading the mathematical sections and I recommend it strongly to the aspiring neurologist, psychologist and physiologist, as well as to anyone who would like to know more about that astounding little 2-4 watt control device located inside the human skull.

New Light Source

No preparations are necessary when changing over from visual work to photography as the specimen may be observed while its picture is being taken. This is a unique but essential feature when observing living cells.

A new light source, the Zirconium Arc, is being installed in the instrument. This is basically a fixed arc lamp housed in an argon filled glass bulb, and gives the brightest and smallest point of light known to science.

It is produced by Western Union Telegraph (Electronics Division). The concentrated arc lamp was developed during the war and only recently been released for research purposes.

Meals and Theatre Cheap

Every week a film or play is given in the theatre, when the admission price is 50 francs, about 15 cents, and there are also many worthwhile free lectures. A sick student may be cared for in the hospital for about 30 francs per day. In the restaurant of the International House, a student may obtain a substantial and filling, if not appetizing, meal for the equivalent of about 20 cents.

During the war the Germans used the Cité Universitaire for their headquarters in Paris. The Maison Canadienne was occupied by German officers who, when they left, took with them all the paintings, rugs, books, and most of the furniture.

Quick transportation to the Sorbonne and the University is provided by the Paris Metro. The train makes the trip from the Cité to the Quartier Latin in less than ten minutes.

Money Always A Problem

Money, or rather the lack of it, has always been a problem with students. Many students here have to subsist on their French Government scholarship of 12,000 francs a month — less than $40.

Each student pays from $9 to $12 a month for his room, depending on whether he has a room of his own or shares one! In a more luxurious pavilion, the rent is $15 a month. The living and recreational facilities of the Cité enable a student to live more comfortably and cheaply than would be possible anywhere else in Paris.

Sites Announced For ISS Seminar

The three University towns of Dijon, Besancon and Pontivy, near Paris are alternative sites for the 1950 ISS Summer Seminar, Bill McDougal, chairman of ISS, told a group of interested students at the Women's Union Tuesday afternoon.

The five-week seminar will bring together fifty Canadian students with seventy Europeans from Finland to Italy from July 10 to August 12 to study and live together. Such topics as the rise of American philosophies and their effect on Europe, whether a United States of Europe is possible and Europe's dependence on American aid, will bring out different aspects, McDougal stated.

The future political orientation of Europe; free enterprise, socialist or communist will occupy the last week. An outstanding staff of European and Canadian lecturers is being arranged.

Selection of six Toronto students for scholarships will take place in the near future. The details for application will be announced later.

Giant George Wearring, of Western fame, recently set a London basketball scoring record when he threw in 34 points to pace the Mustangs in their 69-42 trampling of the McGill Redmen.

Critics and actors are much alike, and best serve their roles when they filter them through their own personalities. In this respect the reviewer's is a subjective art. A critic told to keep his personality out of his critique is like the actor who with a Hamlet physique and temperament is directed to stick a pillow under his belt, lifts under his heels, acquire a whisky voice and play Falstaff in Henry IV.

Movie Review

Germany, Year Zero

Roberto Rossellini's latest arrives tomorrow at the Towne for a limited run, probably, as the theme is important and the tragic story unrelenting, while Jolson sings in Technicolour just down the street. But the movie, written by Rossellini himself, is more tightly constructed than either "Open City" or "Paisan", retaining their punch without their patchiness.

The story illustrates "the spiritual and physical aspects of a defeated city — in the early days of the occupation — people with nothing of past hope or ideals left with which to start life in the new era." Rossellini's intensely personal camera moves into a ruin with two middle-class Nazi families and shows the disintegration of customary manners and morals in their desperate struggle for existence.

This is seen through the eyes of a 12-year-old child who, living with an invalid father, a resigned older sister and a last-ditch Nazi soldier brother afraid to identify himself and thus minus job and ration book), bewilderedly tries to help out, becoming involved with a die-hard Nazi propagandist and a band of young vandals, unwittingly perpetrating a dreadful crime and finally, tormented and alone, brought to realization with grim results.

In the last couple of years a number of small boys have gone through harrowing experiences in such pictures as "The Search", "The Fallen Idol", "The Window", and "Oliver Twist". Edmund Meschke, in front of the camera most of the time, betrays fewer signs of direction while performing just as well as his predecessors. The rest of the non-professional cast are also excellent.

Photography, done with a loaned army camera, is foggy in places. English titles are prolific, although the German is fairly easy to understand. Renzo Rossellinis omnipresent score, throbbing and eddying without distracting, no doubt helped this picture take top honours at the Locarno Film Festival

Report On China Feature At IRC Tuesday Meeting

The International Relations Club will hear Don Sutherland, III Trinity, speak on the topic, "Behind The Bamboo Curtain" at their four o'clock meeting next Tuesday afternoon in the Women's Union. Don arrived in Toronto from China last summer after two years at the University of Peking.

Sutherland has many experiences to tell of the life of all classes in China today. He was in Peking during the seige and stayed for five months under Communist rule. He left China finally to continue his studies in Chinese culture here.

In his talk Sutherland will concentrate on Chinese problems and foreign policy. He will also try to outline China's place in the world, particularly with regard to the West.

Later in the month the High Commissioners of Australia, New Zealand, and India will address the club.

Speaking Of Sport

By BOB DNIEPER

Ed. Note: This is the third and final column by Mr. Dnieper on Athletic scholarships.

All three schools in the CIAU league are in the market for players, offering both money and special services. Varsity, on the other hand, is still totally amateur. Which brings us down to the argument: It is a sure thing that Varsity's amateurs will not be able to win games against pro's; so what can Varsity do about it? We can subsidize our own boys and compete in the open market; we can stay amateur and take a licking year after year in football and basketball; or we can follow the University of Chicago and drop football.

The parallel with Chicago is unmistakable: the rest of the league has started importation; Varsity Governors refuse to allow even a smudge of recruiting; and Varsity has already started losing games they should have won; there is no relief in sight in the form of the other colleges stopping there practices. What will Varsity do?

The idea immediately springs to mind of why not crack down on Western and Queen's? Even if these charges could be absolutely proven to the CIAU (of which Western has their share of votes), what could they do? They could tell Metras to stop it, and Metras would thumb his nose at the CIAU and keep right on winning games with paid players.

So that leaves the decision up to the U. of T. If we subsidize the boys, we will open the door to vicious practices and prostitution of principles; we will make football a commercial enterprise with no sentimental significance; and we will do no one any good, least of all the athletes. It is true that many boys are too poor to go to college in any way except by athletic scholarships, but if Varsity enters competition, this competition will be harmful on the players, especially if prices get a little high.

Should we stay amateur, Varsity will get beaten every time; it has already started. Varsity's '48 winning team ended up on the bottom in '49. People will not come to see a losing club, as witness the empty seats at the Chicago-Harvard game; so Varsity will lose their stadium through mortgage, or take a heavy beating in interest and capital payments taken out of other sources.

Withdrawing from the league is also no good; the students and followers are deprived of a traditional student activity. And too many circumstances would arise to shatter traditional routine.

There is only one way out. And that is following the adage of "An eye for an eye, and a tooth for a tooth." If Western hires four players at a salary of room and board one year, the next year Varsity should hire four players of a better quality at a slightly higher price. If Western ups the ante and intensifies their search, Varsity should do the same, but up it a little more. Pretty soon Metras would get the idea and come to terms. A truce whereby a consistently losing team could be allowed to purchase some players to even up the league without retaliation would be both acceptable and beneficial to all. Varsity carries enough weight and money around to be able to do this; and there is only one thing that Western and Queen's are afraid of—and that is a decision by Varsity to fight fire with fire. We, for one, are sick and tired of Western and Queen's getting away with murder because of Varsity's honest and generous attitude. It's about time the University of Toronto got out of the ivory tower and stopped having their toes trampled on!

Badminton? Why sure! Elizabeth Russell, club president, has announced that this year's tournament will be held at Strathgowan, on Tuesday and Wednesday, February 14th and 15th. It's an open tournament, so that each and every girl who sports a yen to compete will be welcomed.

Things are slated to get under way at 9.00 a.m., and although the contest runs through until 12.00 each day, it is important to be on hand punctually at 9.00.

The tournament will be run off by the elimination method as was the tennis in the fall, and like tennis, not only does the winning player gain points for herself, but also for her college or faculty. A cup is presented to the winning faculty at their annual banquet. Last year Elizabeth Russell accepted the cup for PHE.

Anyone hoping to place on the intercollegiate team should be sure to turn out to this tournament as the choice for the all-Varsity squad will be based on the results at Strathgowan. The intercollegiate meet will see two singles and a double entry from Varsity, Queen's, McGill, Western and McMaster all out to bring home the title. These teams are scheduled to play on February 24th and 25th at Queen's, with Western the defending champions

Manly Art And Water Sports To Constitute Main Features Of Athletic Nite Sportsfest

Pick your favorite indoor sport and chances are that you will find it on the roster of this Saturday's Athletic Nite tourney of sports at Hart House. There are boxing, wrestling, swimming, squash, movies and of course, dancing. OAC will provide the opposition for the punch-pushers and pachyderms in the feature attraction which promises to be an entertaining as well as bruising evening.

The poolroom display will consist of a water polo exhibition between the pick of the plungers from St. Mike's and University College and the Senior Interfaculty Swimming meet. The interfac swimmers will compete for two trophies, the Fitzgerald trophy for team championships and the McCatty trophy for the winner of the breast stroke competition. Among the more highly rated performers to be seen will be Doug Gibson of last year's Canadian Olympic team. Doug is the holder of the intercollegiate 440 record which he has cracked on various occasions.

Another of the sports specialists to display his wares will be Vic Jensen of OAC who is the Canadian amateur 175 lb. champion. Vic was picked to try out for the Canadian Olympic team also and he will match holds with UC's Hugh Graham last year's intercollegiate runnerup in that class.

The wrestlers' enthusiasm and interest has resulted in ten short exhibition bouts to supplement the card. In the big bout in this demonstration another 175 pound match will be presented to determine a representative for the class to perform with the intercollegiate team in the forthcoming tourney at Guelph on February 24 and 25. The contestants are Leo Smith, SPS and Gerry Sutherland, PHE, a former intermediate footballer.

Nick Betz, publicity agent and 125 pound class battler with the Varsity boxers, informs us that this will be your last chance to see the local fistic performers in action before the intercollegiate tourney. They will face OAC in the second double dual meet which will be presented with some exhibition bouts among the locals in the upper gym.

Those fighting in the tourney proper will be Glen Williams at 133 lbs., Frank Corner, 140; Bob Cocciero, the Cuban Cyclone at 147, the same weight at which Dick Priestman will fight. Other participants will be Pete Petcoff, Jim Folinsbee and Don Armstrong. Armstrong who won by a K.O. at Guelph last week may go unchallenged.

Representatives from Royal Military College will be present to display their talents on the squash courts against Varsity's best. McGill competed in this event last year and the crowd appeal excelled all expectations.

Blues At Queen's Rams At Varsity For Hockey Tilts

Saturday afternoon, the Blues are off to Queen's to try to duplicate their successes against the Gaels a week ago Friday, when they beat them here 7-0. If they keep up the pace they have in practices lately, especially a new-found shooting accuracy that has been amazing the railbirds, they shouldn't have too much trouble. If by some stroke of fate (or else a few good strokes by such persons as Rocky Robillard, Bob Marshall, etc.) McGill should beat Montreal the same night, Varsity will regain their tie for first place.

After last Saturday's 6 to 2 loss to Carabins by the Blues, which Wally Halder and most of the players thought closer than the score indicates, there has been a slight change in the third line. Bob Bazos has been moved to center (Big Bob has played almost every position except in the nets) and Phil Arrowsmith has been brought back from the Junior B's to play right wing. Arty Bell stays at left wing, and the first two lines remain intact.

Earnie Frey is back in harness and seems to be getting back in condition fast. He should be ready to strengthen the right side, in a week or two.

Interfaculty Sports

The SPS sevenths, by virtue of the scoring talents of Cook, Robertson and MacTavish, took a firm grip on second place in group eight yesterday at the arena as they defeated Trinity C's 3-1. They were a goal better than the red and black in each half. Johnston was the goal getter for the Skulemen.

The Dent B major hoopsters took the measure of SPS fifths 22-14 in the noon hour encounter at Hart House gym yesterday. After a low scoring period the dentists hooped in eleven points to establish a lead which they never relinquished.

Kleinberg and Brown were best for the Dents squad with five and four respectively while Hanson, Frame and Daniels each collected fours for the engineers.

Those two hot hoop rivals Junior Vic and Junior UC were at it again with UC taking top honors 33-29 in a see saw major battle. UC took the lead in the first period, lost it to Vic in the second and came back strongly in the final frame to salt away the contest.

Glick and Kuzmocha with eights, Young who got seven and Nefsky with five led the red and white men. For Vic it was Rumble with eight and Stevens and White with seven who led the pack.

On the upstairs floor, II Metals added a victory over PHE eights by a 35-27 score. Killaby with a neat 13 point performance was tops for the winners while Errington hooped up ten points for PHE.

UC III took a lopsided 7-0 win over Meds III yesterday in the pool with Webb, Garfinkle and Cameron contributing two each while Friedland's single rounded out the score for the winners. In the other splash polo meeting Trinity B took the nod over St. Mike's Bees 3-2 Whitehead drove in two for Trinity and Alley and Hants got one each. DeSouza doubled up for the Mikemen and Johnson aded a single.

Sportswoman

By JACKIE HEFFRON

Meds administered a terrific walloping to PHE II yesterday, blanking them 5-0. PHE held the winners to a single goal in the first period, which was sunk by Sally Sarles midway in the frame.

The last two frames were all Meds with Irene Hain taking the scoring honours. Irene scored twice in each of these periods, two of the goals coming when her team was short a player.

Joan Somerville, goalie, and Anne Spence were the two best players on the ice for PHE.

This win puts Meds way ahead in their league with six points to their credit. UC I is runner-up with two points.

Letter To Editor

Who Wins Bomb Wars?

Editor, The Varsity:

There is an item of news which you do not seem to have mentioned as yet, i.e., President Truman's order for the production of the H-bomb. There might be more pleasant things to talk about than this, but I doubt if there is one more important.

I asked a number of my fellow students what they thought of Truman's action. The majority claimed it was a good thing and went on to explain that if we didn't make the bomb the Russians surely would. Once the Russians did have the bomb, it would be dropped without hesitation neatly into the centre of our way of life. It went without saying that this would not be a good thing and so we should hasten every effort to make the bomb and protect ourselves.

"Must Use It Actively"

One student claimed that for the last half-century the Western democracies had victoriously defended a way of life which, although not perfect, was the best that had emerged through the centuries. With each successive victory the sphere of influence of these democracies had increased until it stood the mighty coalescence of power against the last enemy, Russia. It is now within our power not only to protect ourselves with the H-bomb but to use it actively until the depraved government of Russia is overthrown. Then the principles underlying our ideals would be allowed full scope.

There were some who replied they did not know. It was obviously an enormously complex question, and whilst an alternative to the production of the H-bomb appeared difficult to find it nevertheless seemed that almost any alternative would be preferable to the making of the bomb. For, up to the present individual countries had worked on the atom bomb only under the insistence of war.

Research For War

Research had continued into peace but only under the incentive of scientific research and not, as now, ordered by the leader of the most powerful nation specifically for military purposes. This order did most definitely align the competitors and give them the starting gun. And the end of the race? Yes, most probably the end of the race.

It seems strange that in this half century two generations should have hurled themselves into two separate but bloody wars. But stranger still is the fact that each of these generations should think it gained from waging and supposedly winning these wars. Obviously somebody thinks we have gained since we now go about making a bigger and much better bomb that we might win again.

For the last two thousand years we have lived under a set of ideals which have, up to the present, not been bettered. Each of us subscribes, either consciously or unconsciously, to the injunction that we should love our neighbor. It seems unfortunate, does it not, that we should forget the remainder of the quotation.

R. W. Shepherd,
I Meds.

HYDROGEN FUSION

What is hydrogen fusion? How does it differ from atomic fission? For the answers see the article "It Is Not New" on page four.

A World Problem

WHERE DOES THE STUDENT FIT IN?

"We are living in troubled times We know that. Let us not turn our backs on our larger world problems and race merrily along the dead-end path of frivolity while we are at university. Too many in the past have done that, and left us with innumerable obstacles to a healthy, sane, peaceful world.

"This is an earnest plea to all who will read to also heed. Let each make himself aware of the happenings in world politics so that he may intelligently and courageously face the problems that baset us. If all will do this, we need not fear." —Editorial in The Varsity, Sept. 29, 1949.

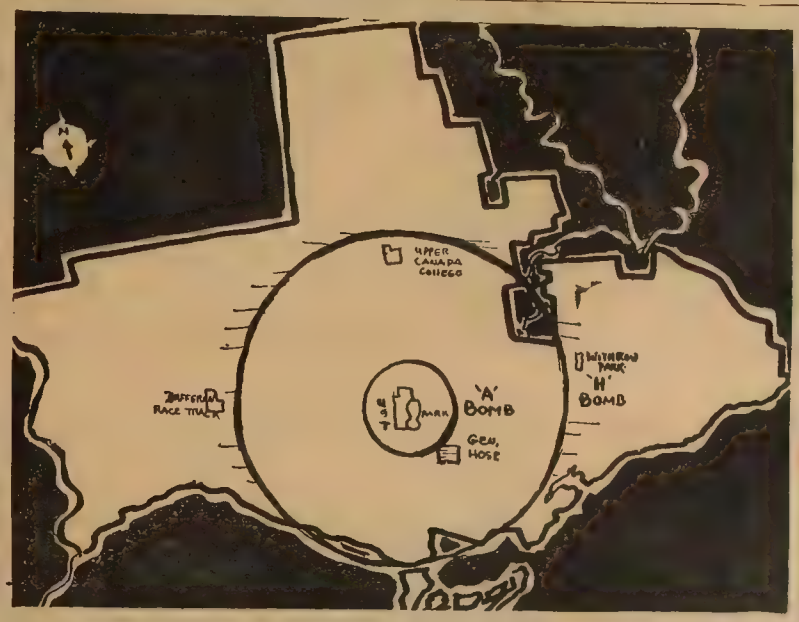
The article you are now reading is an attempt by a student to answer the question "What is the student's place considered in the light of the H-bomb decision?"

That the plea in the above quotation is more applicable now than ever indicates that there has been no fundamental change in the student's place. What has changed is the urgency of the situation; that cannot be over-emphasized. But the advice offered in the quotation is too generalized to be of much practical use.

"The United States should develop the bomb, but like gas, it should be under the control of the UN Commission." — Tom Wells, I Vic.

Specific steps toward the solution of world problems must be taken, then. While at university each student must apply himself more vigorously than ever to the studies of his choice, always with an eye to the correlation of what he is learning to some aspect of the world situation. Problems exist in all fields, on nearly every level. Differences of opinion exist between the East and the West on the aims and/or methods of physics, medicine, economics, literature, music and philosophy, to mention a few of the more obvious examples.



These differences of opinion are not going to be dispelled by a dramatic announcement by the head of a government that agreement has been reached on all points. We must know where we are going, and to find this out we need first hand knowledge of all the facts that are available. Most of all—and here is the most difficult thing—we need minds that can absorb the facts and critically sift them. The owners of these minds must have the energy to seek tirelessly for solutions to problems after the facts have been absorbed. They must have a standard of values based either on a firm faith in a god or a firm faith in mankind. Above all they must have an honest approach, and with it the freedom of thought that honesty implies.

"I'm not worried about the H-Bomb, I've got a Philosophy test to worry about."
A third-year Co-ed.

We in the universities are exposed to the elements in human thought most conducive to the development of these required qualities.

We must successfully equip ourselves or perish.

A Conservative Estimate

—Map by Norm Sherman.

The smaller circle is the area of total destruction of an atom bomb. The larger circle is a conservative estimate of the area of total destruction of an H-bomb. Conceivably, the entire city, with its million inhabitants, could be wiped out in a matter of seconds.

What This Issue Is About

This issue of The Varsity is devoted to bringing to university students information on the Hydrogen Bomb, and articles designed to outline some of the implications of the decision made last week by President Truman to produce it.

All unsigned articles on the Bomb or on problems brought into focus by the announcement of its production have been written by Varsity students, and reflect the views of the editorial staff. An attempt has been made to present divergent and opposed points of view. Regular news will be found on page eight.

No Man An Iland Intire Of Itselfe

. . . "No man is an Iland, intire of itselfe; every man is a peece of the continent; a part of the maine; if a clod bee washed away by the sea, Europe is the lesse, as well as if a Promontorie were; as well as if a manor of thy friend's, or thine own were; any man's death diminishes me, because I am involved in mankind; and therefore never send to know for whom the bell tolls; it tolls for thee."

—John Donne, (From "Devotions Upon Emergent Occasions," Meditation XVII)

The H-bomb is being made.

To talk about not making it, or to say that it should never have been made is useless. There are those whose moral or practical sense would have dictated against the production of the bomb. We are among that group; but—now we are faced with the reality of its production.

We are confronted by the reality. What are we going to do about it?—as students now and as members of a larger community tomorrow?

There has to be an appraisal of the world situation.

Either war is inevitable or it is not.

We believe that it is not. We say this realising that the history of mankind indicates we are wrong. We know that the way to permanent peace is not easy. But there is a way, and, as far as we can see, only one way to world peace. We repeat, for emphasis, that the way is not easy.

The only way to achieve world peace is for us, every last one of us, to take the time and energy to study the Russian way of life, to find out what there is about the Russian as an individual that makes his ideal the communist ideal. Then we must study our own way of life and find out what makes our ideal the democratic ideal. We must use all our moral and intellectual strength to keep us honestly open-minded and free from prejudice.

This scheme for achieving world peace would involve a great change in the day to day living habits of all people. That is the difficulty with it. It involves time, energy and personal sacrifice from everyone. The rewards are high; mutual understanding between large groups of people, and the possibility of the end of all wars.

We repeat once more that this course is difficult but the alternative is more difficult, for the only alternative is the belief that war is inevitable. And . . . .

The H-bomb is being made.

Democracy

If men cannot live together in peace, if they cannot find a way to settle their economic and ideological differences, if the concept of "one-world" is too large, too abstract, and too far ahead of the thinking of our time, it would seem we will be called on to fight another war. The events of the past few weeks which have brought the Hydrogen Bomb screaming to the front pages of our newspapers, merely make the problems more obvious, for the basis of disagreement which could make the use of the bomb a reality has been with us for some time.

Democracy is a much misunderstood term. Bandied about by politicians and after dinner speakers, given different meanings in different parts of the world, it means different things to different men. Beyond the oratory and the words, however, lies an ideal which makes democracy a positive, vital force in our lives. Based generally on a conception of freedom and liberty it is an ideal which stirs the minds and souls of men. Behind the ideal are ideas and assumptions which we believe are the best basis for social organization.

They are:

. . . A belief in the essential dignity of all men. All persons have an ultimate value and in this respect all men are equal.

. . . A belief in the possibility of progress.

. . . A belief that there should be a wide, rapid and fair distribution of the gains of civilization.

. . . A belief in the desirability of public control of public policy.

. . . A belief in the desirability of having social change by common assent without violence.

The democratic ideal is contained in these assumptions, and the democratic state is an attempt to work them out in a practical government and society.

While the democratic society of which we are a part may not live up to its ideals in all phases of its activity, that does not mean that the ideals are not good ones. Indeed, it is the challenge which the ideal presents which makes it necessary for every citizen, and particularly the citizen who is also a student, to understand his society, and to work to make that society the fulfillment of the ideal.

History shows us that in the past basic disagreements on ideological grounds have usually led to conflict. The degree to which communism and democracy disagree and cannot find ways to overcome those disagreements represents the challenge facing us today.

To be strong and positive in our belief we can accept no compromise of our fundamental assumptions. If we maintain this position, as we must if we believe in it, and if the communist maintains his postion then the cold war will remain, always a potential hot war. Freedom is more than a word: it is the lifeblood upon which we feed our ideal. We cannot accept a system which denies that freedom or the ideal is finished. With Patrick Henry and Harold C. Urey we are willing to lay down our lives for freedom, realizing that freedom in the long run is worth more than individual lives.

Yet we must find some way in which to overcome our disagreements. If we do not, we may resign ourselves to war, to widespread destruction and death, to the flaming hell which will result from the use of atomic and hydrogen bombs.

In spite of the horrible consequences of believing strongly in an ideal, the democratic ideal is worth defending. Built on positive assumptions it gives the world what we feel is a developing system of society which offers to all men the best life they can achieve.

The East

Communism

Many western Democrat idealists are dismayed to find that in their search for a permanent peace, the only road open to them is one which runs dangerously close to Communism.

This is not surprising as there are many places at which Communism and the Western Democratic ideal are similar. On the mechanical level there is coincidence in the role of the state in fields of welfare, planned production, cultural activities, etc.

Even beneath the mechanical level, on the basic premise of both philosophies there is an agreement. Both abide by the premise of the inviolable right of the individual. The difference—and it is such a difference as may cause wars—lies on the operative plane. Communism claims there can be no individual rights under the system of the Western democracies. And to prove this contention it shows that they are class societies.

"The history of civilization is the history of class struggles," wrote Engels. Thus to remove war which the Communist claims is the major symptom of individual's misery, the Communist removes classes. And in the place of the ruling class is put "the dictatorship of the proletariat." Just how integrity of person can thus be attained is a mystery to the Western Democrat. The Communist answers that he is giving up his freedom now, in order to have an absolute freedom later. But the Democrat cannot accept this "glib" explanation. He points out all men have human frailties, the western system of checks and balances negates these traits; it is unthinkable to put into the hands of a person or group the powers which the Sovieter has. But the Communist believes himself right and on the basis of this operative level justifies what the Westerner regards with horror—loss of political freedom, prison camps, collectivized capital, etc.

And through the arguments on both sides runs this common strain of the four freedoms.

But the last freedom, in the Soviet translation, is the freedom to preach atheism. "Opiate religion" has been replaced by a "common good" ethical basis, and the Communist is as fervent in his proselytizing as any Christian.

How is it then, that there appears to be a probable war shaping between these two philosophies which, except on the operative level, have much in common. Is it because Communism in the theoretical form which advocated an internal evolution, has nothing in common with Communism in the Soviet form, which spreads the principles with a sword?

The Soviet should not want war at this moment when there is the ever-present possibility of the USS cracking open under its own weight. But the actions of the Soviet leaders have been more than provocative and in the latest drive to the east there is a great possibility of an explosion when the limits are reached, because the western democracies cannot conscientiously permit any further spread of a doctrine which they feel to be a menace.

Rocks And Elephants To Smokeless Powder History Of Destruction

One day, long before man learned to record his progress, an ape-like human used a rock to crush his enemy's skull.

A descendent of his—we don't know how many generations later—found that a more efficient skull-crusher could be made by boring a thumb-hole in the rock.

Nobody has ever tried to measure what fraction of man's total ingenuity he has expended in developing more effective instruments for exterminating his fellow-men. But, since that first improvement in skull-crushers, his progress has been remarkable.

By the beginning of recorded history, the chief weapons to be used until Europeans adopted gunpowder were already in use. However the refinements in this period were ingenious and important.

Refinement of Spears

For instance, we read of spears used for both thrusting and throwing in Homer's description of heroic Greece. The later Greeks developed the spear into the basic weapon of their famous "phalanx." Yet the Romans were to show the world the real possibilities of the spear.

Montesquieu says their spear, called the "pilum", subdued the world. It was extremely heavy and long. As such it was a very useful infantry weapon. But it had a special feature. The shaft was deliberately made very heavy far from the point. Thus Roman soldiers could thrust it into their opponents' shields, release it, and leave their enemies with the alternative of dropping their defence or expending all their energies in holding up their shields.

> "We used the atom bomb in the last war. If the H-bomb is used in the next, we'll be using spears in the one after that."
> —Jim Torrance, I Law.

Iron Aids Greeks

The first general improvement in weapons in recorded history was one of quantity. By the time the Greeks fought the huge armies of Persian kings Darius and Xerxes, it was possible to give common soldiers iron weapons. Iron weapons were nothing new, but they had been largely limited to nobles. The Persian armies were still largely made up of lightly armed slingers, bowmen and cavalry. The heavily-armed Greeks literally cut their way through their enemies at the battle of Plataea in the fifth century BC.

While Alexander the Great in the next century was using a more manoeuvrable Greek phalanx to carve out an empire, his Persian enemies tried what was for Europeans, a new weapon. Elephants from India were launched against the Greek hoplites. But elephants are wise animals and like to live out their proverbially long lives. Seeing the glittering points of the Greeks' spears, they usually turned tail and trampled their own masters.

Alexander the Great's victories definitely established the first "armoured period" in military history. The Romans developed it to its greatest by effective use of the pilum and their famous short sword. Casualties tended to be heavy, since fighting consisted mainly in hacking away at each other at short range in close ranks. Maybe that is why the period is especially famous in the history of war.

> "As a means to the end, the H-bomb fills the bill—so to speak."—S. D. Neill, IV SMC.

The decline of Rome brought the end of the first armored period. The mercenaries, who more and more fought Rome's battles, were not anxious to die, unlike the citizen-soldiers of the Republic seem to have been. Therefore they fought at longer range. These tactics suited the lightly armored barbarians who overthrew Rome.

A new armored period began after Charlemagne, centering war around nobles who could afford chain mail. Their downfall was brought about mainly by gunpowder. But two other weapons also helped: the English longbow and the Swiss halberd. With these three weapons common people showed they were just as good as the nobles at killing their fellow men. The halberd is less well-known than the crossbow to English-speaking people. But most have seen pictures of it, for it is the long half-axe half-spear the Pope's Swiss guard carry.

It was a three-way-threat weapon. The Swiss developed it to use against the lance-carrying knights of their Hapsburg overlords. Its point did the work of a heavy spear; its axe could split open a knight's helmeted head; the hook at the back of the axe was perfect for pulling a horseman off his mount.

Gunpowder opened up all sorts of possibilities in killing. Castle gates could be blown in by exploding a charge against them in a container called a "petard". Held against the gates, the petard blew in the gates. It also blew itself outward. So if the engineer who lit the fuse did not get out of the way quickly enough, he was apt to be "hoist by his own petard."

Early modern armies had to stand close to each other before their

The Democratic Viewpoint

President Truman's announcement that the H-bomb will be produced by the United States government is only the latest proof of the dangerous and tragic character of the present world situation. The crisis of the last few decades has left the world with two major powers, instead of a multitude.

This development, far from bringing the world closer to what was naively believed to be "one world", has made the political situation so explosive that any major move is radically dangerous. The secret of this situation is that the politics of the balance of power—product of profound political wisdom—is no longer possible. Made up of two camps of power, the world lacks any real forces which might mitigate radical tensions between them.

This situation is further aggravated by the fact that the Russian government has given no evidence of having reached the end of its expansionist drive. This has prevented any permanent political settlement which might otherwise have been possible, even granted the fact of the two power-camps; and the lack of such a settlement has forced almost every country to choose, for its own protection, between East and West.

In such a situation, the choices before a morally responsible Western statesman are nothing short of tragic. No matter how deeply he may desire to act, scorning any political "game", directly toward universal justice, peace and order—from the standpoint of God, as it were—he is yet forced to act in a political situation which permits him no control over the moves of his potential or actual antagonist. Which concrete political course will serve best universal moral ends? The fact is—and here lies the tragic element—that there is no simple course and, indeed, that any course is dangerous. A "soft" attitude, far from serving peace, would merely be an invitation to further aggression; yet, while a "tough" attitude might serve peace and stability by stopping further expansion, it will also increase the tension; and it might thus in the end lead toward the very war it aims to prevent.

Such a situation can be mastered only by a combination of highest moral responsibility and greatest political genius and imagination. Wholly realistic in its approach to power, the Western world may yet not leave unexplored any avenue which might in the end ease the tension and lessen the need for power.

In the present case, it would seem that further efforts should be made to reach a settlement on international atomic control. Such attempts could not be interpreted as a sign of weakness but would, even if ineffectual politically, be at any rate of profound moral effect. In the light of experience, one is tempted to regard further overtures toward the Russians as useless; but it would be morally wrong to arrive at this conclusion without further effort; the latest development—and this is one of its hopeful aspects—has improved, it would seem, the strategic position of the West in such discussions. They could, at any rate, do no political or military harm; hence no one dreading the possibility of another war will dare leave them untried.

—Prof. E. L. Fackenheim.

The Communist Viewpoint

What is the significance of the H-bomb?

Death, murder and obliteration—the mass ruin of humanity! The H-bomb ordered by Truman is designed only to kill more people — whole nations at once if possible. The H-bomb will bring the Kingdom of Hell on Earth.

Everyone is horrified at the monstrocity of consigning so much wealth and knowledge for mass murder. The Archbishop of York, Donald Gordon, every sane man and woman, you and I—none of us can bear even the thought of the carnage the H-bomb will cause. We must fight against becoming both murderer and murdered.

Our generation fought the last war for peace, full employment, and democracy, not for a dress rehearsal. We demand that science and our natural wealth, uranium, be used to conquer poverty and ignorance—not to lay waste the earth and overpopulate hell.

The H-bomb is a Hell-bomb because it is the product of capitalist America in crisis. (Volume of production reached its peak in 1943 and, though it rallied in '48, it has since declined steadily.) The H-bomb is the Hell bomb of frightened men, fearful for their privilege and profit, and determined to magnify their troubles to a world scale, to take us all to perdition with them. With demoniac cunning they pretend to be democrats (cf. Jim Crow in Mississippi, murder in Malaya and Madagascar, the Taft-Hartley law, devaluation, or the price of milk and rents) and talk of the defence of "our way of life" in Japan and Western Germany.

Big Business knows it has not fooled us; their agent, the Truman government, has decided to scare us. First they tried the atom bomb — until one exploded in Siberia and exploded their myth of American superiority. Now with the H-bomb, they are threatening to kill all who disagree with them with one searing blow—a few push buttons will ignite the continent of Eurasia.

We shall not be deceived by these Hell-bombardiers, in the holocaust we shall not escape.

We do not want to kill!
We do not want to die!
BAN THE BOMB!

No Rust On The Sword

A Spiritual Esti mate

In an interview with the Atlantic two years ago, Albert Einstein said that "since the completion of the first atomic bomb nothing has been accomplished to make the world more safe from war, while much has been done to increase the destructiveness of war." Last week's shattering statement from the President of the United States to rush development of a new hydrogen bomb with the blunt words of his Secretary of Defense come to the world as one more staggering step in the march to war.

While representatives of governments wrangle in the United Nations Council over means of repairing the damage done by the reeent war, and flounder in futility, the destructive potential of atomic weapons has rapidly increased. Dr. Einstein estimates that an atomic war fought now would wipe out two-thirds of the world's population. What such a war would do after another decade of a race for atomic arms, the mind dare not contemplate. Yet despite Einstein's warning, the two great powers of the world, Soviet Russia and the United States are in the last lap of precisely such a race. The United Nations is now more and more a madhouse than a centre for collective action to insure world peace. Of necessity the two-world concept has had to be accepted. Governments are thus forced to begin indoctrinating their citizens with the concept that a return to power politics, this time a world balance of power—is the best way available to head off an imminent war.

"Preventive War"

There are still those among us who keep talking up the need of a preventive war, and they are not confined to the Pentagon. Blind to the consequences, these men still think the Hiroshima and Nagasaki bombs are morally and politically justified. Those who talk about an atomic attack on Russia solving the problem of world peace entirely fail to see that such a war leads to disaster. Nevertheless they keep on talking. The loudness of their talk, their apparent ability to start others talking the same way, their high position in the ranks of government, make them a genuine menace to the future survival of mankind.

If this trend be indicative of our present predicament, we are faced with the fact that our world is sick. But the President's announcement is only a symptom of that sickness, not the cause. It is only a sign of a decay that has already set in. The root cause of his malady lies in the obvious fact that man's concepts of moral and spiritualy truths have not kept pace with his achievement in scientific truth.

His development of means has far outstripped his conception of the end. His incentive is unequal to his skill. The inventions of man have revolutionized his life and have become the false symbol of civilization and the goal of his ambition, the pagan idols of modern times. Man must understand that the mechanical transformations he has introduced into the world and his consequent adaptation to them will mean either progress or ruin according to whether or not they are accompanied by a corresponding improvement in his moral attitude, his concept of good and evil, his concept of an absolute immutable Moral Law.

Thus, though the atomic bomb is the fruit of science, the eating of the fruit is not a matter of science since there is no technological defense. If there is to be any hope it must lie in a world monopoly. World monopoly pre-supposes world government, and world government depends upon the trustworthiness of its members. The ultimate question therefore is ethical and not political. The only answer to atomic power is moral power, and moral power is the only way to peace.

We prize our democracy as a superior way of life but we ignore the deep convictions, the eternal principles without which our democracy has no meaning, without which it could not have been produced. Our entire science of government will be of no avail if it does not lead man to better comprehension of himself, of the meaning and sanctity of his life, of the spiritual resources imbedded in his soul. We hear of treaties, signatures, conventions, international police and courts, but hear nothing of the respect of these treaties, the integrity of the commissions, the impartiality of the judges and the good faith of all concerned, without which these instruments are

FUSION PROCESS

It Is Not New

Although both the A-bomb and the H-bomb are basically the result of changes in atomic structure the processes are diametrically opposite in nature. The fission of uranium involves splitting the atom into two parts whose total mass is less than that of the original mass whereas the hydrogen bomb fuses the equivalent of four hydrogen atoms together to form one helium atom, again with an attendant loss of total mass. It is the loss of total mass which is the source of the tremendous energy liberated.

New Mexico First

The first Atomic bomb which exploded at Alomogordo, New Mexico, on July 16, 1945, was the result of atomic fission, the splitting of heavy atoms of U 235. This fissionable material is found in natural uranium ore and exists as 0.7% of its weight, that is 140 lbs. of natural uranium will produce 1 lb. of U235, the other 139 lbs. forming U238. The action of U235 on U238 forms plutonium which, although not fissionable at the time of the atomic explosions, is by means of the latest techniques now completely fissionable thus increasing the proportion of energy available from a given amount of natural uranium ore. Every pound of U235 split in the atomic blasts yielded the equivalent of 11.4 million kilowatt-hours or the energy contained in 1,400 tons of coal.

"It's all very well to say that the Russians and Americans are comparable to dogs eating dogs but if a couple of H-bombs were dropped on Toronto more than dogs would be killed."—Budge Archibald, Grad. Studies.

The atomic number of uranium is 92 because its atoms contain 92 planetary electrons and 92 protons; its atomic weight is 235 or 238 depending on the number of additional neutrons present; U235 has 143 neutrons and U238 has 146. An ordinary chemical explosion releases a fraction of the energy contained in the planetary electrons; nuclear reactions on the other hand release the immense energies which serve to bind the nucleus together.

Chain Reaction

The atoms of U235 or U238 if bombarded by neutrons are split into two smaller atoms and a number of neutron "bullets" are released in addition to a certain amount of energy. When the amount of fissionable material is small these chain reactions quickly die out because of the number of neutrons which escape to the atmosphere. As the size of the U235 block is increased and the chain reaction started fewer and fewer neutrons manage to escape and more are available to continue the process. When the block of fissionable material is built up beyond a secret critical size each fragment of nuclear fission splits many times its own number of additional neuclei. The process increases in geometrical progression and the block disintegrates to form the atomic bomb. Therefore the atomic bomb was made up of two or more masses of U235 each less than the critical mass required for a fast-chain reaction. At the proper moment the bomb mechanism united these pieces forming a mass greater than the critical mass and an explosion occurred. The critical weight is still a secret but it is believed to be somewhere between four and two-hundred pounds.

"It will probably send me to oblivion. The best thing we can do is try to work for more control on the International level."
—Carol MacKinnon, II Vic.

Fusion, Not Fission

The hydrogen bomb, unlike the atom bomb, is the result of atomic fusion rather than fission and reproduces on a small scale the type of atomic transformations which occur within the sun. Again, unlike the atom bomb, the principle behind its function and manufacture involves no secret quantities for the methods of atomic fusion were well known as far back as 1928, not by physicists alone but in the allied fields of astrophysics, and were freely available to any reader of scientific literature.

Even at that early date it was understood that fusion was the greatest source of energy known to man.

"Publicizing the H-bomb to the extent it has been for the past week is only resulting in the hysteria of students who are as far removed from this menace as the man in the moon."
—Andy Ried, II UC.

The type of transformations which occur in the sun are of such magnitude that they have continued to radiate trillions of horspower of light and heat for millions of years and the process shows no signs of abating.

The Sun—Product of Fusion

Scientific evidence points to the fact that due to the extremely high temperature and pressures which exists in the sun, matter such as we know it cannot exist and that the sun is composed of only simple particles such as protons and electrons whirling about indiscriminately under temperatures as high as twenty million degrees centigrade and pressure of five million tons per square inch. Much, if not all, of the energy developed is believed due to the fusion of protons into atoms of helium, since this process, like the fission of uranium, results in the disappearance of a certain amount of mass. According to Einstein's formula the energy developed is equal to the mass transformed, multiplied by the speed of light squared; therefore even an infinitesimal change in mass produces a prodigious amount of energy. The amount of matter which disappears in the fusion of helium is of a much higher order than the amount involved in the fission of uranium.

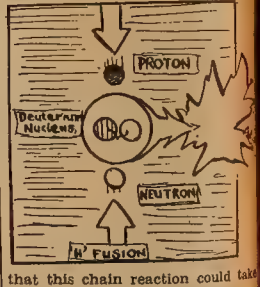
"If we are to make the hydrogen bomb, let us use it now. There has been sufficient provocation by the Soviet, and I would rather do this dirty job than leave it to my children."—R. W. Shepherd, Meds 5T3.

Drawback To Fusion

The absence of a means of duplicating the extremely high temperatures and pressures necessary for fusion to take place was an effective drawback to its exploitation. The atomic bomb provided the answer to the problem since local temperatures of the order of one hundred million degrees centigrade were believed to exist at its core. Even if these extremely high temperatures are not available the formation of helium through fusion can be achieved at a much lower temperature by dividing the process into two steps.

Fusion By Steps

The hydrogen nucleus consists of one proton. The addition of one neutron results in heavy hydrogen or deuterium, literally half of a helium atom. If another neutron is added tritium is formed, a substance three times the atomic weight of hydrogen. Tritium plus one proton forms a helium nucleus made up of two protons and two neutrons. This latter transformation occurs spontaneously and little energy is released in the process. The degrees of temperature and pressure for one of these fusion processes to take place are much lower than those required for the direct fusion of hydrogen into helium, and it seems likely that the logical procedure would be to use heavy hydrogen or deuterium as a starting point in the hydrogen bomb. The energy released is only slightly less than that which is available from the direct fusion of hydrogen.



"I haven't got the brains to come in out of the rain. I don't know what I would do if I had to come in out of an H-bomb blitz."—Joan Mollard, I UC.

No Limit

Other methods exist for the formation of helium, methods such as the bombardment of lithium by protons, but whatever the means used they are all based on substances which unlike uranium are plentiful in nature or easily obtainable. Therefore since the power of the bomb will depend only on the amount of hydrogen transformed there is no limit to the mass of hydrogen which might be used.

Atmospheric Chain Reaction

One of the most important questions troubling the layman's mind is the possibility of a bomb of this size starting a spontaneous chain reaction in the atmosphere, a chain reaction it would be impossible to contain. This fear is based on the belief that the transmutation of hydrogen into helium in the sun proceeds indirectly through a chain reaction involving isotopes of carbon, nitrogen and oxygen, the principle components of the air we breathe. However it is the general contention among scientists that it could only be at temperatures and pressures immeasurably greater than those found in the atmosphere that this chain reaction could take place.

No Direct Radiation

The presence and extent of deadly clouds of radio-active particles following the hydrogen bomb explosion has also come under scrutiny. However since the fusion process tends to build up atoms rather than break them down there will be no radio-active by-products produced directly. A radio-active emanation would necessarily follow the explosion due to the use of an atomic bomb as the trigger but the extent of the radio-active particles released would be of the order already experienced at Hiroshima and Nagasaki and not increased by the more powerful blast of the hydrogen bomb.

"We've got to have it. If we don't have it and Russia has, they could crack the 4 Western powers with it.—Bill James, II SMC.

Small comfort these last two points, but in a world apparently bent on its own destruction there is need to find solace in anything that may serve to retard the process.

impotent. These are the moral rocks on which our age is built and has finally come to rest. We sleep on the tower of scientific achievement, and fail to see the cornerstones below.

Unless man takes stock of those principles born of an eternal, absolute Moral Law, stops fighting the notion of a goal and purpose and significance in life which comes to fullness in belief and faith in a Power greater than man, he walks the road that leads to an abyss. There is so little time. He must take action now before it is too late.

Optimism To Pessimism

—A New Trend

"The stars are not wanted now; put out every one;
Pack up the moon and dismantle the sun;
Pour away the ocean and sweep up the woods;
For nothing now can ever come to any good."

W. H. Auden

Admittedly the quotation is an extreme view, but certain contemporary trends justify our pessimism. A cursory glance at the utopias past and present in literature reveals an abrupt change in man's attitude towards his future. The long tradition of the utopian genre, from St. Augustine's City of God to Morris' News From Nowhere, is characterized by an optimistic belief that the future of man will be happier and better than the present. The Christian tendency to look for paradise in the future and the vague conception of progress in the late nineteenth century, generated by theories of evolution, reinforced this optimism.

In the twentieth century, however, two new trends are evident. Though Huxley's Brave New World accomplishes little else, it does reveal the growing divorce between science and the humanities, a divorce which has widened to such an extent that modern sciences are rarely, if ever, concerned with the moral implications of their diabolically devastating weapons. It isn't that the scientist does not care; rather, he has been trained to think in terms of technological progress rather than in terms of human values. The other trend is revealed with terrifying clarity by the late George Orwell's Nineteen Eighty-Four. This fine novel is worked out on the premise that men are beginning to aspire to power, not for what they can do with it, but for its own sake. "The object of power is power," states O'Brien, one of the chief characters of the novel, and the statement is Orwell's thesis in a nutshell.

> "If it comes, it comes. There is nothing we can do about it."
> —It Pass Student.

The substitution of the god called "Progress" for the God of the Bible accounts for the split between science and the humanities. Orwell's political pessimism was probably inspired by the failure of the Russian Revolution. This failure was foreseen by the anarchist groups of the neneteenth century and by Bakunin in particular, who saw that the creation of a "dictatorship of the proletariat" was merely substituting one form of tyranny for another. The dictatorship did not "wither away," as the early communists thought, leaving in its place the ideal communistic state. The Russian Revolution failed because its leaders cultivated power, not for humanitarian reasons, but for its own sake. As a result, instead of producing an "earthly paradise," they have produced a hell that Dante would have difficulty in rivalling. The cult of power is, of course, not limited to the totalitarian state, but lack of space prohibits my adducing evidences of its manifestations in the democracies.

These two trends, then—the divorce between science and the humanities on the one hand, and the cult of power on the other— when coupled with the H-Bomb, a weapon of unparalled and inhuman destructiveness, cast grim shadows over man's future. The experience of the underground groups has proved conclusively that no libertarian movement can make any headway against the organized psychological and physical violence of the totalitarian state. The H-Bomb presents a royal road to unlimited power, power which can bring the whole world under the sway of a few men. As yet, the structure of democratic government has prevented that power from falling into unscrupulous hands—in the West. Whether it can continue to do so is another matter.

guns were effective. This was changed when the Americans at Bunker Hill showed the accuracy of rifled guns. But it was not until the latter half of the nineteenth century that man began to show the ingenuity in killing he was to develop to a high science in the twentieth century.

Merchants of Death

Dr. Gatling of Chicago introduced his rapid fire gun in time for use in the American Civil War. Then arms salesman Bazil Zaharoff showed the profitable possibilities of combining business enterprize and killing. A friend of generals, politicians and financiers, it cannot be said he encouraged wars. But he made the most of them. When he sold a weapon to one country, he always tried to sell a counter-weapon to its enemies.

Zaharoff had induced many countries to buy torpedo boats. Looking for a counter-weapon, he decided a fast automatic gun was what he needed. It was he who enabled Maxim to develop the true machine gun.

> "Men are finally conceiving of a force great enough to destroy themselves."—G. N. Garossino, III M & P.

Improvements in Slaughter

Two other developments were necessary to make possible the mass slaughter of the First World War. Cannon jumped out of position under the shock of recoil when they were fired. Black powder set up clouds of smoke which made aiming impossible until it cleared. To eliminate this bottleneck in the process of killing, recoil mechanisms and smokeless powder were invented.

Since then man's progress has been phenomenal. Long-range cannons, tanks, aerial bombs, rockets, proximity fuses. . . .

Why continue the list?

Students Seek Peace

Across the Dominion, both on and off the campus, societies, associations, councils and clubs have mushroomed up to tackle the problem of the growing gap between east and west. Over all their discussions hangs the black and ominous shadow of the bomb.

Just For Discussion

Some of the campus organizations, exemplified by the International Relations Club here, are purely forums for debate and discussion. They disseminate information, provoke discussion and try to make the individual student ponder the causes, effects and possible solutions of the international question. They do not pretend to have an answer. But they do strive to present the facts to the student body so that they can at least approach the problem objectively and intelligently.

Typical of the ICR guest speakers last year was Leslie Roberts, a Canadian writer who spent several months in the Soviet and was one of the few who did not slam the door behind him. Introducing Roberts, Bill McDougall, now IV Trinity, summed up the speaker's position by saying "He has things to say which both sides will take exception to."

Peace Through U.N.

Several campi, including UBC, have United Nations Associations. Like the IRC's, the United Nations clubs are primarily concerned with information and education. They sponsor lively debates but usually hesitate to take a stand on any particular international controversy. However, they do have one positive suggestion—A strong United Nations will maintain peace.

A World Federalists group is now being formed at McGill. They assert "peace is not merely the absence of war but the presence of justice, of law, of order—in short, of government and the institutions of government." The proponents of world government forward the most positive method of solving the international chaos but, in the opinion of many, they are too idealistic. It is asked "How can you form a world government that will be acceptable to all?" Even the World Federalists disagree among themselves as to how their principle should be carried out. They have kept their platform general because they fear the whole movement will split into rival factions if they make it more particular.

There was a small but conscientious World Government Organization on the campus last year, but this years its voice is silent.

A Group That Acts

The U. of T. Peace Council is one that formulates opinions and then works to assert them. After much controversy, a Student Peace Movement have also been recognized recently at UBC and at Manitoba, where students felt they wanted action to follow the debate and the discussion of such matters as controlling the bomb.

In the popular mind, all "peace" movements are nothing more than Communist fronts. There definitely are Communists in every peace movement. "But," Peace Council members reply, "How can a group work out a solution to the east-west controversy if they don't allow the other fellow to voice his opinions?" Whether or not Communists sway the whole policy of the Peace Councils is a matter of opinion.

> "The concept and implications of the H-bomb are too abstract and distant for man to feel that he, personally, is implicated. If the problem can be brought down to a more personal level, a level where man can see his own part in the entire complex scheme, and understand his responsibility in it, the international co-operation needed will have been brought a lot closer."—Dr. W. Line, Professor of Psychology.

Petition to Ban Bomb

Even those who believe the Councils are purely Communist-inspired admit they do some positive and constructive work. One of the four major points of the new program being drawn up by the U. of T. Peace Council "Ban the bomb." Petitions are circulating among the members asking that the bomb be banned on an international level.

The big question is how much any of these campus groups can do towards furthering international understanding. "What have they done?" you ask. Peace Council president Omar Walmsley, II Emmanuel, has summed up the situation:

"The Peace Council has fallen down on the job. Students have not begun to realize the implication of the Hydrogen bomb. If we are to achieve peace, everyone must strive for it by understanding the issues and looking at the world from an international and humanitarian point of view."

B-BALL BLUES BAG FIRST WIN

Varsity Victors; Take 6 Straight In Squash Tilts

By BRUCE MacDONALD

In an exhibition tourney with players from the Royal Military College in Kingston, Varsity squash Players walked off with a 6-0 triumph last Saturday at Athletic Night.

The system used in squash to arrange the matches is called seeding. Each player on the team is given a rating corresponding to his ability (i.e. 1, 2, 3, etc.). Then each player is matched with the opponent who has the same rating as himself.

The closest match was between Dave McPherson of RMC and Jim Biddell of Varsity (both number 1 men). They really gave onlookers an eyeful of shotmaking ability. Biddell finally took the match in a close 2-3 decision.

Results

1 Herman 3 — Wray, RMC 1. (Match 2).
2. Cameron 3 — Bongard, RMC 0 (Match 4).
3. Gaunt 3 — Reid, RMC 0. (Match 6).
4. Biddell 3 — McPherson, RMC 2 (Match 1).
5. Hague 3 — Waterston, RMC 2 (Match 3).
6. Reid 3 — Reifenstein, RMC 0 (Match 5).

Blues Win Ring Meet Lose Only One Bout

Varsity boxers showed they have what it takes when they won four out of five bouts in their meet with OAC that was the main feature of the Athletic Night at Hart House last Saturday night. An added attraction were four exhibition bouts between other members of the Varsity boxing clan.

The bout in the 133 lb. class ended in one round when the victor, Glen Williams of Toronto, opend up a cut on the nose of O.A.C.'s Bill Tom. At 140-lbs., Frank Corner, Toronto, came out on top over Armstrong O.A.C. in what may well be called the reddest bout of the evening. The two red-heads must have lost a quart of blood between them, with Armstrong losing the greater part.

One Loss

In the official 147-lb. bout, hardluck Dick Priestman, Toronto, lost a tough one to G. Bowers, of O.A.C. Priestman did some solid counter-punching, but Bowers' rugged aggressiveness earned him the nod, much to the disappointment of many. Pete Petkoff, 155 lbs., of Toronto, did not give southpaw Rogers, O.A.C., much chance to show his boxing ability, as he belted him with solid rights, and opened up with both hands in close. Toronto's Jim Folinsbee sent O.A.C.'s Beaton home with a headache from his straight left jabs, and hammer-like rights. Beaton showed he was game, but could not match the fast-stepping Folinsbee.

Exhibition Bouts

In the unofficial 147-lb. match the smooth-working Roberto Couceiro, of Toronto, won handily over O.A.C.'s Jim Doane. Doane shot his bolt in the first minute then the cagey Cuban methodically wore him down with snappy left hooks, and flash rights.

The four no-decision exhibition bouts were spotted with action, and genrally pleasing, but the boys showed little desire to kill each other.

Exhibition bouts were: 1. Pete Webb vs. Howard Greenly; 2. Mike Wright vs. Nick Betz; 3. Hank Henshall vs. Brian Berting; 4. Dave Geary vs. Carl Leprich.

Take McGill 41-37 Lose To Queen's In Overtime 57-55

By MAL CRAWFORD

Bob's Basketball Blues broke even on their week-end double bill, beating McGill in Montreal for their first win in league competition Friday night, and losing to Queen's at Kingston on Saturday. Both games were very close fits; the win over McGill was by 41-37, and the loss to Queen's (after five minutes of overtime) was by a mere two points—57-55. The score in the latter game was deadlocked 47-47 at the end of regular playing time.

Edge McGill

The win in Montreal was Varsity's first in three league games, and was something in the nature of sweet revenge after the 36-26 drubbing suffered at the hands of the same team here a week ago. John McManus was top scorer, as usual, with 14 points, and Jack Gray was second with 8.

McGill did very little substituting; in fact, only six men were used to any extent. Only five men figured in the scoring for the Redmen. Finlayson was a 12-pointer; Myer Bloom and Bud Fraser got ten apiece.

Line-ups:

Toronto: McManus 14; Gray 8; Braithwaite 4; Wigle 4; Bell 4; Henderson 3; Luck 2; Huycke 2; Carruthers.

McGill: Finlayson 12; Bloom 10; Fraser 10; Cunningham 2; Caldwell 2; Endman, Garberg, Merling, Skinner, Milburn.

The game at Queen's was a see-saw affair, and really a tough one to lose. The Blues were ahead 42-39 in the fourth period, and 49-47 in the first minute of overtime, but couldn't keep up a winning pace long enough to stay ahead. Some of the players thought the team played better in this game than against McGill; a few considered it the best game of the season. At times, especially in the third period, there didn't seem to be much doubt about it.

Ted Luck was high man for the Blues with 14 points. Ted was red-hot on the foul line, getting about half his points on free shots. John McManus got 12, partly through use of radar, we suspect, and Johnny Braithwaite scored nine. Braithwaite was the only one who seemed to be able to score in close; Queen's defended their end so tightly, most of our guys—McManus the most successful of them—had to be content with long shots.

See-Saw

Queen's started like a house on fire, and went ahead by about 21-6 in the first period. Then Varsity pulled up even, Queen's went ahead, and Varsity pulled up again. It was like that all through. Varsity actually scored the first basket in the overtime, but again the tale was told that a good big man is better in the pinch than a good little man.

If you could say that on thing lost the game, it was technical fouls. Varsity incurred four of these, which must be something of a record. Don Bahner, the Gaels' ace foul-shooter, potted every one of them. He had seven chances on the foul-line and clicked on all of them. Griffen and MacNiven were the other top point-getters for Queen's, with 13 and 9 respectively.

The refs really went all-out to keep the game peaceful. One of the technical fouls was given when Braithwaite bounced the ball extra hard after getting a personal. Personal fouls were handed out as generously as technicals, and four men left the game for hitting the five foul limit.

Varsity: Gray 6; McManus 12; Braithwaite 9; Luck 14; Bell 2; Henderson 2; Wigle 4; Huycke 6; Gibbs.

Queen's: MacNiven 9; Griffen 13; Elford 5; Soutter 6; Lampman 8; McLaughlin 2; Bahner 9; Logan 5; Weir, Walcot.

After their 12-0 defeat at the hands of Physio a week ago, OT made a resounding comeback last Friday in holdinng UC II to a one-all deadlock. In UC's encounter with Physio the result was a scoreless tie.

After a few minutes of play Marg Foster, UC, opened the scoring when she went right in on the OT goal. In the same stanza, Emily Egan, Physio, tied up the score.

This ended the scoring for the day as both teams tightened up to such an extent that much of the remaining play was between the blue lines.

OT had the edge on play most of the game with Glenna Wylie and Sheila Wilson doing good work on defence and forward lines respectively. Marylin Craig who is actually a forward did some fancy stick-handling for Physio.

BLUES STRANGLE QUEEN'S 4-3

Last Second Goal Into Deserted Net Breaks Hockey Tie

By MAL CRAWFORD

Kingston, Feb. 4—(Staff)—With the Queen's goalie out for the last 30 seconds, the score 4-3, and the play in Toronto's end, John McDougall got the puck, started down the ice, and fired it into the empty net just as the siren sounded. The goal didn't count, but his rush took the game out of the fire, when any shot might have tied the game. The 4-3 win Saturday was the closest contest in the Intercollegiate Hockey Season so far.

Orr Sensational

Doug Orr was nothing short of sensational in goal those last few minutes. Queen's must have had as many shots on goal in the last three minutes as they had all the rest of the game.

The Gaels were checking like an entirely different team from the one that succumbed so easily in Toronto two weeks before. They were draped over our puck-carriers' backs and were throwing themselves all over the ice in the second period. How they saved enough to stage their two-goal comeback in the third, we'll never know.

Goalie Good

Varsity carried the play offensively by a big margin in the first two periods, and but for Norm Urie's net-minding, would have run away with the score then and there. Urie certainly deserves a better team in front of him judging by the calibre of his play Saturday. Varsity had 11 shots on goal in the first period to Queen's seven, and fourteen in the second to only five by the Gaels.

Phil Arrowsmith opened the scoring getting his first goal in a league game on a pass from Rich Howson. Don Murray tied it up in the same period when Artie Bell was off for tripping. Murray took the puck from Chuck Hews, who had zigzagged his way from centre ice to in front of the goal in the Gaels' best bit of stick-handling of the night. The Murray-Hews-Kemp line was easily Queen's best forward combo, as a checking line as well as a scoring line. They notched all three of their team's counters.

Lou Battochia was given honorable mention in the three star selections when Queen's was at Varsity, and doubly merited it in Saturday's game.

Fox is Foxy

The third period was strictly Varsity's in spite of Queen's cheek-to jowl checking. Norm Fox skated nearly the length of the ice near the first, only to be tripped in front of the goal. Nothing daunted, he came back again by himself a few minutes later and this time scored. It was the same line that got the third goal, Moore from Fox.

John McDougall got another unassisted counted at the start of the last period. Then Queen's suddenly found the goal, Murray and Hews getting the scores. The meagre crowd of about 500 was on its feet through most of the last few minutes.

Varsity: Goal, Orr; defence, Hayes, McDougall; centre, Walters; wings, Bazos, Bell. Alternates: Kane, Addison, Turcott, Fox, Moore, Arrowsmith, Howson, Vernon.

Queen's: Goal, Urie; defence, Sly, Whitelaw; centre, Murray; wings, Hews, Kemp. Alternates: Battochio, Wagar, Robertson, McKelvey, Harley, Keenleyside, Hay, McCafferty.

First Period

1—Varsity, Arrowsmith (Howson) 7:50
2—Queen's, Murray (Hews) ..11:31
Penalties—Bell, Whitelaw, Bazos, Battochio.

Second Period

3—Varsity, Fox 8:40
4—Varsity, Moore (Fox) 16:15
Penalties—Sly, Bazos (min. & misconduct).

Third Period

5—Varsity, McDougall 3:07
6—Queen's, Murray 9:50
7—Queen's, Hews (Kemp, Murray) 11:40
Penalties—Hayes, Battochio, Arrowsmith, Whitelaw, Addison.

SECONDS SINK MACS 8-1

By JOHN DUGAN

Jack Life's red-hot Varsity Intermediate Hockey Club flamed again Friday at Varsity Arena as they swept over a hard-fighting, but helpless McMaster team 8 to 1. The little blues were paced by two-coal efforts by Rene Gauthier and Pat McLoughlin.

Starting slowly, as is their habit, the Blue team led only 1-0 at the end of the first period. After trying to get the slippery disk past the McMaster goalie (who favors the kneeling type of save) time and time again, little Al Conboy slipped the puck back to big John Fingland at the Blue line and he lost no time in blasting it home. Varsity was robbed of a second goal in this period when, as the Mac goalie lay flat on his back in the crease, a Blue player lifted the puck into the empty net, only to have it swatted out in mid-air by a keen-eyed defense man's stick. (Shades of Babe Ruth, this boy is wasting his time playing hockey.)

In the second stanza the Lifemen began to roll in their old accustomed style: Gauthier banging home two tallies and McLoughlin adding a third. McMaster bumped and bruised the lighter Varsity team but to no avail, as the Blues kept rushing goalward.

Four in Third

With enthusiasm not abated a whit, the Macmen returned to the ice for the third canto, only to receive a worse shock than before as their opponents lighted the lamp four times. Handsome Harry Hyde started the parade with a picture goal on assists from McLoughlin and Pete Gawinski, who played a terrific game, gleaning two assists and checking capably. Long John Lickley's efforts paid off at last as he backchecked capably and also as he put in the second counter of the period. McLoughlin notched his second goal of the game a few seconds later and nearly missed a hat-trick as did Gauthier. Al Conboy finished the scoring at 13:21 as Pete Gawinski assisted on another pretty play.

"Terror," "Black Jake," In

Capt. Harry Paterson, Ted Gawinski, Joe (Terror) Wolf and "Black Jake" Raftis were right in there although they did not score. Bill Allan and Wally London were rocks on the backline. Somebody should buy a stool for Gary Carl. He gets so weary just standing down there waiting for the play to return to his end.

Real Champs

The Intermediates have now beaten every team in the league and look like real champions as they begin the final swing around the loop. Only one really tough game is ahead of them, that with the big, rugged Western Seniors, who have the second best goaltender in the league.

Meat Trusts Grunt To Tie

Doinng their part in making last Saturday's A-Night a success from Varsity's standpoint, the University of Toronto grapplers scored an upset over the Ontario Agricultural College by tying them 18-18. H. Lubbock, in the 125 class, scored a quick first round fall over OAC's J. Pires to grab five points for the Blues. Bill Dingwall of Varsity wrestled Larry Burt to a fall in the third round of what was probably the best bout of the night. Al Hebert, a boy that started wrestling this year, decisioned K. Farrell of OAC in the 145 class in spite of the fact that Farrell has been wrestling for four or five years.

Varsity—18; OAC—18.

125—H. Lubbock (V) beat J. Pires (OAC) by a fall in the first round; 135—D. McLean (OAC) beat W. Pitman (V) by a fall in the first round; 145—Al Hebert (V) beat K. Farrell (OAC) by a decision. 155—Bill Gray (OAC) beat G. Wright (V) by a fall in the second round. 165—Kirk Wipped awarded a fall and five points by default. 175—Vic Jensen (OAC) beat Hugh Graham (V) by a first round fall; 190—Bill Dingwall (V) beat Larry Burt (OAC) by a third round fall; Heavy—R. Steckle (OAC) beat Pete Samuel on a decision.

Water We Waiting For?

Dear Editor:

I wish to draw the attention of all patriotic Canadians to a very serious situation concerning the safety of our nation.

A recent dispatch from Washington indicates that a vital constituent of the new Hydrogen Bomb will be Hydrogen. Without an ample supply of Hydrogen the bomb cannot be constructed. Naturally this material thus assumes a critical importance in these days.

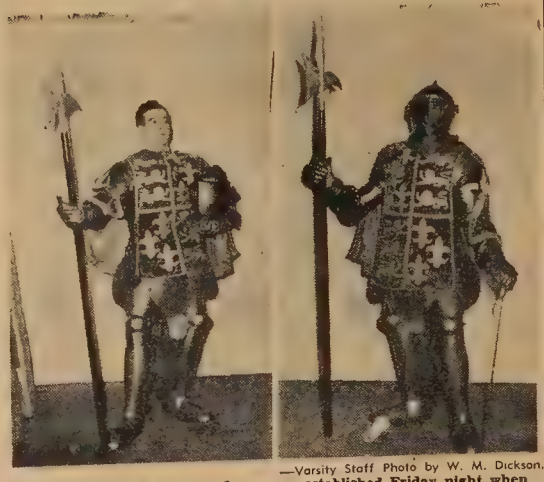
I was, therefore, quite understandably shocked to learn of a truly distressing situation. The government of this country, it appears, is so bent on rushing headlong into the disastrous clutches of Socialism, destroying the Free Enterprise that has made this magnificent land of ours so great, that it is totally ignoring a dastardly plot aimed at the very heart of our democracy.

I refer to the nefarious design of the Communist-Dominated City Council to pipe 2,000,000 gallons of water daily to North York. Water is a source of Hydrogen, the most important source known. The wisdom of allowing this valuable war material to cross the border, even into a friendly nation, is questionable. To send it to North York is taking a grave risk.

I am in possession of a secret report from Igor Beaver, a well-known espionage agent. According to this usually reliable informant, the water will not be used in North York, but will be piped over the northern border of North York into Siberia.

Let us place an immediate embargo on all such shipments. Without water Hydrogen Bombs cannot be built. If we keep it to ourselves, the Wicked Men in the Kremlin will be denied this weapon, and Democracy will be safe.

Write your Member of Parliament today.



Yours sincerely,
Themistocles.

Smile. Darn You

Contact between the old and new was established Friday night when this armor, inhabited by Elmer Sopha, left its place as an ornament at U.C.'s Arts Ball to clank over to Hart House, there to make the acquaintance of the modern-uniformed officers who had left thoughts of battle and were enjoying the annual COTC ball.

McGill Students Will Ask Three-Dollar Fee Raise

Montreal, Feb. 5—(CUP)—Three dollar increase in student fees will be advocated at the next meeting of the McGill Students' Society on Wednesday, Feb. 15, the Students' Executive Council unanimously decided at its meeting last Wednesday.

The move, which would require an amendment to the constitution would raise student fees from $12 to $15 a year.

It was pointed out that due to increasing costs and decreasing enrollment, an increase in fees would be essential, if student activities are to continue and function adequately.

Another factor causing the need for the increase is the lack of substantial reserve. Julian Hutchinson, representative for Commerce and chairman of the finance committee, disclosed that at present the Students' Society had only about $7,000 in the bank. If this were not the case, an increase would perhaps not be necessary now, since the reserve could absorb any increased expenses next year, it was said.

However, taking all factors into consideration the Council felt that increased revenue was at this time essential.

Various student organizations have had their activities curtailed this year because of lack of funds, and it was the belief of the Council that if fees were increased, these groups could again resume their normal activities.

The Students' Administrative Council of the University of Toronto is at present drawing up a brief to show the need for a fees increase. The fee now is three dollars per student.

SAC Finance Commissioner Earl Orser is leading the committee drawing up the Toronto brief. Their report is expected to be presented about two weeks from Wednesday.

Opinion on the Toronto campus is that the fee will probably be increased.

Fifty Cent Boost In Fees Scheme Of Manitoba U.

Winnipeg, Feb. 6—(CUP)—A plan to increase the University of Manitoba Student Union fee per student by fifty cents, and then have the UMSU treasurer use the extra half dollar for reallocation purposes was the recommendation of the Special Reallocation Committee to the UMSU council meeting recently.

If the plan was implemented it would increase the UMSU fee per student to $5.00 from the present $4.50. The alternative presented to faculties is to deduct the fifty cents from their faculty fee (as they do now if they participate in reallocation) or allow a fifty cent boost in general student fees, thus having the faculty grant remain the same, and at the same time providing UMSU with the extra half dollar necessary for reallocation.

The plan was endorsed by Council. Recently, the Arts Council decided to increase the UMSU fee by decreasing its own fee by half a dollar thus keeping the general student fees at their present figure.

Students' Parades Protest Suspension Of Alberta Paper

"We want a Gateway," shouted two hundred students of the University of Alberta as they marched to downtown Edmonton last Thursday with a four-piece band and placards.

The student paper was banned last week by University President Newton, who objected to the "obscene" literature in the special engineers' edition.

Object to Special Edition

The special edition of the Gateway printed last Tuesday was in honour of the annual Engineers' Ball and contained a full page of jokes which were found objectionable by the administration.

When the edition went to the Print Shop, it was announced that the facilities of the Print Shop would not be available to the Gateway until further notice. In a letter to the Students' Union, President Newton stated that the suspension would be lifted when he was assured that there would be no repetition of the obscenities.

The Students' Union, replying in a unanimous letter, said that they would be placed in a contradictory position if they gave their assurance that no future edition of the Gateway would contain "objectionable" material.

Approved By Students

That some of the material published in the Engineers' Gateway was not in good taste the Union agreed, yet it seemed likely that the edition met with the approval of a majority of students. At the present time they are trying to get student opinion on the matter.

The Students' Union expressed the hope that the ban of the publication of the Gateway at the University Printing Shop would be removed. President Newton would not accept the letter.

Last Wednesday Artsmen kidnappew five of six Engineers to keep them away from a smoker where they were to be introduced to the Engineers' body.

The Students' Council will meet today to consider the next step in ending the deadlock.

Student's Body Found Saturday Outside Museum

The body of R. E. H. Cooke, fourth year Mechanical Engineering student, was discovered on Saturday evening in Queen's Park outside the Royal Ontario Museum. A sawed-off .22 calibre rifle was found 15 feet from the body, and a quantity of .22 shells were found in one of Cooke's pockets. He had been shot through the heart.

Toronto police said last night there would be no inquest. Cooke's father, L. H. Cooke of Red Lake, Ont., has been notified.

Church States Case Lecture Series Topic For Victoria Meetings

The Victoria Church Student's Union will present a series of meetings Sunday Feb. 12, Monday the 13th and Tuesday the 14th next week on the general topic, "The Church States Its Case." Sunday, Professor Leslie will speak at 7:30 p.m. in the Vic Chapel on the question, "What Do You Really Want?" This will be followed by an informal musicale and discussion in Wymilwood.

The Monday and Tuesday talks will be at five o'clock in the Alumni Hall. Speaker will be the Ft. Rev. Willard Brewing, moderator of the United Church.

Baha'i Speaker

Miss Mae McKenna, B.Sc. (McGill), of Vancouver, B.C., will be he guest speaker at an open meeting of the Baha'i Student Group at 1 p.m. today. A member of the National Spiritual Assembly of the Baha'is of Canada, Miss McKenna has spoken throughout Canada on the subject of the Baha'i World Faith. Her subject: The Unity of the Universe.

A Guide In a Hurry

How To Get Places Fast

By LENORE KERT

New Yorkers are noted for their speed. Why walk when you can run? seems to be their motto. These New Yorkers had better look to their laurels, though, for we know of a group that make them seem like sluggish turtles (and not the chocolate ones either!)

These new speed demons are commonly known as university students, U. of T. ones, in particular. If you have ever tried to enter the front door of a college just as an avalanche of students is swarming out, you should know exactly what I mean. It gets really exciting if you are the adventurous type and you are hoping to enter the Economics Building at the same time that a throng of college St.-bound people are attempting to leave. It is rather like a game in which the irresistible force meets the immovable object and the first one to weaken, i.e. get knocked down, loses. Although this sport is just oodles of fun, all 97-pound weaklings had better consult a Mr. C. Atlas before they start playing.

Only One Aegrotat

If you want to ensure your success at this game of seeing who can get there the fastest, there are several simple rules to follow. First of all, when trying to make a lecture, allow yourself no more than 30 seconds (if the lecture is at Vic and you are at Baldwin House, allow 45 seconds). Secondly, if you absolutely must rush so fast that you fall and break a leg, refrain from doing this until April. Remember, however, that you are only allowed one aegrotat during your entire course.

Thirdly, and this is most important, acquaint yourself with all the short cuts on campus. Do not be fooled into taking any short cuts which are really long cuts. To be absolutely sure about this, measure the distance the long way and then compute the perimeter of the area of the short way (I don't know what that phrase means either, but I once heard an Engineer use it. Just ask the next one who passes by and maybe he can explain it to you).

Philosopher's Short Cut

As one of The Varsity's services for freshmen and unobservant senior students, herewith is a guide to the short cut taker. The most obvious is Philosopher's Walk which runs from Hoskin to Bloor St., between the Museum and the Economics Building. You can also run down a hill behind the main Library and then, having gathered enough momentum, run up a hill and you will be at Queen's Park Crescent. There are several paths that lead from UC to St. George St. Speaking of UC, in addition to the staircase leading to the basement on the east side, there is another staircase on the west side. UC is full of hidden staircases like that—in fact there is talk of awarding a prize to the first person who finds all 637 of them. Looking for these staircases is almost as much fun as hunting for the free phones that are scattered here and there about the campus.

Now that you know the rules and a few of the self-evident short cuts, you can play the game in earnest. Remember, the race is to the swift!

Mars A-Bomb "Just A Cloud" —Dunlap Men

Speculation that the reported 'explosion' on Mars might be due to an atom bomb was scouted by astronomers at the David Dunlap Observatory in an interview with The Varsity last night.

According to information received at the Dunlap from Walter Haas, Professor at the University of Texas, all indications are that the cloud seen by Tsuneo Saeki of Osaka, Japan, was nothing more than an ordinary cloud of a type occasionally observed on Mars. Such clouds are presumed to be due to fine crystals of ice, but there is a slight chance that volcanic action may be involved.

No observations of Mars in connection with the cloud have been made or are contemplated with the 74 inch telescope of the Observatory, according to the director, Dr. Frank S. Hogg, head of the Department of Astronomy.

Post Columnist Napier Moore To Address UC Lit

Napier Moore, Financial Post columnist and former editor of McLean's Magazine, will address the U.C. open Lit meeting in the J.C.R. at 8 o'clock this evening. His topic will be "A Pressman's Notebook."

Four amendments to the Lit Constitution are also to be proposed. These concern amalgamation, athletics, fees, and the duties of the Lit Social Director.

First will be an amendment to eliminate the word "male" from the Lit Constitution. This would mean Lit W.U.A. amalgamation in event of a favorable vote this spring, said Lit President Jack Hoolihan. The second amendment would fix the allotment to the Athletic Board as a minimum of three dollars per man per year, subject to Athletic Board lowering.

The final pair of amendments would provide that the Social Director by a Second, Third, or Fourth year man. At present the Social Director must be from the third year class. The other would have the Follies D irector appointed by the Social Directors of the Lit. and W.U.A., subject to the approval of these bodies, and the Social Directors be responsible for the entire social program of the college.

ELECTIONS TODAY OF CALEDON HILLS CLUB EXECUTIVE

Nomination and election of officers of the Caledon Hills farm will be held today at 5 p.m. in the anteroom of the Hart House Debates room. Only members of the Outing Club of Hart House are eligible to vote, while all undergraduate members of Hart House may join the club.

Membership fees are $1.50 for undergraduate members of Hart House, and $2.50 for non-member undergraduates. For faculty and graduates the fee is $3.

The members have been doing some of the rough work over the last few weekends, and have arrived at a standard price for outers: 50 cents per night, and 45 cents per meal.

The members who have availed themselves of these trips have brought back tales of great fun. Among the mighty hazards encountered on their trip were the cooking of cats (city-style turned out tasty) and Canasta. You can't get away from it all.

Look Like Woodchunks

If you've seen the All-Varsity Revue already, you'll understand this. Frankly, we haven't yet and don't. All we know is that these girls in their strait-jackets (plus tails) seem to be whirling about looking happy. But this is a part of the AVR and looks pretty appetizing.

UNICEF Tag Day, Dance To Be Held On Campus

UNICEF comes to the campus this week. Taggers for the United Nations International Children's Emergency Fund will be at strategic points on the campus next Thursday, collecting dimes from passing students — and every dime they collect will supply a hungry child with a glass of milk for a week. And if that isn't reason enough for a donation, you can buy a ticket for the UNICEF dance after the All-Varsity Revue Friday night. It's a good way to make a painless donation.

Although this is the first time that a UNICEF drive has been held on the campus, the organization has been working on European child relief for the last four years. The original funds came from UNNRA and the U.N. Appeal for Children, with which it was merged.

Goods Not Cash

UNICEF aids children in countries throughout the world by supplying food, clothing, and medical supplies. Recipient countries in order to receive the aid, however, must match the amount supplied by UNICEF. The actual UNICEF aid more often takes the form of goods than cash, and the receiving nation must pay freight and storage charges.

Heaviest contributor to the fund so far has been the U.S. The United Kingdom contributions have mainly taken the form of penicillin, while Poland sends sugar, Greece supplies fruits, and rice is sent from Siam. The Canadian contribution takes the form of meats and milk.

No Power Politics

Power politics are unknown as far as UNICEF is concerned. They aid children on either side of the "Iron Curtain," the amount of aid being limited only by the UNICEF budget and the amount that the nations aided are willing to match.

Since UNICEF was formed in 1946, the organization has aided five million children. They have sent food and clothing to children in the Middle East; they maintain sanitaria for tubercular children in virtually every European nation; they are working desperately to chack the spread of malaria in Asia; and they are sending drugs, X-ray equipment, and other medical supplies for juvenile aid the world over.

Petition Governm't To Outlaw H-Bomb Peace Council Plan

A petition to the Canadian government to outlaw the H-bomb will be circulated on the campus this week, the University of Toronto Peace Council announced yesterday. A four-point plan with the banning of the atomic and H-bombs as primary objectives was outlined by Peace Council President Omar Walmsley in the same statement.

Should Outlaw H-Bomb

Major feature of the plan is the outlawing of all atomic weapons, while other points suggested were the resumption of East-West trade, encouragement of the development of atomics for peaceful uses, and support of the U.N. as the channel through which all international differences should be settled.

Walmsley said that Einstein has predicted that at least two thirds of humanity will be destroyed if an atomic war breaks out. Thus we must not despair and feel that this is none of our business, he said, and announced that the Peace Council will circulate a petition to the Government to sponsor a U.N. motion to outlaw all atomic weapons.

The Peace Council feels that the most important objective is to have all atomic weapons banned. In addition they advocate destruction of existing American and Russian atomic stockpiles, and international inspection. Walmsley said "the only alternative to this plan, a race for the H-bomb, will lead inevitably to a showdown and atomic war." He also stated, however, that he felt that research in the use of atomic energy for peaceful purposes should be encouraged.

Would Resume Trade

He proposed that trade be resumed between the western nations and China, Eastern Europe, and Russia, saying that rising unemployment in Canada due to the loss of markets abroad is indirectly adding to East-West tension by creating economic crisis in the West, and that world trade is essential for peace.

Final point in the Peace Council statement was that the U.N. should be supported as the one body by which current and future international problems may be peacefully arbitrated.

COMMUNISM NOT CRIME WESTERN DEBATERS SAY

Humanities Gain Students' Favor At Princeton U.

Princeton, N.J., Feb. 6—(UPress)—For the first time in many years the humanities have found more favor among Princeton University students than have the courses in the social sciences, it was learned today.

An analysis of undergraduate course selections shows that the average Princeton student is now spending more classroom-hours studying philosophy, religion, English, music and art than the several social sciences, his former preference. He ranks the remaining sciences third.

Special programs in the humanities, including American civilization, Near Eastern studies and creative writing, have all experienced increasing enrollments.

The flight away from the social sciences to the humanities came as no surprise to Dr. J. Douglas Brown, dean of the Princeton faculty, who regards it as a "persistent trend" that commenced shortly after the end of the war.

"This indicates that young men realize that the answers to many of the problems facing the world today lie in the humanities, where they may gain an understanding of the age-old values which have been the strength of western civilization," he said.

The survey showed that 41 per cent of the total courses elected by Princeton students for the spring term were in the field of the humanitis. For the 1948 fall term this figure was 32.8 per cent; the 1949 spring term, 35 per cent; and the 1949 fall term, 38 per cent.

Course elections in the social sciences, including the study of economics, politics, history and psychology, have dropped from 36.5 per cent to 33 per cent over a similar period. The pure sciences have also declined from 30.7 per cent to 26 per cent.

U of T Act 1947

How The University Ticks

By LENORE KERT

It does not take long for the average student to learn where the main buildings on campus are — he soon knows them all, from the Zion Church to the Drill Hall. But ask him even the simplest question about who runs the University and he is completely baffled. A sad state of affairs indeed, especially when there's a handy little 49-page booklet just bursting with information of this type.

This booklet contains the 1947 revision of the University of Toronto Act of 1906. Victoria University and Trinity College, considered to be universities in their own right because they can award degrees, became federated with the University in that year as well as such colleges as Knox, Wycliffe, St. Michael's and Emmanuel. Other colleges which became merely affiliated with the University include the Ontario Agricultural College, the Ontario College of Art and St. Hilda's, to name a few.

In spite of the occasional use of complicated legal terminology, the Act is extremely easy to understand. Any university federated with the University has the power of conferring degrees only in theology, and the federation can be dissolved if the university so desires.

The democratic spirit of the Act is shown in Article 7 which states that no religious test shall be required of any professor lecturer, teacher officer or servant of the University or of University College or of any student thereof or therein, nor shall religious observances according to the forms of any religious denomination or sect be imposed on them. A federated university or college retains the right to make such provision in regard to religious instruction and worship for its own students as it may deem proper and to require the same to be observed as part of its own discipline.

The three groups who do the actual governing of the University are the Board of Governors, the Senate, and the Caput. The first of these consists of two ex-officio members, the Chancellor and the President of the University and 22 persons appointed by the Lieutenant-Governor in Council. Although the Act lists 23 important powers of the Board, this list will be considerably shorter. The Board can appoint the President, Deans, professors, etc., subject to the approval of the President, arrange investments and expenditures, and decide on the amounts of the fees. It may alter the constitution, and enable students to form themselves into a committee which shall be the recognized official medium of communication on behalf of such students between them and the Board.

The composition of the Senate is more involved. It has about 10 ex-officio members, representatives from all the Faculties and from almost every other group that has anything at all to do with campus life — even all the graduates of various courses elect a certain number of Senate members.

Since it has only 20 powers, they will be easier to enumerate. These powers include granting cancelling or suspending degrees, establishing fellowships, scholarships, etc., as well as faculties and departments, determining certain courses of study, preparing calendars, taking care of the library and making such recommendations to the Board as may be deemed proper for promoting the interests of the University.

You And The Four Freedoms

(From the Georgian, St. George College, Montreal)

If you read the Saturday Evening Post, Time Magazine, Life, et al, and listen to Winchell, Thomas and the others, then in all probability you are quite familiar with the "freedoms" of our time. If not, then much costly publicity has gone to waste.

There is freedom of speech, assembly, press. religion. Freedom from fear and want. And so on and on. There are few who have contemplated the irony of the situation.

RELIGION

There is freedom of religion—all religions. You can go to churches, synagogues, and temples within the city. Of course, when a religious group dominates a section then a minority group will find it rather hard to set up a tent, let alone a place of worship. There is no lack of religious toleration. If you happen, quite by accident of birth, to be a member of a minority religious group, and find that schools and colleges have set up a standard quota against your group; or if you find that resorts suddenly and without explanation have no accommodation for you, and if you find that you are shunned in certain social circles, there is no need to take offence—it will all come out in the wash.

FEAR

There is talk of freedom from fear—so stop shaking. The cold war, talk of depression, high prices, atomic bombs, death and taxes are nothing to cause worry. Of course nothing can be done about it—except sit around long tables and talk and make promises. The cold war may become at any moment slightly hotter than Hades. Do not be afraid, for life after the next war will be quite tolerant and people will get on with each other much better. They will have to. There won't be enough beings around to choose sides in the event of an argument.

SPEECH

Talk all you want. About anything at any time. Especially politics. If you belong to the "right" political party you can talk your head off. If your political party is in the minority though, arrange your bail beforehand. But if you are a member of a minority don't worry about your audience. At least ten to twenty members of anti-subversive squads will be on hand. (If one reads the ads for freedom of speech paid for by their sincerity. May it be said that they don't practise what they preach?) But if these "legal" hindrances are thrown across your path, don't worry. Your ends are achieved in any case. You become a martyr. Citizens begin to wonder why the authorities are so opposed to your right to present your ideas. This will sway people's minds in your favor—and that's good as far as you are concerned.

In conclusion, these freedoms of which we speak are present. Of course they are. Be sure to uphold all of them in your own little way. Before you crawl into bed tonight, say your prayers—they might act as a balm to your conscience.

Our Readers Write

The H-Bomb

Editor, The Varsity:

"The H-bomb will bring the kingdom of Hell on Earth." Well,—is this supposed to be the Kingdom of Heaven? Why are they so scared of death? Is it not contrary to their principles to be fearful of other than physical demise? "Now with the H-bomb they are threatening to kill all who disagree with them with one searing blow." What revolting nonsense and sheer propaganda!

Who can ever disagree under Communist barbarism without being exterminated as an enemy of the State? Why don't they take their heads out of the sand and look at a few cold facts? What about those innocent subjugated millions dying the slow horrible death of torture and starvation in slave-labor camps in countries under Communist control?

"We do not want to die"—it's obvious you don't. But "we do not want to kill"—well, I'm glad to hear that. But why don't the Communist cohorts stop worrying about the H-bomb and start putting into practice what they preach?

Likes H-Bomb Issue

Editor, The Varsity:

Congratulations on your Monday issue. What struck me most was the student comment. If those are the conclusions reached by our intellectual elite then we really have cause for alarm.

After listening to thousands of sermons on Christian morality, after absorbing the wisdom of Socrates and the beauty of Shakespeare the university student's immediate response to a question of moral action is the blind reaction of the cornered jungle beast—"Slash before you're slashed at, maim and kill; if only you can destroy enough you can get out of any hole."

What kind of education and morality have we if, as soon as we reach a crisis, we dump it all overboard and revert to the law of the jungle?

To say that "the situation is forced on us" is of course true. So is every situation forced on us. The question is how do we respond—Like homicidal maniacs or like rational men? Do we have a rational morality that we can use as a guide in the real world, or do we act as blindly as jungle beasts and save our "morality" for sermons on Sunday?

Those who say "Kill them before they kill us" must believe that death and destruction are the final forces, the deciding factors that shape history—But are they?

We may not like to face the fact, but the Communists know better than this, and they are putting their knowledge to work.

Throughout the world the Americans are talking of bigger, more terrible bombs, more death and more suffering. The Communists are talking of better living conditions, more food to eat, more clothes to wear; a better world.

China today answers the question as to which side wins in this struggle. When the choice is between life and death the people choose life; and the world moves forward.

If we are so morally bankrupt that we put our faith only in blind destruction then we are ready for the ashcan of history along with Timurlane and the Nazi legions. The world turns to those who offer life not death.

Didn't Like Concert

Editor, The Varsity:

It was my misfortune to have attended the performance, if one may call it such, of the Toronto Symphnoy Orchestra last Wednesday night. The entire performance, with the exception of the "Drum Roll" symphony of Haydn, was poorly done. The pitiful efforts of Sir Ernest MacMillan in conducting the string section in the Academic Festival Overture changed it from an excellent overture to a disgusting failure. The attempts of the Toronto Symphony Orchestra to make the audiences aware of modern music will continue to be a failure as long as such pitiful and anaemic works like the Bartok "Concerto for Orchestra" are offered.

To quote Mr. Ferguson: "It is not pretty music nor is it pleasant or full of lyric beauty." Nor is it even satisfactory. I would suggest that this is one of the reasons for the Symphony running in the red. I suggest that the programs are in such poor taste, are so badly played, and are reviewed in such a lousy manner that people begin to believe that it would be a waste of time to attend them. I also believe that as long as they are reviewed in such a manner as I read in Friday's Varsity, it will be a waste of time to read these reviews.

CUTE DEMMIES

Editor, The Varsity:

In reply to your "story" about M. P. & C.
We take pen in hand to protest
That the verdict proclaimed
Was terribly maimed—
We think that our course is the best!

Yes, the work may be hard, and the problems are many
In Calculus, Physics, and Chem;
Lots of lab work to boot,
(But the demmies are cute)
Did you say we don't care for men?

As for settling down on a Saturday night
With an involution or two—
We have our own fun—
"Is your lab book done?"
And—"About that Chem. test that's due . . ."

What with slide rules to use and engineers near us
There's never been a dull minute!
So it's dark before dawn?
Well, we'll just carry on,
We know why we're here, and proud of it.

(II) If we turn professional, we open the door to vicious practices and prostitution of principles. Surely, under these circumstances, the only defensible thing to do is to stop playing and sell the stadium to someone who is prepared to open the door mentioned in (II) above.

Two For Tea

In A Din Of Sirens

By PETER WADE

We ate with the girls at Whitney Hall the other day. Wasn't any trick in it at all, either.

Bill Glenesk, Art, Music and Drama Editor came up to me last Thursday and nonchalantly said. "I've been invited to eat tomorrow at Whitney Hall,—want to come?"

"Sure Bill, I'll go just to keep you company though. Do they eat by candle light, Bill? If so, maybe we should go formal."

Dress—Strictly Dressed

"Oh there's nothing like that. Put a tie on and you'll be all right."

At the appointed hour we popped through the door of Mulock House to meet our hostess, Joan Crysdale, head girl. She showed us to the cloakroom and mentioned that the other girls didn't know we were coming. "Oh we'll give them a little surprise." Then she ushered us into the common room where hundreds of girls (someone said there were just sixty, but there seemed more to me) sat chatting and knitting and playing cards.

Pause . . . Click-Click

We stood in the centre of the room. Everything stopped for a minute, or was it for a second. Then the knitting needles started to click, the card players bent their heads and resumed their game.

We had been introduced to only five or six of the girls, when a great reverberation filled the room. Thinking this was a signal for a fire or something, I was about to rescue two or three young things when they insisted that I put them down, it was only the dinner gong, they said.

We followed our hostess into the dining room where six or seven tables with very white table cloths, each with a beautiful bouquet of daffodils awaited us. They shouldn't have done it . . .

No Miss Ferguson

Now Joan was sure that Miss Ferguson would be presiding at the Women's Union that night so the coast would be clear. Just as we were about to sit down, Miss Ferguson made an unexpected entrance. Naturally I tried to hide. But too late, she had spotted us.

"Good evening boys, glad to see you," she said, and sat down at our table. It turned out that she had known all the time, and didn't seem to mind at all.

It was a very enjoyable meal, believe me. Joan was sitting across from me, and beside her a dream in brown sweater. You know, brown is my favourite colour. Oh yes indeed . . .

Yes, Miss Ferguson

After dessert we adjourned to the common room for coffee and small talk. You know girls are very interesting conversationalists, and they're interesting too.

Well . . . well we better go home now. Yes, I'm for the opera myself, said Bill.

"Don't all look at me," I said. "You see, I swore off girls till the exams are over."

"Good-night Miss Ferguson, bye girls, see you at the milk bar."

Saskatchewan Farmers Support Students' Union With Wheat "Tithe" Plan

Saskatoon—Feb. 6—(CUP)—The first pledge of one acre of the 1950 wheat crop for the U. of Saskatchewan Memorial Union Building fund has been received. The pledge came in a letter from W. L. Kirkpatrick, a farmer in the Cory district for the last 35 years. In donating he said, "donating on an acreage basis seems a fair and natural way for farmers to contribute money for such a worthy cause as the Memorial Building".

The wheat acreage plan, announced last week is to ask Saskatchewan's 120,000 farmers to contribute the produce of one acre of wheat to the university building fund.

Communism And Democracy: Two Ideals

In yesterday's H-Bomb special issue, The Varsity attempted to examine some of the implications of the world crisis that has been so sharply accentuated by the pronouncement of work on the hydrogen fusion bomb.

In this connection, two faculty members, Professor H. Northrop Frye of the Victoria College English Department and Professor D. P. Dryer of the Department of Philosophy, have been asked to offer careful examinations of the ideals of Democracy and Communism. The left-hand article by Professor Dryder deals with Russian Communism. The right-hand article by Professor Frye studies the stand of western democracy.

THE IDEAL OF COMMUNISM

It is not customary for a nation to debate openly whether to develop a new and more formidable weapon of war. Yet such is the strange spectacle we have been witnessing in the United States: The decision to produce the hydrogen bomb has rested with the President alone. Wide and deep have been men's misgiving at embarking on so frightful a course; yet with this decision men in the western world have regretfully but overwhelmingly agreed. Not only do men fear that this weapon will make another major war far more terrible than the last. Some dread also that its destructiveness will be so complete that nations will be unable to recover from it; the things which make life worth living will perish with the collapse of civilization; and such peoples as survive will be forced back to a barbaric existence. Others have more confidence in the capacity of nations to recuperate. Yet they fear that while civilization will survive, it will be rendered harsh and oppressive as nations gird themselves to survive a succession of wars of annihilation.

Arm For Peace?

Why, then, are the United States and her allies willing for her to prepare for such a war? The better the preparation, it is argued, the better the chance of deterring an enemy and the better the chance of winning should war break out. What enemies have the western nations to fear, such that they are willing to risk so catastrophic a war? Russia and her satellites, it is answered; they constitute a double threat. They proclaim that war with the west is inevitable, they believe it, they prepare for it. Defeat at her hands would be not merely defeat in battle, it is further contended; she would extinguish the way of life the western nations cherish and subject them to a brutal and oppressive regime as she has her neighbors since 1945. What makes Russia and her allies so fearful, it is argued, is the ideal of communism they serve.

Is it true that the Communist ideal renders war so much more likely and so much more to be feared? If we look to the ideal of communism we find, that at least three distinct and independent things may be meant. By it may be meant either the aims of the present Russian regime, or the principal teachings of Karl Marx, or a perennial ideal which is the property of man or people. The ideal of communism, without qualification, is but the idea that the good society is that where there is common ownership of things. It is argued for this that private possessions set men and nations in strife with each other, enable one to oppress another, while only under common control can things be intelligently used for the common good. Communism may obtain in different degrees. An extreme communism would be a communism of wives. A still more extreme communism for which no one has argued would be a common ownership of everybody's person. Every present-day democracy has some measure of communism. Taken in this urqualified sense, there is nothing about the ideal of communism which would prevent a nation embodying it from living at peace with her non-communist neighbours.

Marx Tenets of Communism

Karl Marx was concerned not with formulating such an ideal but with shaping a theory of how to bring it about. The ideal of communism is used in a second sense to refer to this theory and the analysis of the forces at work in history on which it was based. The main tenets of Marxism are these: A society having common ownership of the means of production can only be brought about by eliminating the 'capitalists', the class having private property in the means of production. By means of their control of these the capitalists exploit and oppress everyone else. The state is but a means by which the capitalist class maintains its position by force. Hence the oppressed, the propertyless, the 'proletariat', must use force to take control of the state. With the elimination of capitalists the state will pass away, and with it war between states, for capitalist competition, and only it, makes for war today. Marxism is both the elaboration of how these things may be brought about and the theory that they will inevitably come about.

The Paradox

If one believes in Marxism one must believe that among capitalist nations war is inevitable, that if a nation turns communist capitalist nations will inevitably make war upon it, that eventually communism will, inevitably, be victorious throughout the world, and then there will, inevitably, be no war. If the rulers of a nation are Marxists, they will be disposed to welcome any war as hastening the spread of world communism; they will accept war as inevitable until then; they will take part with non-communist nations in organizations to prevent war only to distract and weaken them; and they will face the prospect of war sublimely confident that not the death of civilization but the advent of communism will be its outcome. If then we mean by the ideal of communism the teachings of Marx, nations which follow this ideal are especially to be feared by others. For other nations must reckon with the fact that regardless of whether Marxism is true or false, a belief that Marxism makes a nation more ready to precipitate war upon them and more dangerous as a partner to any agreement for the avoidance of war. But if Marxism is true, the peoples of the western world have little reason to fear that defeat by Marxist nations would be followed by enslavement to a brutal regime.

Illusions Illuminated

Yet recent history gives them reason to fear that this would be the consequence of defeat in war by the present Russian regime. Hence by the ideal of communism we may mean in the third place merely the aims and methods ultimately governing the actual policies of the present regime in Russia. It is widely taken for granted that these three meanings of communism are identical, that the age-old idea of a communist society can be achieved by the methods Marx advocated, that Russia is ruled by Marxist

THE IDEAL OF DEMOCRACY

All governments whatever must be either the expression of the will of a minority holding autonomous power, which is able to impose that will on society as a whole, or the expression of the will of the people as a whole to govern themselves. In the former case there is an antithesis between a ruling class and the ruled classes; in the latter case there is no governing class, but only a group of executives and public servants responsible to society as a whole for what they do. The latter conception of government is the democratic one.

Aim of Democracy

Democracy is thus essentially the attempt to preserve law and order in society which has superseded the primitive and outmoded idea of "rule". A monarchy may be democratic, as in Great Britain, but only if the king is conceived as reigning rather than ruling. But the cardinal democratic principle of limiting autonomous power applies to the majority as well. Unanimity being unobtainable in human society, the deciding force of democratic political action is normally the will of the majority; but democracy is very far from being merely the expression of the will of the people. The unconditioned will even of a majority could bring about as great a tyranny as the unconditioned will of a single ruler. The energy and dynamic of a democracy derive from majority rule; its balancing and preserving principle is minority right.

Creative, Not Dominant

In other words, the expression of the popular will will bring freedom only insofar as it is an informed will directed toward a desirable end. The conception of what the desirable end is must be built up from a conflicting body of minority opinions. A democracy must, therefore, adopt the principle of toleration of variety in opinion and an inductive and empiric attitude to opinion in general. All kinds of religious views, of political programs, of scientific and philosophical conceptions, must be given free play. The limiting principle of such toleration is that all opinions should as far as possible be publicized, that is, submitted to the people as a whole. The publicizing of various opinions is democratic education in the broadest sense, the informing of the popular will by the individuals or minorities who have something to contribute to it. To use Toynbee's language for a different purpose, in a democracy all minorities must be creative minorities, never dominant ones.

Anti-democratic social action, of the kind intolerable to a democracy, must necessarily be in the direction of withdrawing information and action from the community as a whole. It is a contradiction in terms for a democracy to tolerate a conspiratorial coup d'état aimed at the restoration of the old idea of a professional ruling class.

The Political Theory

Democracy being a political theory only, it needs an economic structure to complete itself. Originally this economic structure was laissez-faire capitalism, which aided the growth of democracy by playing a revolutionary role against the old hereditary concretions of power and privilege which had come down from feudal times. By now laissez faire is in considerable danger of developing into an oligarchic dictatorship or managerial system, and revolutionary democratic action now takes the form of using the democratic machinery of government, the Parliament, the civil service and the cabinet, to control the productive industrial economy to the point of making its actions known to the people as a whole and responsible to them. Along with this has grown what is coming to be known as the "welfare state", the attempt to integrate the economy of society more closely with its government.

The Economic Content

Democracy is thus compelled at present to wage war on two fronts, against the dangers of a revolutionary coup d'état coming from either end of the economic structure. These two threats are generally known as fascism and communism respectively, and both have as their aim the total control of government by a small ruling class within the economic structure. Both, therefore, aim at managerial dictatorships, and both claim to be fighting, not democracy, but one another. Both claim that democracy is merely the propaganda-facade of its real enemy. The problem of democracy at present is to oppose both threats to its existence without being frightened by either into becoming the catspaw of the other.

Heartbreak House

Shavian comedies with their clever satire, and epigrammatic wit place great demands on those who enact them. The New Play Society's presentation of Heartbreak House at the Museum Theatre, Friday evening, successfully caught the essence of Shaw. Though occasionally prosaic, this performance will perhaps prove to be the best of their productions this year.

In the preface to his play Shaw states "Heartbreak House is not merely the name of the play. It it cultured, leisured Europe before the war." The other alternative to Heartbreak House is Horseback Hall, whose inhabitants—the sporty, earthy, riding groups—are not interested in culture. Some people are born misplaced and either languish among the stables or stride through the drawing rooms.

In Heartbreak House the inhabitants must depict the various types of the cultured world. To observe this superficiality, this air of bored sophistication; and to show the determination with which they achieve their aims, and at the same time to maintain reality is the players' task.

The comedy resolves around the week-end guests at Heartbreak House, the home of Hesione and her husband, Hector Hushabye.

The complexities of relationships and the involved love affairs show the fallacies of the culture which they satirize. A bombing raid is the final event which arouses the inhabitants from their lethargy. Only victims of this raid are the practical men of business — the capitalist and the burglar — who had gone for safety to a near-by gravel pit.

Most consistent and best performance was that of Margot Christie as Hesione. Her character had brilliance of quality with many facets of hussy, superficiality, sympathy and maternal wisdom. Robert Christie, as her husband, Hector, was disappointingly weak and vacillating in his characterization. He never quite grasped the essence of Hector.

Toby Robins' weakest performance was in the opening scene where, instead of establishing the strength of her character, she appeared rather like a bewildered schoolgirl one minute and the next like a sophisticated and impudent miss. However, as the play progressed she fully realized the purposeful determination inherent in the role and gave a note of hope to the final scene.

Captain Shotover as played by W. H. Brodie, was the element of truth and reality in the strange household. Many of his speeches contained much of the philosophy of the play. Although he claimed to be in his second childhood his actions were often too vigorous and spry for a man of 88 years.

Pegi Brown as the fabulously beautiful Lady Utterwood was the sophisticated, hard woman-of-the-world. Under her superficiality are present many doubts and fears and she successfully noted these for her audience.

Lorne Greene as the crass materialist, imbued his part with the turbulence of feeling and the apprehensions of a person removed from his natural sphere into a bewildering world.

Don Giovanni

For the past three years Toronto radio audiences have been listening to the voice of the Royal Conservatory Opera Company; at last, with the advent of the Opera Festival, they are seeing it in the flesh. The performance of Mozart's Don Giovanni at the Royal Alexandra is a perfect synthesis of the three principles adopted by the company as their motto: Drama, Music, and Decor. Formerly, for broadcasting purposes, the emphasis was placed on music. Staging the opera called for an equal stress on all three. Although there is often a danger that theatre will dominate and music will become incidental, conductor Nicholas Goldschmidt and stage director Herman Geiger-Torel achieved a fine balance between the two. Keeping a restraining and controlling hand on the orchestra, Goldschmidt underlined the dramatic character of the music. While the stage was always full of movement the activity enhanced the singing rather than detracting from it.

Edmund Hockridge as the notorious hero, Louise Roy as Donna Anna, and Jan Rubes as first Donna Anna's father who is killed by Giovanni, and then as his ghost who accepts his murderer's invitation to dinner, all turned in fine dramatic performances. Outstanding among the singers was Pierre Boutet, although as Donna Anna's betrothed he held a weak part. His voice is light and flexible, his interpretations sensitive and convincing. In the scene in which he swears vengeance upon the unknown murderer of the Commendatore of Seville he held the audience purely by the power of his voice, with neither gestures nor actions to aid him.

The strain of comedy which predominated in the opera was heavily underscored by the antics of Andrew MacMillan as Leporello, Don Giovanni's quick-witted servant whose chief function is to get his amorous master out of trouble. He struck attitudes and poses, leapt and bounded about the stage, capjolled or thundered as the occasion demanded, and when otherwise unoccupied, kept up a steady flurry of stage business; yet his capers never degenerated into buffoonery. The clownish but persistent peasant Masetto sung by Glen Gardiner, and his coquettish bride-to-be, Zerlina (Marguerite Gignac), added to the spirit of horseplay. The scene in which Zerlina begs Masetto to beat her if he is really angry with her was a highlight of the evening.

The tragic element in the opera is submerged except when the austere figure of Donna Anna appears upon the scene like nemesis. Louise Roy's magnificent portrayal of victim and avenger threw a sombre shadow across the light and careless gaiety, portending the terrible doom of the hero.

Elizabeth Benson Guy blended tragic and comic in the character of Donna Elvira, one of Don Giovanni's many conquests. Instrumental in revealing the identity of the Commendatore's murderer, she is a fury personified in her hatred for her one time lover. Yet she is a figure of high comedy, and contributes greatly to the general mirth, even though the laughter is often at her own expense.

The standard of excellence in singing and production can only be equalled by the colourful and atmospheric stage decor designed by Lydia and George Englesmith. The new opera company is off with a spectacular bang.

Radio: Stage 50

With the H-Bomb so recently in the news, Lister Sinclair's new radio play, The Man In The Blue Moon is both timely and significant. It deals with the right of science to make destruction-dealing discoveries and once having made them, where the responsibility lies.

For the purposes of dramatic presentation, Dr. Chitterling, winner of the Nobel Peace Prize for the discovery of an annihilating ray, is subjected to an imagination test and with the resulting fear of what he has done, begins to search for someone who can assume the responsibility ray, but finds that he, Matthew Chitterling is as responsible as is the rest of mankind and must continue to bear the burden. In the meantime, Mr. Sinclair stabs at isolationism, mob panic, red-baiting, and discusses the effect a-

VIC'S CORNER

The "Corner" is conducting a survey of college opinion on college columns. It began last week, but the only real outcome was the editorial reply, which missed the argument, and hence didn't help much in furthering the survey.

Now, however, the editors of The Varsity have consented to assist in the poll. There should be a little "extra" somewhere in the effort today. But don't waste time looking for it now, just make a point of filling in the little form below and drop it into the VCU or Varsity offices.

If you haven't time, phone RA. 0415 (VCU) or MI. 6256 (U.C.) and "leave your opinion." There is someone there from 10-2 p.m. week days.

What we want to know is this: 1) do (or did) you read your college column (this for UC and Skule too)? 2) do you think it is worthwhile for the college to pay for such columns in The Varsity? 3) have you any constructive suggestions?

If public opinion wants "college color" as is found in these columns, the editors of The Varsity will consider action in the future to meet this need. This does not mean they plan to take over the job of supplying college columns on their own, but they will think about it!

Rudigore, the production of the Vic Music Club, should not fade away without mention. Those who saw it will agree it was a wonderful effort.

Frankly, after seeing a show such as that, can only find words of praise! Granted, there were weak parts as there are in all shows, but knowing the amount of work that goes into such a production and the amount of personal sacrifice every member of the cast must make, any remarks ought to be directed to all of the cast in a tone of congratulation.

The men behind the scenes deserve mention here, especially Warren Hughes, Fred Langford and John Harvey who worked so hard on background scenery. But members of the Music Club did a grand job on administration details (Bert Sutcliffe, Don Newman, and Don Levitt).

It was a great job, well done!

Skating and Class Parties: Little Vic rink will be open to students on Thursday night this week, the weather permitting, for skating. There will be music too!

Class Parties are in the news again. The four years are pairing off to give two big splashes.

The 5T2-5T3 "Bi-Class Bounce" is this Saturday, Feb. 11, in Burwash Hall. It's taken the boys a long time to make up their minds, so it should be good! They may even have live music with all the dough they've got!

The 5T0-5T1 effort which melds (too much canasta these days!) every year for the benefit of those graduating in their 3rd as well as 4th years, will be held a week this Friday, Feb. 17. They, too, are working on a name.

Our debating team goes to Hamilton week-end of Feb. 17-18 too. That consists of Roy Neehall, Stan Kurisko, George Slater and Harry Greene.

VCSU and VCF: Next Sunday, 7:30 p.m., the Vic Church Students Union launch their project with a Chapel Service. Dr. Leslie will preach: "What do you really want?" A grand evening of worship, music and discussion has been planned. The whole college is invited to attend.

Monday, Feb. 13, Dr. Brewing will speak in Alumni Hall, 5 p.m. There will be evening service in Wymilwood.

Today, Vic Chapel, 1:20, Dr. Barr will talk on Fundamental Christianity. On Tuesday, Feb. 14, the film, "Dust of Destiny", will be shown.

Last-minute reminder to fill out applications for the Detroit Conference on 18th-19th.

Mathletics: Our Sr. Vic team spent the week-end in Clinton, N.Y., playing Clinton City Int. on Friday and Hamilton College on Saturday. They couldn't roll soon enough Friday and lost 8-6 but by Saturday they were in trim to take the college boys 6-2. Cheers for Bob Ralph (manager, coach, entertainer, etc.) and his "P-P's". They did themselves good.

The Athletic Directorate want to thank the coaches of SR and JR hockey teams for a swell job they are doing. Porky McDougall and Rich Howson are looking after them, in order named.

In major league Bball the hopes still ride on the 4ths and 5ths. They seem to be the only ones really in the running!

Indoor track seems to be the only weak sport for Vic as far as participation goes. Anyone but vaguely interested is welcome. Every man adds points to our Reed Trophy total.

Hockey games this week: Vic III vs Tr B, 4 p.m., Tues.; Vic IV vs Dent B, 4 p.m., Wed.; Jr Vic vs Tr A, 4 p.m., Thurs.

Gathletics: Our girls' hockey team is still in the running! They gave one to PHE (3-2) last week, but meet Trinity next week. Jeff says they will be in the finals, and they will.

There is going to be an intercollegiate game with Queen's on Feb. 17. Gals trying out for Varsity team should be out to practice this Friday.

Snoopography: The gal that represents us at SAC is 5' 4¾", just got the right to vote last Jan. 12, and comes from Grimsby. Name is Ruth Manning. A graduate in General this year, "Ruthless" says she plans to "work for a couple of years ... and well, probably just go on working!" Ha! If you have any ideas about a student union, the Blue and White, etc., let her know!

All The King's Men

Humpty Dumpty sat on the wall
Humpty Dumpty had a great fall..
All the king's horses and
All the king's men
Couldn't put Humpty Dumpty together again.

Robert Rossen is one of a small group of young and intelligent writer-director-producers who tries to break out of the trite Hollywood pattern of the star system and of the boy-gets-girl and the murder-will-out themes. In the Life magazine Round Table on Movies last summer, Rossen said.

"The American people stand ready to see pictures on much higher levels than any that have been projected before."

The newcomer to the screens of Shea's and Nortown theatres, All the King's Men, is proof positive of Rossen's belief. In the excellent Body and Soul, Rossen showed his skill in portraying slices of life in the raw to make this realism Entertainment. Using Robert Penn Warren's Pulitzer prize novel of a few years back, Rossen makes this actual hunk of American history (the Huey Long career or reasonable facsimile thereof) surge from the screen in all its vigor.

Unlike that other current and excellent picture, Edward Dmytryk's Give Us This Day, which leisurely broods upon its moods, All the King's Men hits the audience like the staccato punching of a boxer on a punching bag. Each scene hits you in the stomach and the next tags you again hard before you can cover up and massage the shocked nerves.

That ex-cowboy, underworld tough, and Damon Runyon's "Butch," Broderick Crawford, gives an intelligent and faithful portrayal of Willie Stark, the hick who became governor. John Ireland is believable as the reporter-henchman who finds out too late that Willie has feet of clay.

As in that other masculine film, Body and Soul, the women in All the King's Men are meant to be decorative and to keep out of the way. Mercedes McCambridge (a comer if she does not get typed) and Joanne Dru fit the bill well, showing their keen frustration at not being able to get Willie for themselves. They cannot because all of Willie is only for Willie.

All the King's Men breathes reality—there is not one sour note of phoniness. Carol Reed's The Fallen Idol has been acclaimed as a "best" picture. It was tremendous because of sheer directional brilliance. All the King's Men has the same brilliance, but it has more. It is life.

future belonging to science would have on the poet, the musician and the philosopher.

Because Mr. Sinclair chose to present his material in the form of dramatic fantasy, he is able to introduce a vast number of characters, each representing a different aspect of men's affairs, to change the scene of action swiftly and so to set a remorseless pounding pace. He is more successful in posing the problem than in solving it, but the setting has sufficient power to assure the play's significance.

One of the most striking scenes takes place at the carnival Chittering attends when he is persuaded to stop thinking, to relax and take it easy by a devil in angel's clothing. He appears as guest speaker at the carnival's opening and is introduced as the man who has made it possible for all men to be annihilated, regardless of class, race, or creed. The intonation peculiar to statesmen making pertinent announcements, and the rhythm of the applauding and senseless carnival mob combine to build up to a frenzied climax.

Headed by John Drainie, the cast successfully conveys Mr. Sinclair's masterly dialogue to the radio audience, and by effectively contrasting the scenes, ably maintains the pace set by the author. Lucio Agostini's music was almost a parody of "foreboding cadences," heroic themes and a loved one motif. In the ballroom scene, it overpowered the actors but on the whole, the music effectively played up the action.

The title Man In The Blue Moon may be taken to mean the isolation of Matthew Chitterling, but why at one point the moon turns blue was not made sufficiently clear.

Next week: a Lister Sinclair repeat, Hilda Morgan.

The 5-cent coin he slips in his pocket is pure Nickel. Nickel is a good metal for coins because it does not tarnish, and is so hard it wears well.

What's Nickel ...in his young life?

Just a few minutes ago, the newsboy's papers came pouring from the printing press. Presses must not break down. So parts subject to unusual wear and strain are made of Nickel alloys.

To turn this pile of logs into tomorrow's newspapers, rugged machinery will be used—also acids and other corrosive chemicals. That's why so much equipment in pulp and paper plants is made of Nickel and Nickel alloys.

In the trucks, trains and planes which distribute newspapers far and wide, Nickel Steel and other Nickel alloys prevent breakdowns and give long wear.

Forty-three years of research have uncovered hundreds of uses for Nickel in the United States and other countries. Now Nickel exports bring in millions of U.S. dollars yearly. These dollars help pay the wages of the 14,000 Nickel employees in Canada and also help pay Canadian railwaymen, lumbermen, iron and steel workers and other men and women making supplies for the Nickel mines, smelters and refineries.

"The Romance of Nickel" a 60 page book fully illustrated, will be sent free on request to anyone interested.

CAMPUS SHOW

All-Varsity Revue

The All-Varsity Revue of 1950 had its world premiere last night, and a very successful premiere it was.

The most impressive part of the show was a song sung by Judy Godfrey. Lookin' for a Man was "borrowed" for the occasion, and the manner in which Miss Godfrey sang it would have done credit to Ethel Merman.

The production numbers were generally good, Hart House Tower being really outstanding, a clever take-off on a musical poem called Manhattan Tower; the orchestration and choral work did full justice to the original.

Of the other numbers The Teddy Bears' Picnic eserves honourable mention. Jean McDonald and Jack Northmore clowned and mimicked their way through it as a little girl and boy. Northmore stole his little sister's all-day sucker while she manipulated her knees in true kindergarten coquetry.

One of the most difficult and least often successful things one sees in college shows is a serious interpretation of the Dawnce. Last night, however, was an exception. Rachael McKay was graceful and altogether charming in a ballroom waltz. She provided a most refreshing interlude between the more robust parts of the show.

A pleasant dash of smut was provided by a somewhat uninhibited analysis of literary trends in mbdern best sellers. Three "typical" novels were given a working-over, and in the space of two minutes the following astounding events were chronicled: three children were sent to bed without their supper by their strict, but impartial mother—one for dashing the brains of his playmate out with a rock; one (a young lady with sea-going figure) for spending three nights with some sailors, and the third for getting A's at school and saving his money. A young man tried to forget the horrors of a war, which he fought from Halifax, in the arms of a young lady. In the morning he took one look at her and left without his clothes. The third novel was historical; confronted by the bigger and better American bosom of a little southern belle, Napoleon retreated from St. Petersburg: "Never have so many owed so much to so much," remarked the Tsar, having favoured "the much" with an imperial embrace. Those were the good old days!

The rest of the show, sparked by Jack Hulme, Bob Osborne and Debby Turnbull, had a tendency to drag.

The chorus girls all kicked their legs at the same time which was pleasant, but the choreography showed little imagination.

Hulme's deadpan bulldog drumsticks was the only thing that saved the University Police skit.

What original music there was, was not outstanding, but the stolen songs were good. Northmore's two entr'actees were as successful in this show as they were in the S. and G. The script, much of which was written by Paul Break, was also rather well done.

This year marks the second all-university show the SAC has produced. If the present standard is maintained next year, a new tradition will be well established.

principles and is fulfilling Marx's prophecy of the coming of communism. Belief that these three are identical is widespread not only among the Russian people, not only among Russia's satellites, but also among her friends and opponents alike in other countries. The effect of this widespread belief is to give the Russian regime power over many peoples; support by the Russian people, by her neighbors, and by many in other lands. Yet the ultimate aim of the rulers of Russia is to be inferred not from not from what they profess alone but from what they do. Judged by this, the aim of the Russian regime is the aim of a small number of men in Russia to acquire and retain unlimited power over the Russian people, and over the peoples of other lands as far as they can. In its ultimate aims it is neither Marxist nor communist. Under it there is less communism in the perennial sense of common ownership than is to be found anywhere alse in the world. Since a principal source of their power is the illusion that they are both Marxist and communist, the rulers of Russia are not averse to fostering this illusion. They are to some measure captivated by this illusion themselves.

The Mask Removed

If we understand by the ideal of communism the actually ruling aims of the Russian regime, how do these effect the likelihood of war with the western nations, the way the west can maintain peace, the sort of defeat it would suffer? Defeat at the hands of the Russians would indeed be grievous, not because they are Marxist or communist because it would be a well entrenched and brutal tyranny. To the degree that they are wisely esteemed as Marxists, the Russian rulers are readier for war, counting thereby on greater support. In the past two years they have risked sacrificing this support, for they have sought rather to consolidate power at home by appealing to anti-Marxist sentiments — worship of Russia among the satellites and worship of Stalin among the Russians. The west can take heart from the consideration that the less the rulers of Russia are affected by Marxist ideas the less they are affected by the inducements to war that these instill. They are doubtless not so convinced of Marxism as to be confident that non-capitalist nations can not war with each other, that war offers no threat to civilization, or that their own sort of regime will inevitably triumph in a war. The causes which make the Russian regime capricious about adhering to agreements and capricious in initiating war are those which make any tryanny such. A tyrannical regime is poorly advised, is least deterred by popular dislike of war, is least concerned with the values war destroys. Most tyrannies are short-lived. The west must deal with Russia as a tyranny. It must ever reckon too with the glamor she gets from the mask of communism she wears.

Holden Men Home For Rest Of Sked McGill Here Friday

After two week-ends on the road, the Blues entertain McGill at home this Friday night at the arena. McGill stands third, immediately behind Varsity, though a comfortable distance behind.

All Home Games

The schedule from here in should give the Blues a break. They have played all their road games, and have four straight contests at home. Two games with McGill and one with Queen's will occupy the next three week-ends, and then comes the game that will either make them or break them — Carabins at Toronto.

The game with McGill this Friday starts at 8:15. Admission is free for students with ATL cards.

Speaking Of Sport

By BOB DNIEPER

Ed. Note: Mr. Dnieper's column did not appear yesterday not because he was blasted off the paper by the H-Bomb, but because he thought it was wise to go on vacation till Mr. John Metras's intentions were determined. Since Mr. Metras has not shown any homicidal tendencies, Mr. Dnieper has returned.

Now that Jim Coleman has quit the Globe and Mail, we may get him to write this column for us. Jim phoned up this office, and we kindly offered to give him a job; on a strictly trial basis, of course. As soon as plans and financial details are finalized, Mr. Coleman will write this column until such time as the editors feel he is not doing as good a job as we do. Look for Coleman's column next week or so.

"How much did you pay for that suit?"

"Ninety dollars."

"Boy, you were robbed!"

"Oh, I don't know; I got twenty-three pairs of pants with it!"

Having a quick look at the boxing show the Canzano Clouters put on at Athletic Night, we came to the conclusion that we would not like to be a boxer. Every day those poor fellows train and strain themselves pounding bags and pounding one another; then they get into the ring and pound each other some more. We give them a lot of credit for dishing it out and taking it, but it sure ain't for us. However, they put on swell bouts, and the senior intercollegiate matches should be pretty good.

The University of Toronto Hockey teams are flying high this year, and a couple of special huzzas should be thrown to the coaches — Wally Halder and Jack Life. The intermediates have really been fattening their scoring averages with their high scores. One kid on the intermediate squad has impressed us more than somewhat with his smart work around the opposition's net. Pete Gawinski seems to us to be a swell prospect for the next few years. He is only in his freshman year, and if he improves as well next year as he has this year, Halder will have one great goal-getter.

As far as basketball is concerned, we can see two prospects on the high school horizon. One boy is from Jarvis Collegiate Institute (just a couple of blocks from Varsity); he's a tall, tall man, and a good basketball player. He's got a wonderful hook shot and is tall enough not to be bothered by jumping guards. In a game at Hart House he potted 32 points against East York and put up a great defensive game even though his team lost.

The other boy comes from York Memorial; and we don't know much about him except that he'd be a welcome addition to Varsity's line-up. In a single game this whizz garnered 63 points . . . the rest of the team got nine.

Calling All Swimmers!

Attention Swimmers! Club President Zi Murray announces that you will have at least four more chances to don your suit and cap.

The first is this Thursday at 7.30 in the L.M. pool when with balloons, prizes, pyjamas,—anything might happen. This is another "Splash Party" when all you need is lots of enthusiasm to be assured of a good time. The date for the next "Splash" has not yet been set, but watch The Varsity for announcement.

Because of the interest shown last time there will be two more coach periods at U.T.S. Thursday, Feb. 16, and Mar. 9, from 7:00-8:30 are the dates, and these are your chances to improve your style, tricks, diving and coaching. Miss Baxter will be on hand to oversee proceedings, so let's have another good turn-out.

Intercollegiate Hockey

The first game for the all-Varsity squad will be played in Varsity Arena against Queen's. As yet the team has not been chosen, so that all those wishing to try out may do so on Feb. 10, from 12:30 to 1:30 in Varsity Arena.

The Intercollegiate game will start at 4:30 on February 17th, and run to 6:00.

Badminton Tourney

The lists for the open tournament at Strathgowan have been posted in the individual colleges and must be signed by February 8 by all aspiring entrants. Whites are a must, including white running shoes, and keep in mind that the tournament starts at 9:00 sharp.

Intercollegiate Volleyball

The L. M. gym was the scene of the first try-out for the intercollegiate volleyball practice today from 5:30 to 7:00. The next practice will be held on Wednesday, same place, same time.

Intramural Hockey Scorers

Following are the leading intramural hockey scorers in games played up until the first of this month:

Mustard, 10; Wright, 10; Andison, 9; Rondeau, 9; Sawyer, 7; Sterling, 7; Colquhoun, 7; Crera, 7; Dobson, 7; McNamara, 7; Kaiser, 6; MacDougall, 6; Rhame, 6; Howard, 6; Putnam, 6; Leishman, 6; Murphy, 6; P. Duffy, 6; Zajicek, 5; Dawson, 5; Stothers, 5; Helmer, 5; Willis, 5; MacDonald, 5; Stewart, 5; Fleming, 5; Smith, 4; McKay, 4; Crema, 4; Cole, 4; Clarke, 4; Worling, 4; Ehrlick, 4; Turner, 4; MacDonald, 4; McIntyre, 4; Jenner, 4; Gray, 4; Marshall, 3; Mollenhauer, 3; McPherson, 3; Daley, 3; Malcolm, 3; Cockburn, 3; Whitehead, 3; Crawford, 3; Thomas, 3; Walton, 3; Pridman, 3; Fenning, 3; Gibson, 3; Locke, 3; Weegan, 3; Fulford, 3; Campbell, 3; Lemon, 3; Kerr, 3; McCutcheon, 3; Fullerton, 3; Morlock, 3.

VARSITY SPORTS

Sports Night

What will undoubtedly be the best basketball show of the year will be on display at Hart House tomorrow night at the season's third Sports Night. The University of Buffalo, one of the hottest college teams in upper New York State will be the guests of the redoubtable Blues. The Buffalos play with Bonaventure and Canisius Colleges during the season and do quite well for themselves, besides making trips to such well-known cage centres as Villanova and CONY. Although it is to be expected that Buffalo will manage to eke out a win over the Blues, the game should be a spectacular one to watch even for the most avid of the Varsity supporters.

U. of Buffalo reputedly have a fairly tall team who are adept at all manner of uncanny shots. As long as Varsity doesn't insist on using the antiquated zone defence a good game is bound to ensure. Game time 8:45.

As preliminaries to the featcha attraction, the Buffalo Frosh team will tackle the Varsity intermediates and the Central Y juniors will meet the junior Blues in a league game. The T&D junior race is a close one and the winner of this game will gain first place and a bye into the group play-offs. Of course their game starts rather early (5:45 p.m.) but think of the money that may be saved on suppers. Admission 50c.

Gibson Sets 2 Marks In Senior Swim Meet

The senior intramural splash meet held Saturday at Athletic Night saw two records hung up and one tied. Doug Gibson, who is fast earning himself a reputation as Varsity's top-seeded speed man came through in fine fashion to win first place in the 220 yard free style and the 440. Doug set a record in the 220 in the time of 2:39.9 and came back later in the meet to swim away with the 440 turning in a sensational 5:12.2 effort to set another record, beating the existing mark by 29.6 seconds. Gibson was swimming for UC in the meet, which managed to come in second with 25 points behind the top place Meds entry with 33.

Bill Trusler helped Meds to their top position with a sterling performance in the 100 yard free style navigating the course in 58.2 to tie the record.

Trinity picked up their only first place in the diving event which was won by Buck Rogers. Sutherland and Cullen were the divers-up. Larry Rosen of Meds continued his fine form in the 200 yard breast stroke winning the event in 2:48.5.

St. Mike's "A" basketeers virtually out-fought the winless Vic senior entry 19-11 at noon yesterday to move into a first place tie in group one with senior SPS. The game was of the rough and tumble variety so popular this year, both teams missing the hoops with equal dexterity. Lugs "Mort" McKeown was the backbone of the double blue tossing in six points to lead all scorers. Bob Ralph of Vic played his usual colorful game.

LINE-UPS

St. Mike's "A" — Carr 4, McKeown 6, Furhman 2, Murphy 4, Flynn 3, Farrell, Kane, Keane, Warren. Total—19.

Senior Vic — Milne 2, Elson, McKenzie, Reid 2, Ralph 4, Andrassy, Harris 1, Mackintosh, MacKay, Stone, Ostrom, 2. Total—11.

The junior Vicsters made a somewhat better showing than the seniors in the afternoon engagement with junior Meds which the Vicmen won 33-27. Bob "Dogface" Ludwig showed the way for the red and gold with seven, followed by Bob Rumball, Fenning and White with fives. Jerry Goldberg, recent import from UC and Silverman accounted for most of the surgeons score with 10 and 14.

LINE-UPS

Jr. Vic —Steven 4, Rumball 5, Fenning 5, White 5, Ludwig 7, Daveresaux 3, Walter 2, Mennish 2, Hamilton, Gore, Coles. Total—33.

Junior Meds — Hirano, Goldberg 10, Charendoff, Silverman 14, Thomson, Ehrlick, Sackin, Rosen 1, Kokeny 2, Piotrowski. Total—27.

After six straight hockey wins, the Trinity "A" entry yesterday met up with some tough opposition and only managed to eke out a 1-1 ... Junior SPS was the team to cut off the win streak with Zajicek getting the all important score. Creola notched Trinity's one and only. The tie gave Skule a chance for a playoff position.

Second Metallurgical went all out to womp Forestry fourths 42-16 in their minor league tilt yesterday with Alexander leading the way with 16. Rodwell responded with 9 for the axe-men.

Fourth Civils were not too civil in taming the PHE Tigers 65-24. Meschino led the way with 18 while Concessi hurled in 8 for the torpid Tabbies.

Baruch Plan Ideal For Atomic Control Grad Students Say

The most contentious point in a discussion on "Can We Ban The A-Bomb" held at the Graduate Union last night was whether or not the atom bomb can be banned under a system of international control by inspection without international ownership.

Baruch Plan Suggested

It was also suggested that the Baruch plan for the control of atomic energy is ideal while control by inspection is more reasonable but less effective.

Three speakers introduced the discussion. W. J. Hall, the first speaker, in view of the closeness of the positions arrived at by the United States and Russia on the control of atomic energy found it difficult to understand why agreement was not reached. He felt that a convention banning the bomb would give Russia and the United States confidence to go ahead and reach an agreement.

A function of any government is to provide adequate military security for its people, said J. C. Langley. Moral primacy should not be ascribed to any country; an important deterrent to agreement on the control of atomic energy is suspicion on both sides founded principally on ignorance, he said. The only ultimate guarantee that the bomb will stay banned is a tight international ownership, he pointed out.

Security Requirements

J. E. Piercy quoted the opinion of the Atomic Physicists of England that "minimum requirements for security include the examination of certain designated plants, a continuous system of inspection, and sanction to enforce inspection regulations." He pointed out that the development of new methods or fission of fusion may render these requirements insufficient.

It was discussed whether this problem could be solved on a technical level by capable political scientists or whether it was related to the general international political trends. It was emphasized by some speakers that the influence of public opinion rather than the intelligence of the negotiators was the important factor.

UC Lit.

Blasts "Bohemian" Reporter

"No newspaperman is worth his salt unless he has a very deep feeling for the tradition of his craft." Napier Moore, Financial Post columnist and former editor of Mclean's Magazine, told an Open Meeting of the U.C. Lit last night in the J.C.R.

The meeting, largely composed of U.C. Alumni, heard a commentary of Mr. Moore's 39 years in the newspaper business and took part in a discussion touching in many cases on weaknesses in that trade.

Bohemian Type

Mr. Moore severely critised the "Bohemian" type of "movie-made reporter who goes around with his coat collar half-turned up with a cigarette drooping from his mouth."

"The reporter is the only person the news source can judge the newspaper by," he said.

In a brief history of journalism in England, Mr. Moore traced the tradition he had mentioned earlier.

"The first newspaper proper was published in England in 1618 and entitled 'A relation of All Matters done in Bohemia, France, Belgium, etc. That is Worth Relating since March 16 to May 4'."

Origin of Taxes

The next English newspaper, published in 1622, paid 10 pounds to the king to be used for repairs to Westminster Cathedral as a "tax". Taxes became a general thing when newspapers were published later in large numbers.

In 1712, Mr. Moore said, papers paid half-pence duty per issue and four pence per pound of paper used. "It is hard to realize that 100 years ago the Manchester Guardian paid four pence tax per copy and 7 pence per pound of paper used."

More important than taxing, he continued, were the persecutions of editors who criticised the government. The founder of the London Times was imprisoned three times in two years for supporting a publisher, John Wilkes, who wanted to publish reports of pariament and comment on them.

"Responsibility of the press to the public pre-dates responsibility of parliament to the press," Mr. Moore pointed out.

"Sometimes newspaper contents are cheap and shoddy," Mr. Moore concluded, "but come any situation where there is an emergency or the rights of the people are invaded, and you will see the vast majority of newspapers rising up in the tradition I have mentioned."

Career And Sex Subject Of Talk To Vic Women

Women, and men too, have great emotional problems arising from the conflict of their perfectly natural desires, declared Miss Jessie McPherson, Dean of Women of Victoria College, speaking to the women of Victoria yesterday. Her address, called The Emotional Problems of Women, dealt especially with the conflicts connected with love, and the individual's job in life.

These conflicts were often due, she said, to a failure to grow up rooted from back in early child hood. She mentioned especially the problems connected with the relationship between men and women, with the individual's status in society, with sex, and with one's other personal relationships. These four factors within love made an intelligent approach necessary, Miss MacPherson said.

Another problem, and one concerning women alone, was that of one's task in life. A woman should not feel that her whole function in life is to be a wife and mother; she must have other interests. Finally, Miss MacPherson cited the difficulties in the individual's attitude to authority.

Carleton Students Knuckle Under To Macmillan Co.

Ottawa, Feb. 8—(CUP)—Students have met the demand of the Macmillan Company of Canada at Carleton College. The publishing company demanded that a twenty per cent discount, which students enjoyed until recently be revoked, and books be priced to sell at list price.

Previous to this the publishing company had sold books to the college store at a 20 per cent educational discount. 16 per cent of this reduction was tacked on to the price of books, in order to pay administrative costs of running the store. With the demand of the Macmillan Company, made as it was in Toronto under the threat of refusing to supply books, the store added another four per cent to the price of books.

Now students pay the same for textbooks at their college store as they would pay at any outside retailer's.

Campus Poll To Determine Columns' Fate

A poll to decide whether college color is wanted in The Varsity as a regular feature is currently being conducted on the campus. The poll is being undertaken to determine whether the present college columns (Vic's Corner; UC It's This Way; Skulespots) are worthwhile; whether the individual colleges should begin or continue such a column; and whether The Varsity should provide the type of information at present found in these columns.

Victoria College Union Publicity Director Kip Fleming, who initiated the poll, told a meeting of the VCU that it is doubtful whether Vic students either read or appreciate the column. Vic students are being polled at present to determine whether Vic's Corner is, in their opinion, worth the $200 it costs every year.

If the poll shows there is a desire for more individual college color in regular stories, The Varsity has agreed to consider the problem with a view to providing such color.

China's Problems Outlined For IRC By Pekin Student

Can China industrialize without outside assistance? Will she be able to pay for this help if it is necessary with her exports, and who will grant this aid? These were the questions asked by Mr. Donald Sutherland, a former student at the University of Pekin, at the International Relations Club meeting in the Women's Union yesterday.

The infiltration of Communism into China began in the country where, in the more fertile areas, over seven thousand peasants are crowded into one square mile of land, said Mr. Sunderland. "Illiterate peasants" were suitable material for the Communists and within a period of months Peking, once

NFCUS-IUS Vote Affirms Affiliation At VCU Meeting

The Victoria College Union voted almost unanimously for NFCUS-IUS affiliation at their regular meeting on Monday night. This was the second time the VCU had voted for affiliation. Vic SAC representative Doug. Thomas will carry the decision to the SAC meeting tonight.

A motion to discontinue the Victoria College show, the Scarlet and Gold, because it had lost money was voted down. Instead of attempting to cater to the entire campus, it was decided to make it a strictly college show. The VCU's decision, which also made suggestions to keep the show in the black, assured the continuance of the show.

VCU Publicity Director, Kip Fleming, asked the co-operation of the executive in getting a random section of student opinion to determine whether the purpose Vic's Corner in The Varsity serves is worth the $200 it costs annually. Fleming said he felt the Corner fulfils a purpose not duplicated by any other publicity program, but said that it is still doubtful whether Vic students either read or appreciate the column.

The election committee, set up chiefly to reorganize election procedure, and arouse greater participation in the privileges of democracy, reported on several useful suggestions. The president outlined the new method of ticket selling to be adopted in accordance with the Bursar's request to have the halls kept clear.

M&P LADDIES

The Men Of Maths

By ROCKY MARTINO

Walk into The Varsity news office and you're sure to find one of them; try the Chess club and you'll find more; walk into the Camera club and you'll find the rest. Who are they? The men of M & P.

What manner of men are these? They always talk about things that no one else knows anything about To them, the intricacies of Einstein's theories are nothing more than a few simple equations. The complexities of outer space are about as complicated as the latest crossword puzzle. In fact, the only thing that's hard for them is the mathematics they study in class.

Full of Characters

And speaking of classes, have you ever been in one of their classrooms? Well, walk in and be ready for anything. Off in one corner you'll see a couple working on a crossword puzzle; over in another corner, someone will offer you 3:1 odds that Canadiens will take Toronto. You'll bump into some character who'll try to get you involved in a game of chess; and if you turn away hurriedly, you'll almost knocks over someone with membership cards for the Maths. and Physics Society. If you look around, you might find a scarf or two hanging from the rafters; on the board you might see the latest equations of Einstein. In fact, you never can tell exactly what you'll find. You might even find a couple of students.

But for all the levity, it's a hard life, and a precarious one. The percentage of failures in the course is enormous. Of last year's first year, only 97 wrote the final examinations and of these 30 passed into second year. Of these 30, probably 20 will reach third. From then on it's 'smooth sailing'—only one or two will fail.

Blames High Schools

Why do so many fail? Is the work too difficult or don't the students work hard enough? Those were the questions Professor Satterly was asked. "No", he said, "it's neither of these. The trouble starts in High School. Most of the teachers can guess pretty well what's going to be on the examination. Consequently they prepare their classes to answer the questions on the examination, and not for the purpose of learning their work. Helped in this way, any good student can get first class honours in his mathematics. He comes and thinks he's a mathematician, but is he? The examination results show." And do they ever!

Graduates Well Known

A story about the M & P course couldn't do without something about its reputation.

The University of Toronto is noted as having the best mathematical school in America. The graduates of this school have covered themselves with renown. Many have gone to American universities where they are received with open arms. Indeed, so high is the respect of American colleges for our school, that a graduate need only write "Mathematics and Physics, U. of T." on his application form, and the world opens before him.

The only difficulty is to get to be a graduate. As Hamlet so aptly put it, "Ay, there's the rub".

"Phooey To Artsmen..."

Last month Wallberg Lecturer Sir Richard Southwell, maintaining that engineers can take no responsibility for wars, said: "The Engineer is not concerned with ultimate values."

Some Artsmen objected and said that Engineers should be concerned with moral values. We do not agree. If the Engineer gives humanity the benefits of his labors, humanity should make proper use of them. Besides, what would happen on the student level if this policy of converting Engineers into Artsmen is successful?

The first sign would be the sight of Engineers running about the campus shouting:

"We are, we are, we are the Engineers,
We can, we can demolish three AVR sundaes!
Drink coke, drink coke, drink coke and come with us!
We don't care a snap 'bout any dashed chap
Who doesn't care a snap for us!"

Imagine an Engineer at a Hart House function sneaking into a corner and surreptitiously removing a bottle of chocolate milk from his hip, gulping a generous slug, drawing the back of his hand across his lips and murmuring, "Chuck full of vitamins!"

When Skule Nite is spelled "School Night" (and is sexless); when slide-rules are concealed in coat-sleeves; when the Skule cannon is displayed with the Lee collection as a relic of the SPS pre-humanization era; when there are no cries of "Dirty Arts!" at the UC Follies; and when the Engineering Society holds afternoon teas, no voice will lament with more bitterness and volume than ours the passing of the rollicking Engineer.

There's a lot of spirit down in the little red school house. It sometimes expresses itself in the damnedest ways, but these words come from an Artsman:

"As long as we maintain our sense of humor, we're safe. Please pass my milk shake, Cedric."

Looking Backwards

Mid-Century Highlights
Varsity Love Story or
The Sweetheart of Sigma Freud

Editor's Note: The Bored of Governors, after due consideration, has judiciously decided that this columnist was not entirely slanderous in his statement regarding the ancestory of the Editor and has therefore permitted the resumption of the feature.

As far as The Varsity was concerned, the year 1936 saw the impossible. An inspiring young staff reporter, Claude Snuffbucket, attempted not only to newswrite for The Varsity but also to carry on a private love affair. In order that Claude could spend more time with Cynthia he had her take The Varsity oaths. Although their love story never appeared in print in The Varsity, it commanded the deepest interest of all staff members. At times the interest reached the height of group marriage.

The erotic behaviour of the young couple was a source of great enjoyment. When Claude was typing a story, Cynthia, in mute admiration, would stand close to him. In fact, if she stood any closer she would have passed him. During a particularly intimate session Claude inadvertently typed the "What's on Today" announcements on Cynthia unusual feat by returning the this unusual fete by returning the typewriter carriage with such force that he dislodged her dental crockery.

Cynthia would follow Claude everywhere. When Claude covered senior rugby practice, Cynthia covered senior ruby practice. When Claude covered the water front, Cynthia covered the water front. When Claude covered men's water polo, Cynthia stood in the showers and waited.

Springtime saw the enamoured couple strolling across the green campus, his right foot in her left pocket, their eyelashes entwined and their hearts beating as one. Ah Cynthia, gay, frustrated, neurotic Cynthia; her love knew no bounds. She wore her heart on her sleeve and thus covered up an old gravy stain. This was youth, this was romance, this was revolting.

It is hard to believe that the Venus and Adonis of The Varsity would ever part; but that was fate. One evening at the Leaking Gardens in Chinatown, during a tender moment between the egg foo yong and the chicken with almonds, Claude presented Cynthia with his most cherished possession, his junior G-Man Badge. As he pinned his token of love on her throbbing bosom, a slow hiss was emitted. This was the beginning of the end. Oh what a tangled web we weave when first we practice to deceive.

And the moral of the story, girls, is just this: Why waste your time reading such drivel when the editorial and political news are still to be perused.

Movie Review

Battleground

There are two strikes against Hollywood when it tries a war picture. The first is the all-persuasive Hollywood habit of sugarcoating reality for dear hearts and gentle people in the audience. The second is the fairly-recent Rosselini influence of making films on the streets and using the people there to give an effect of convincing actuality.

Battleground, the first Dore Schary production of MGM, now showing at Loew's, completely batters down the first handicap, and does not let the second bother it.

The film deals with one platoon in the 101st Airborne Division of the American Army trapped in Bastogne, Belgium, in the crucial Battle of the Bulge. The action and the talk are close to the temper of Bill Mauldin's famous Up Front. There are no phony heroics. The Stars and Stripes streaming in the wind does not appear in one scene.

The humor is earthy at times, corny at times, real at all times. There is not attempt made to hide the fact that men kill other men and are killed by other men on a battleground.

The scenes of battle are exciting and frightening, with all credit to old master William Wellman's directing. The cast uses most of MGM's bright young men in dirty-faced competent performances.

Battleground is the first important film in a predicted cycle of World War II films. If the others to follow hit the level of Battleground, we can be assured Hollywood has chances of maturity. This is also Dore Schary's first production for MGM. Long may he reign with Leo the Lion.

ART ex MUSIC ex DRAMA

Emmanuel Musicale

Last Sunday evening Mrs. Clara Salisbury Baker of the Royal Conservatofy gave a series of readings as guest artist at the Emmanuel College Musicale. Her first group, which included an excerpt from Conrad's Youth was cold and unemotional, delivered largely in monotone, at times inaudible.

The second group—reading from Shakespearian wives, began as unsuccessfully as the first. Her uninspiring Portia (Julius Caesar) failed to live. The Letter Scene from Macbeth, delivered in a resonant and commanding voice had sufficient strength and force, but lacked variation and subtlety of emphasis. One waited for a climax that never came. In Catherine of Aragon (Henry VIII) Mrs. Baker achieved both poignancy and sympathetic understanding. She created a mood and sustained it so effectively that we followed with ease the transitions of a mind besieged by psychological nightmare. In sharp contrast, the final selection of the second group, Katharina's flattering speech on the behavior of wives towards their husbands (The Taming of the Shrew), delivered with humble condescension, was at once obsequious and facetious

In the final group, Stephen Leacock's My Financial Carrer displayed Mrs. Baker's comic sense to the hilt. Intonation and timing equally conrtibuted to a performance that was highly amusing throughout. But with Katherine Mansfield's The Doll's House, she reached her forte. So much was conveyed by the slightest rise and fall of the voice, by dramatic pauses timed to the second, by masterful differentiation of character. The whole was endowed with a sincere appreciation and love of the story itself, and executed with an amazing economy of gesture.

Assisting Mrs. Baker were Miss Thelma Takvam (soprano) accompanied by Lloyd Zurbrigg, and Miss Roma Butler (contralto) accompanied by Feggie Scheff. Miss Takvam's rendition of the famous "Willow Song" (Othello) was one of great dramatic power exquisitely blended with flawless technique and control. Her pathetic cry at the finale of the aria was spine-tingling. Miss Butler's awe-inspiring He Shall Feed His Flock (Messiah) evoked such a soul stirring mood that it was a pity it had to be marred by enthusiastic applause. The exciting Strida la Vampa (Il Trovatore) contained all the pent up emotion of a woman who had witnessed the perpetration of some bloodcurdling atrocity.

Missionary Must Know Foreign Flock's Ways V.C.F. Group Advised

"As now, so then," was the theme of a series of addresses given by Wes Gustafson, mission secretary of the Inter-Varsity Christian Fellowship, to groups of C.C.F.'ers from all faculties over the week-end. In speaking of the call to missionary work, Mr. Gustafson stressed the importance of learning and understanding the ways of other people so as to present the gospel in terms they can appreciate. He said one must not try to inflict Western culture on them and should do all he can to help native pastors and laymen to take over church leadership.

Mr. Gustafson also said that one must be an evangelist in his own home and culture since if you can't make Christ known in English there is no point in learning Chinese.

SPORTS NIGHT TONIGHT

"WHICH OF YOU, BY TAKING THOUGHT" ——

An inside source close to the coach brought us the news last night that Smiley Masterson has benched nine of the Blue basketball team charging that the said players have been getting too short lately and that they will have to get above the five foot ten mark, or else. Or else what, Masterson did not say but our informant tells us that unless the marked players show a real effort to get taller they may be farmed out for further seasoning with the Hoboken H.S. squad.

Only Bill Huycke and Doug Carruthers escaped the coach's wrath, as they are around the six foot mark. But even they received warnings that they better show a real effort to get taller or else they too would join the benched list.

The coach's drastic move was precipitated by reports from the University of Buffalo that they had several very tall players who are likely to give the Blues quite a run for their money tonight at Sports Night. Masterson gave the benched Blues just 24 hours to add a few cubits to their stature and the players forthwith left the floor and started doing strenuous exercises.

Teddy Luck, who has been playing good ball of late, tried to fool the coach by wearing his Adler elevator gym shoes but big Bob was having none of that and told Ted to get back in the equipment room and solve the problem in a more satisfactory manner.

John Braithwaite decided that he could pull the wool over Masterson's eyes by continually jumping up and down touching the tops of the backboards, but when he paused for a breath Bob saw him and realized that he was still only five foot ten.

Jack Gray and John McManus got together in the wrestling room and took turns pulling each others legs but we were not able to ascertain how much taller they got, if any. Jim Bell when last seen was hanging by his fingernails from one of the hoops with fifty pound weights swinging from each foot. It was obvious that the coach's dictum had really taken effect but it will not be fully known until the game tonight whether or not the players have made the height mark set by Masterson.

Hot Intermediates Move To Hamilton After Fifth Win

Varsity intermediates hit the road at noon to-day for Hamilton and a return engagement with the McMaster Marauders. Varsity won their first four games around the loop and are now embarking on the second lap of their schedule. At Varsity last Friday the intermeds laced the Macmen 8-1 and are hoping for a repeat performance to-day. John Dugan please note!

Saturday Western Here

The powerful Western Mustangs will be the guests of the Blues this Saturday at Athletic Night. The Mustangs are undefeated while the Blues have lost two while winning one. Large George Wearring will once again lead the squad into battle, plus such stalwarts as Paul Thomas, Harry Wade and Don Hunt. The game will be the feature attraction of another action-packed Athletic Night.

Hockey

Monday's hockey game ended in a 3-0 win for PHE I over St. Hilda's I. Although PHE led the attack all through the game, the Saints showed to better advantgae than they did in their last game against PHE when they were defeated 7-0.

June Plant, Irma Bullock, and Jane Thompson scored a goal apiece, but the Saint's goalie, Marg. Martin warded off many that looked like sure counters.

Volleyball

St. Hilda's I came out on top of a 38-18 score in the first game of the evening against UC I, but it wasn't enough to put them top in their league. PHE took the honours, with St. Hilda's placing second and UC third. PHE will play off in a semi-final game on Thursday at 6.30.

Vic I defeated Physio in a "eye for an eye" game in the LM gym last night. In the first half Physio eked out a lead of three points by the half-time whistle, but Vic retaliated in the second, taking the game by three points.

This win puts the Vicsters at the head of their league, and into the semi-finals. The first play-off game is on Thursday from 5.30 to 6.30 when the winner of League IV plays the winner of League V. The second game follows immediately at 6.30 with the winner of League I vs. the winner of League II.

Vic Thirds spotted Trinity "B's" three goals to come from behind and win 4-3 in the 4 p.m. ice encounter at Varsity. Trinity however finished the season ahead of the Vic men and will represent Group Five in the play-offs. Fleming with two goals and Creel with one were the Red and Black marksmen while Andrew potted two and Werry and Walder one each for the winners.

Institutional Management, taking their fourth win, moved into the playoff spot to group six by lacing SPS fifths 5-1. The game ended the sked for both teams. For the managers Doug Croteau led with two while Barry Dobson, Johnny Taylor and Ken Bailey all added one. Morrish tallied for Skule.

No records were broken this week in the indoor track meet but St. Mike's once again indicated that they are really the top track faculty on the campus, winning the 1,000 yard open and tieing for first in the 220 yard open. Paul Foresteil, a boy who had won more races than most people have bets, turned in a fine effort to take the distance event in 2:21.8. Dave Barr of SPS and Earl Fee of UC were the runners-up.

In the 220 speedy John Hryshko, versatile St. Mike's runner tied for first with Mike Zuberec of Architecture in 25.1. Chamberlain of UC gained the third place.

Junior UC had to come from behind a second quarter deficit to down Dents "A" 28-22 for their fifth win. The win sewed up the top position in group two for the red and whiters. Diminutive Danny Glick and unconscious John Kuzmochka led the UC parade in the last period, sparking the team to victory. The dentists were led by Gregus with 7 and Art Richman and Jones with fives.

In the 4 p.m. game Wycliffe wildcats overpowered the Architecture "B" team to win going away by a 33-12 count. It was the theologs second win, paced by Hendra with 11 and Baker 8. For the builders Holt with 5 was high.

Wycliffe — Hendra 1, Baker 8, Garber 6, Rowe 4, Cutler 2, Harper 2, Beattie. Total—33.

On the minor league front third Mechanicals whipped the whey out of Meds fourths by a 50-18 score. Ceresino paved the way for the victory by hurling in 16 pernts. Sullivan and Lawson helped out with ten apiece. Rapid Robert Ruderman managed to slap the strings for 6, for Meds.

Regular intramural hockey games end this Thursday with the playoffs starting Monday.

Big Test Faces Junior B-Ballers At Sports Night

The most important game of the junior T & D basketball schedule will be viewed to-night when Central Y, current top rung holders of the group, take on the Varsity juniors in a game that will decide who will get a bye into the group finals. Varsity have yet to beat the Central men, but they have been out-lucked on many occasions, losing usually by only the narrowest of margins.

The game is slated for 5:45 p.m. this evening as the curtain raiser of the triple-headed Sports Night. In the second game the Buffalo University Frosh team will trade baskets with the intermediates. Playing to-night for the Lowes-coached juniors will be such stars as Dave Bernstein, who is reputed to have regained his early season form, (he hooped 18 points last week), Al Dancy, Bill Wilson, and Harvey Coopersmith.

When Doug Gibson, ace Varsity swimmer, navigated the 440 yard free style in the senior intramural meet Saturday, he not only shattered the existing intramural mark but also the intercollegiate. Doug did it in 5:12.2 and the intercollegiate is 5:29.6. Pretty fair stroking, what?

capital of the oldest contemporary civilization in the world was in the hands of the Chinese Communists and their able leader Moa Tze-tung, he said.

During the civil war, China suffered from the most fabulous inflation ever known: thirteen million Chinese dollars could be traded for an American dollar he said. In pointing out that the Chinese were never to be outdone by insurmountable problems, Mr. Sutherland declared that the "Chinese constructed a moveable printing press which could grind out money where it was needed most."

In most of the cities of China captured by the Communists there were tanks, guns and ammunition with which to continue the civil war, he said. Oddly enough, he pointed out, these commodities were supplied by the American Relief to China.

Perhaps the U.S.A. will aid China, perhaps it will be Russia, but eventually the Chinese will modify the Marxist dogma to suit their mode of living, he concluded.

UNICEF FALLING SHORT OF OBJECTIVE

United Nations International Children's Emergency Fund was established by a unanimous General Assembly resolution on December 11, 1946.

UNICEF's original aim to bring a daily food-supplement to twenty million of the most needy children in Europe and Asia has never been possible due to lack of resources which has limited its feeding assistance to under five million children and nursing mothers.

UNICEF's policy is "Distribution will be on the basis of need, without discrimination because of race, creed, nationality or political belief."

Who's going to win the hockey game against Queen's on Feb. 17? Last year the all-Varsity team skated their way to a couple of decisive victories over McGill and Queen's, 15-0 and 10-1 repectively, and many of the top stars are left to spike this year's effort.

Alison Jeffries tied with Ferne Watson for the highest number of points, and although Ferne has graduated, Alison still shows the same deadly marksmanship in her position as centre forward with the Vic Firsts. Alice Jamieson, Jane Macklin, Barb Weatherhead, Irene Hain, and Irma Bullock all made the team in a big way last year and are all showing the same style in the intramural games that made last year's all-Varsity team what it was.

The future defenders of the Varsity supremacy in this sphere will be chosen in a practice starting this Friday, Feb. 10, in Varsity Arena at 12.30. The Gaels arrive the following Friday, and will be ready to face-off at 4.30.

As everyone knows, the intramural league is still going full strength, and won't be in the final stages for some weeks. This arrangement is poor and not likely to happen again, since intramural players are allowed to play on the all-Varsity team as well, meaning that a good part of their spare time is taken up with hockey. Not only that, but some girls tend to lose interest in their intramural games, and as Miss Parkes, of the Women's SAC says, "We have such a good intramural setup, it's a shame to spoil it." The same mix-up seems to be unavoidable in volleyball this year too. Again the inter-faculty is unfinished, and yet the inter-collegiate round robin is slated for Feb. 11.

Unfortunately Varsity's entry to the Intercollegiate Ski Meet to be held at McGill has had to be withdrawn. Ski conditions have been so poor that Conn Sparrow, who was to train this year's squad, has not even been able to pick the team.

Last year the team practised every weekend either at Huntsville or Collingwood, and went into intensive training, you know how it is—no smoking, early to bed, and so on. The girls' work paid off though, when they finished with a close second, but this year's prospective team has had no such training or racing experience so the entry for the meet that was to be held in two weeks time has had to be cancelled.

The local fields are not the only ones lacking snow. Skiing at St. Sauveur last weekend was a hazardous feat because there was not enough snow to cover all the rocks on the St. Sauveur runs.

APPROVE AFFILIATION WITH IUS

NFCUS Fee Raise Asked Aid Services

Increased NFCUS fees to enable the national student union to hire a full time permanent secretary was urged last night by University of Toronto NFCUS Committee Chairman Tom Symons at a special meeting of the Committee in Trinity College Board Room.

A permanent secretary is needed in order that NFCUS may carry out more efficiently its various nation-wide activities. Symons explained. "A full time secretary would be able to do important promotional work" he said. He added that the present national secretary of NFCUS, Don Sheldon, Alumni Secretary at McMaster University, finds that the fact he works for NFCUS only on a part time basis limits him to working mainly as a "clearing house" for communications between the local committees.

Sees Travel Aid

Illustrating the kind of work a full time permanent secretary could do, Symons pointed out such an official might organize work throughout the country on aid to students travelling abroad in summer.

NFCUS hoped and planned this year to book passage for students. Trip travel tickets for the summer months are extremely to buy, especially by students who do not decide to travel till late in the spring. But NFCUS has failed to organize the buying of tickets on a national scale, although both the University of Toronto and the University of Montreal committees have had some success in acquiring tickets for students on their own campuses.

Have Discussed Travel

The Toronto committee has discussed in the past how a permanent national organization might follow the example of certain United States organizations and eventually establish itself as a shipping line's ticket agency. This would make available to students almost unlimited numbers of tickets, even late in the year.

Symons indicated last night that a permanent secretary would have both the time and experience to Taggers will dot the campus today to appeal for funds to supply food, clothing and medical care for children throughout the world. Here Jessie Nugent, III Vic, tags VCU president Stan Kurisko for UNICEF while Jane Hill, SAC's Student Service Commissioner, looks on.

UNICEF Tag Day

For The World's Children

Today UNICEF is making an appeal to students for funds to supply food, clothing and medical care for children of the world who are desperately in need. UNICEF (United Nations International Children's Emergency Fund) is the only relief program being carried on by the United Nations.

"Feeding the world's hungriest children is the main aim of UNICEF," Toronto campaign chairman Reg. A. Batten said last night. "A full dinner plate, we believe, is the best peace propaganda that this, or any other country can put forward. By supporting the UNICEF campaign the University of Toronto students are showing that they are keenly conscious of social responsibility to the young victims of a world devastated by war."

Double Value

UNICEF'S program is to assist countries to care for their own children. Each dollar spent by UNICEF is at least matched by the assisted government. Thus any contribution brings more than double the amount of milk, food, shoes, clothing or medical care to destitute children.

In all, 56 countries around the world are receiving help from UNICEF. Its services are given "on the basis of need without discrimination because of race, creed, nationality, or political belief."

Spent In Canada

All donations from Canadians go back into their own pockets. This money, including about $6,000,000 already donated by the Canadian government, is spent in Canada for food and supplies.

Canada also has a very active voice in where UNICEF services are distributed. The executive assistant to the Deputy Minister of Welfare in Ottawa, Mrs. Adelaide Sinclair, has three times been elected chairman of the Program Committee. Mrs. Sinclair was once a lecturer in economics here at Varsity.

6105-2411 Vote For NFCUS Merger With Internat Body

Affiliation of the National Federation of Canadian University Students with the International Union of Students will be supported by the University of Toronto. By a representative vote of 6,105 to 2,411 the Students' Administrative Council last night approved a motion presented by University College representative Earl Orser to recommend to NFCUS that they affiliate with the IUS.

Representative Vote Used

The vote saw the use of the seldom invoked "representation" system of voting, where each college or faculty votes with a strength designated by the number of students in the college or faculty. A preliminary representative vote must be taken to invoke the rule governing a representative vote and must receive a two-thirds majority.

Knox College, Medical Men and Women, Nursing, Physio-Therapy, and St. Michael's Men and Women voted against the motion while all other colleges and faculties supported affiliation. Engineering representatives abstained from voting on the grounds that there had been no opportunity to determine the attitude of Skule on NFCUS-IUS affiliation. Even had Engineering voted against the motion it would not have changed the decision.

The motion passed last night recommends that the National Federation of Canadian University Students affiliate with the International Union of Students. It also recommends that NFCUS send at least three observers to the IUS Congress to be held in Europe this summer, with as much financial backing as can be obtained.

In December, 1947, NFCUS decided to affiliate conditionally with the IUS. In the summer of 1948 the IUS kept Canadian representatives from completing formal affiliation between NFCUS and the IUS at a Paris Council meeting of the IUS. They left the door open for NFCUS to enter IUS if the students of Canada approved the move at the NFCUS Conference to be held in December, 1948.

NFCUS rejected affiliation at the 1948 National Conference by a vote of 10 to 7. At the Conference held in Ottawa last September the subject was not even discussed.

Interest in affiliation was aroused again during the Christmas holidays when the representatives of fourteen western nations who have disaffiliated or not joined the IUS met in London, England, to discuss the

Because of the decision taken by the Students' Administrative Council at their meeting last night there will be only eleven more issues of The Varsity.

Publication dates for the remaining eleven issues will be: Feb. 10, Feb. 14, Feb. 15, Feb. 17, Feb. 21, Feb. 22, Feb. 24, Feb. 28, Mar. 3, Mar. 7, and Mar. 10.

These dates are subject to change. Those desiring publicity and those wishing to put "What's On Today" items in The Varsity are asked to note the dates.

Will Soon Elect House Committees For Coming Year

The elections for Hart House committees for 1950-1951 will be held March 8. Nominations will be open on Friday, Feb. 17, and will close on Feb. 22.

Aided by the administrative staff, these committees compose the student government which run Hart House. They are responsible for running the Great Hall, library, music room, and athletic wing.

Urging student participation in the elections, one of the staff members said, "The only way to ensure representation of high calibre is for the electorate to take an active interest in the nominations and to turn out in large numbers when the times comes to cast the ballots."

Now Comes The Big Job....

The Students' Administrative Council last night approved affiliation of the National Federation of Canadian University Students with the International Union of Students. This is consistent with the policy of Toronto students, who have supported affiliation since the question was first raised some years ago.

The Toronto resolution will now go to the National executive of NFCUS, and will be presented to the NFCUS Conference to be held next September. At that time representatives from all Canadian universities will discuss and vote on the question, of whether the national federation should affiliate with the IUS.

It is important that the Toronto NFCUS Committee now do two things. First they must implement the desires of Toronto students by actively supporting affiliation in a realistic and intelligent manner, by urging the national NFCUS executive to initiate national action on the question before it becomes too late in the year to get effective action, and by supplying information to those who want it on the Toronto views.

Secondly, and more importantly, they must ensure that the interest and program of the national federation as it is presently being carried on is not in any way interfered with by the decision to affiliate with the IUS. There is little danger that this will happen here, with the NFCUS Committee engaged in a strong and extremely active program. But they must make it clear to the students that the program is there, of interest to all students, and that the decision to affiliate with IUS does not mean that NFCUS work in Canada is to go by the board.

The students of the University of Toronto are to be commended on the positive stand they have taken on this question. Although the difficulties of Canadian affiliation with an international student union are large and imposing Toronto students have managed to look beyond the surface of the problems and have injected a certain amount of vision into their thinking. There are many critics of the university student, and of the attitude that he takes towards important problems. Yet when we come to an important question, he can usually be counted on to make an intelligent decision.

It is true that not enough students participated in the IUS discussion, or expressed themselves on the matter, either vocally, or with letters or by voting in their college or faculties on the matter. There has also been a certain amount of political manoeuvering in some of the faculties. In general however, the vote has come from interested and informed students—those best qualified to express opinions on affiliation.

It is not enough to merely express an opinion one way or the other however. The Toronto student, and especially his representatives who will have the responsibility of carrying out the decisions he has made, must maintain a continuing interest in the problem, and must be willing to accept the responsibility which the decision to affiliate imposes. This includes financial and moral support of any scheme which NFCUS may develop to work in the international world.

The rest of the Canadian universities may not agree with us, but Toronto has made its stand clear: We believe that it is desirable to affiliate with the IUS and get out into the international field.

Communist Ways Tested On Balkans Traced 1000 Years

The present Russian control of the Balkans is a continuation of a policy which dates back over 1000 years, said Professor A. Lobanov-Rostovsky, Professor of Russian History at the University of Michigan, speaking on "Russia and the Balkan Slavs" yesterday. "The Balkans can be considered as a test case of Soviet expansion," he continued, "as long as one takes into account the different forms of Communism produced by different countries under varying degrees of previous Russian influence."

National Communism

The professor pointed out that Communism as it existed in the Soviet Union was still basically that of Lenin, but with certain additions, as acceptance of religion, and of nationalism. Thus the U.S.S.R. now had a type of Communism adapted to its particular conditions.

The Balkans, long under Russian domination, had become very similar in culture, religion and language, he continued. For this reason the special Russian Communism had fitted in almost perfectly. On the other hand, in Yugoslavia, which was on the rim of the Balkans and was subjected to Austrian influence as well as Russian, a new variety had evolved—Titoism.

He continued the description by pointing to France and other countries of Europe which had at one time or another been temporarily affected by Russia, and whose Communism therefore was relatively weak.

"No Indefinite Control"

"I don't think Russia can stay in the Balkans indefinitely," he said later. "Remember that her direct attempts to dominate them have always failed, while indirect attempts have succeeded."

Professor Lobanov - Rostovsky traced the beginnings of cleavage to the tenth century. The split between the East and West sections of the Catholic Church separated the Balkans and Russia, he said, and produced in them a culture which was a mixture of Greece, the Orthodox religion, and the Slavonic language. This domain of Byzantine influence extended only to a river which cuts Yugoslavia in half. West of it was under Roman, Papal influence.

"Theme First, Plot Follows" Writer Says

Dr. Philip Child, speaker for the Library Evening in Hart House last night, stated that there is no set formula for the writing of novels, but once the theme of the story is determined the basis is laid. In his address on "The Writing of Novels" he told of his own methods and the factors which caused a person to write creatively.

He gave as the main cause of writing a subconscious conflict in the writer's mind which would lead him to put both factors into a story and discover how the situation would be resolved. Lesser factors, he said, were the satisfaction of vanity, a creative urge, and finally financial gain.

Keep Plot Fluid

The plot, he said, should be kept fluid as long as possible, so that variable factors in the development of character could be consolidated in the best manner without totally disrupting the projected plot. Thus, he said, at the start the author will never know how the tale will end.

In his own novels Prof. Child stated that he develops his characters to illustrate his theme in a search for ultimate values. He admitted that on occasion one of his characters has got out of hand and shown him new values and truths that he, the author, had never suspected.

Use Graph Paper

For the actual plot construction, once his theme has been formed, Dr. Child uses a sheet of graph paper with one-inch squares. In one column he plots the characters, in the other he lists, in sequence, the events of the story. On this graph correlates each character and his or her reaction with each event. In this way many of the major difficulties may be overcome.

Among devices used he listed conventions of style, the use of an acquaintance as a prototype, and symbolism. Once these are used the necessary elements of casuality, plausibility, and consistency may be achieved.

Increased Fees Needed 'Varsity' Exceeds Budget

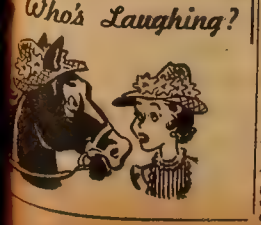
The need for an increased SAC fee was demonstrated at last night's meeting of the Students' Administrative Council when Finance Commissioner Earl Orser told the Council the Varsity budget will be exceeded this year by aproximately $3,500 Last year, also, The Varsity exceeded the budget allowance.

In order to save money on The Varsity budget, the Council passed a motion to cut out five eight-page issues and one four-page issue. The committee pointed out that even though approximately $500 might be saved in this way, the over-all budget will still have been exceeded by $3,000.

The factors influencing this excess, the report said, are the decrease in advertising due to general business conditions and the greatly increased cost of printing. Varsity Editor Stan Fillmore pointed that The Varsity could be made into a paying proposition if a more realistic attitude toward advertising were adopted. He said the present rate for "the eighth largest daily in Ontario out of a field of 33" were unrealistic.

The present rates in The Varsity start at eight and one half cents per line and discounts of one-half cent are allowed for every thousand lines. As a case in point, SAC secretary E. A. Macdonald stated that International Nickel pays eight and one-half cents a line for their ads. An ad such as that appearing in Tuesday's issue would bring in $85 in revenue.

Fillmore stated that a more aggressive policy in soliciting advertisements would result in more revenue-producing ads. "Up to the present," he said, "we haven't been soliciting ads, we have been sitting waiting for them to come to us."



A motion that the business manager, the editor of The Varsity and some of his staff investigate the advertising problem and bring the findings to the Publications and Finance Committees for action was passed by the Council.

Maclennan stated that the Memorial Chapel would not be included in the Union.

Flying Club Membership Needs Much Bolstering As Big Drive Planned

Ajax Flying Club President Yves Garneau, in a newsletter to members, reports the Club to be in best shape in its four year history. Within the past year seventeen members have completed, or are about to complete the Private Pilot licence course with the Club and or have already received the $100 government grants. During February the Club is conducting a membership drive to at least double the number of beginners on course because the four aircraft and instructors are not being employed at full capacity. To give interested non-members an opportunity to try it out, the Club is conducting an Introductory Flight Weekend this coming Saturday and Sunday at Malton Airways, Toronto Island Airport. Undergraduates, graduates and faculty members will pay $2.00 for a twenty minute "flip" with a dual instructor. Garneau pointed out that through co-operative efforts the Ajax Flying Club offers one of the lowest-priced pilot training courses in Canada.

American To Talk On 'Living Light' In RCI Address

"Living Light," the ability of certain living organisms to emit cold light, will be the subject of a lecture by Dr. E. Newton Harvey, of Princeton University. The talk will be given to the Royal Canadian Institute Saturday evening at 8.15, in Convocation Hall.

Dr. Harvey will point out that certain organisms, such as sand fleas, shrimps, midges, or caterpillars may become spontaneously infected with parasitic bacteria and develop a luminous malady that is finally fatal.

Dr. Harvey was born in Pennsylvania and received his Ph. D. from Columbia. He was appointed to a full professorship at Princeton in 1920. During 1940 and 1941 he was visiting professor at MIT. He is active in many biological periodicals and laboratories.

U of T Film Society

Evacuation And Cavities

By OLGA BEUCHOVSKY

There's going to be a lot of shooting around the campus in a week's time or so. But it won't be by Gene Autry, the "Shades" of Al Capone, or the members of the Revolver Club. It's all part of the work of the U. of T. Film Society.

They're producing two documentary films this year, both of which will be under way shortly. Neither has been christened as yet, but the one on Preventive Dentistry will not be called, according to Bill Campbell, IV Dents, President of the Society and the Director of this film, "The Tooth, The Whole Tooth, and Nothing But The Tooth." The other to be finished in the Fall, is on the Japanese-Canadian evacuation from the West Coast.

Pioneer Work

For the film on Preventive Dentistry, the Film Society is climbing on a covered wagon and going off into pioneering territory. It will deal with a new page in Dental History, that of preventing holes (in teeth), gum diseases and crooked teeth. In other words, though you spare the drill, you will not spoil the tooth.

The film is aimed at audiences of professional level, such as dentists, medical doctors, and public health nurses, who would be directly or indirectly concerned with dental health. It will be made with the co-operation of the faculty members and the staff-members of the Faculty of Dentistry, with Doctors Mitten, Kreutzer and Cox as staff advisers. Vic men predominate in the crew line-up. There's Producer Ken MacKenzie, Vic II, Cameraman Lloyd Graham II Social Work, and Technician Roy Little Vic II. Campbell, the director is also co-script writer with Doug Davidson II Vic.

Patients Become Actors

They're going to move into the Dental Clinic and Labs for the shooting. So, for the patients of the Children's Clinic, there might be a pleasant surprise, one of these days, when instead of looking a drill in the eye, there'll be a camera. The cast is to be made up of children and their mothers who come into the Children's Clinic, as well as staff members and students.

There's no spectacular a la Cecil B. DeMille expenditure on the films, which are strictly on a shoe-string budget. "As The Twig Is Bent", last year's production, cost two hundred dollars.

Instruction In Film Making

"The scripts and cameras have been so well arranged that we can shoot with minimum waste of footage," said Campbell. "We're also trying to train people all the time to take over positions."

Therein is the main purpose of the U. of T. Film Society—to give practical experience in film making to those that have the Hollywood or J. Arthur Rank itch. The crew for the film productions are recruited from the Society's membership, which this year is four hundred.

Japanese Evacuated

The second planned production, that of the Japanese Canadian Evacuation from the West Coast, will be under way in a week, also. The script has just been finished, the work of Frank Moritsugu, II Vic., make-up Editor of The Varsity, and Graeme Ferguson, II Vic. Ferguson, the director, conceived the idea for just such a film last summer when he heard Dorothy Livesey's poem "Call My People Home" which deals with the plight of the Japanese Canadians.

He's done a lot of research on the subject, the main source being Forrest E. La Violette's book on Japanese Canadians in World War II. Frank Moritsugu has acted as adviser, while "The New Canadian", the Japanese semi-weekly newspaper, has opened their files to Ferguson.

Trace Family History

"The story follows a fictional family and their evacuation from the Coast," said Ferguson. "It's all based on facts, so that every incident will have happened to someone."

It starts from the announcement of Pearl Harbour to the Japanese

ART MUSIC DRAMA

Casavant Musicale

Three young Toronto organists, assisted by the Riverdale Collegiate Choir under the direction of Dawson Woodburn, presented the fourth Casavant concert of the season last evening in Eaton Auditorium.

Clifford McAree, organist at Erskine United Church, opened the program with an excerpt from Paul Hindemith's second sonata, an interesting work cast in the modern mould. An inviting contrast came as he continued with Brahms' lovely chorale-prelude My Heart Is Filled With Longing, followed by the sprightly Noel In G of Claude Daquin. He concluded with a terse rendering of Bach's "great" Prelude and Fugue In A minor. In general, Mr. McAree's performance gave the impression of being over-rehearsed, but always did he play with all the necessary grace, dignity and charm.

Chrstina McLean performed the Bach Toccata In F in all the sonority and precision that this mighty work can evoke. The same can be said of the Dupre arrangement of Bach's Symphonia From the 29th Cantata. The Rhapsodie No. II of Saint-Saens could not have deserved better treatment, either, for at all times did she display a surety of technique that is destined to place her high in her field. Miss McLean is at present assistant organist at Grace Church-on-the-Hill.

At this point the choir took over to provide a pleasant half-hour of music, singing numbers from a Bach chorale to modern works like Some Enchanted Evening of Rogers and Fred Waring's arrangement of Suesse's The Night Is Young. For such a large group they are well balanced and sing well, maintaining both pitch and tone with equal facility, although in one or two instances the altos tended to flatten and the piano accompaniment became rather prominent at times.

Douglas Elliott, organist at Sherbourne United Church, began his part of the evening with Olivier Messiaen's "Outburst of Joy From A Soul Before the Glory of Christ" from The Ascension, a curious work of concentrated study in dissonance. The Berceuse of Louis Vierne was, as ever, tender and charming. The familiar Widor Toccata From Fifth Symphony was attacked with all the alacrity and verve of an athlete in the 100-yard dash. Mr. Elliott was very favourably received by a most enthusiastic audience, and obliged with an unannounced encore which I am led to believe is the prowess of the contemporary French master, Marcel Dupre.

These three young organists and the choir are typical of the talent of which Toronto can be justly proud. Last evening was not only a tribute to good music, but to good musicians also. We shall see more of them in the future. Stand by, Toronto!

Kenneth Davis.

La Boheme

The most recent cultural spearhead to hit Toronto is the Royal Conservatory Opera Company playing for this last week Rigoletto, Don Giovanni, and the work to be discussed La Boheme. Of the three, La Boheme is undoubtedly the most popular and the most frequently performed in opera repertoire. Unfortunately, the first and second mentioned are so superior musically and dramatically as to make a very capable performance of the latter a waste of energy and time. You can't play a fugue on a slide-whistle. This music is harmonically elemental, the dramatic action tubercular, and the plot extremely sentimental. If we must have Italian opera, let's not have the febrilities of Puccini — the village-maestro who mistook the artificial for the transcendental.

Happily enough this sad, sad opera was sung with spirit and competence. The conductor Nicholas Goldschmidt, knew what he wanted from the singers and produced a very polished and precise reading, except at the opening when there was some hesitancy and awkwardness.

As Mimi the consumptive heroine, Mary Morrison had a very heavy role, and certainly was successful as an actress if not always as a singer. In the high register her voice was full, the tone eloquent although she did scoop a few notes. In the middle and low register she has better control but some roughness in timbre. Most importantly, her dynamic acting carried the other singers along.

James Shields as Rudolfo was unconvincing. He has not the vocal lushness or the nimbleness to execute the sharp turns of the tenor role. His acting was strictly "one pace left . . . pause . . . half turn . . . walk 10 paces upstage."

Jan Rubes, basso, has a magnificent full voice and his control and phrasing leave little to be desired. In addition he has a dominating stage presence. He made the most of the relatively small part of Colline.

Ernest Adams as the flamboyant Marcello sang with a strong clear voice and excellent articulation while Beth Corrigan was fiery and temperamental as Musetta.

The decor could be described as austere, but it was also genuine and practical. Lighting was particularly effective in the last two acts. One last regret, why don't we have a larger stage in Toronto for such productions. In the second act flower girls, soldiers, roisterers stepped on each other whenever they moved.

Book Review

Rink Rat

Don MacMillan's "Rink Rat" (J. M. Dent and Sons, $3.00) is not a good book. For extremely light reading it is passable, but we would not recommend it for anyone who can differentiate between good writing and a painfully amateur literature effort.

The story centres around a young hockey player from the west, tracing his career from the corner rinks to the National Hockey League. For the first half of the book this player is treated more as a type than a person; he represents the average prairie kid who hangs around the town rink in all his spare time. The latter half of the book deals more with the player as a person, and it is hard to see the author's intention: whether he is writing about the Western Rink Rats or about Cave Durrell personally.

MacMillan attempts to re-create the Saskatchewan atmosphere, and fails almost miserably. He tries to bring the reader right into the lives of the characters by using everyday dialogue (like, "Way to go, Cave, way to go"); unfortunately that type of dialogue sounds real, but does not read real. This affects the characterization and description so much that there just isn't any. We could never believe throughout the book that a person like Cave Durrell ever existed.

The author spots his work with literary devices and styles of other writers, like Damon Runyon: "who could not pass a puck at the right time, and in the prescribed manner, if there was as much as a hundred dollars a time in it for them." The aura of poor, adolescent, incompetent writing pervades the whole book. We could see right through the writing and watch the writer at work; we could also outguess MacMillan and keep one jump ahead of him.

In short, a wonderful subject for a book is resolved into a very poor effort by amateurish writing. Our opinion: University students shouldn't break their backs running to store for "Rink Rat."

Mid-Century Highlights Used News Words Or What What Means To Us

A rapid tabulation of the frequency of appearance of specific words in The Varsity since 1880 reveals that some words seldom appear in print while others have an almost everyday occurrence. Today's column will consist of a selection of some of the more popular words and their meanings.

Apathy — to be found in 90 percent of the editorials and in the poultry reviews.

—a ten dollar word meaning I'd rather shoot pool.

—an attitude attributed to a student while attending an SAC meeting who can do his homework, eat an apple and spit out the apathies on the floor.

Bias.— found mostly in Letters to the Editor, in reference to Art Music and Drama critics.

—a three cylinder word meaning "I got it on a pass."

The Wellesley Bias stops at Hart House.

Folderol — as in editorial.

—French, meaning "I must turn out one a day."

Technocrat—as in political news stories.

—A man who has nothing and is willing to share it with everyone.

Artsman—as on pages 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8.

—one who is constantly enlarging the circle of his acquaintances.

Progressive Conservative—As in Gorgeous George.

—an anthithetical appellation. You can't be both.

Students' Union—as in every feature article.

—for the Students, on the students, all over the Students.

—a proper noun meaning you did it, now clean it up.

Liberal—as in political rewrites.

—any federal civil servant

—a term unknown to the head dietician of St. Hilda's.

No—as heard each time the Finance Committee meets.

—a co-ed's way of saying maybe.

Ethics—a word employed by the editor in censoring my best material.

—an automobile popular in the 1920's.

—There is nothing so tasty as ethic steak with fried onions.

- Mature—as in Varsity policy.

—as in Victor.

—as in horse.

Gladiator—as in wrestling and boxing sport news.

—with reference to habitues of cauliflower row.

—My mean old sister had an encounter with a bear and I'm gladiator.

Demonstrator—a last year student with a superiority complex.

—sans eyes, sans teeth, sans everything.

Libel—that which I have committed in this column.

establish such an organization.

Other NFCUS work a permanent secretary might facilitate were text costs investigations and arranging of Canadian - American student exchanges, both requiring the linking and correlation of many widely separated student bodies and universities.

SAC Pays Fees

At present NFCUS fees are six cents per student per year. An increase might more easily be handled now by Toronto students than at other times because it could be included in plans for an increased SAC fee. NFCUS fees are paid by SAC which has final authority on all Toronto NFCUS policy. The University of Toronto NFCUS committee is a working committee of SAC, meant to do detailed work SAC could not possibly do.

NFCUS national secretary Don Seldon will speak to the University of Toronto Committee next Tuesday about the need for a permanent secretary. The Committee plans to use the meetings last night and next Tuesday as preparation for a recommendation they will present to SAC February 22.

problem of going into the communist-dominated international student organization. At that meeting the British National Union of Stpdents urged other national unions to join NFCUS and work within that organization to secure their aims.

At Toronto, the SAC has consistently supported affiliation with the IUS. In 1947, delegates to the Winnipeg NFCUS conference supported the move; in 1948, Toronto supported the move at the Montreal NFCUS Conference. The move last night will mean that Toronto delegates to the NFCUS Conference to be held this September will probably present a motion recommending affiliation.

The total official UNICEF donation from the Canadian government to date is in the neighbourhood of $6,000,000.

It remains, for those of us who disagree, to state in unmistakable terms our idea—or to lose the battle by default.

H-Bomb

Editor, The Varsity.

I hope that you can still allot a little space to the discussion of the H-bomb. If not, let me plead for space for this, on the ground that it is directed not to the H-bomb itself but to a level below it.

In all that discussion, the Communists, bless their warm hearts and distorted lenses, hit by all odds closest to the mark. For they, instead of deploring the inevitabilities of fate, or blaming the morals of Joe Stalin, both of which are beyond our powers, blamed our own sins, in directions that we can do something about. This, however exaggerated and distorted, is practical. May I add some applications?

Our terror of the A and H-bomb production, and our justification for it, is that it may have to be used against Russia and so blow up the world! Not this year, indeed, nor perhaps for several, but possibly, and probably soon.

Now is it really Russia that is our terror here? Immediately, perhaps yes; but the longer we stretch our perspective forward, the clearer it will be, I think, that what we fear is not Joe alone, but Joe as the champion, trusted and followed, by China, Malaisia, India, S. Africa, to mention only large areas. Without this following, Joe would not have the power to defeat us, or to rule the world if he did, or even to seriously frighten us.

Is the crux of our defence not then, what we can do to secure that these will not turn to him? If we could stem that tide, we should be exerting far more power than ever the H-bomb would produce.

The people of those countries suffer under a mighty oppression. We have had a prominent hand in their sufferings. The greatest weapon Stalin has is the facts of their suffering and our exploitation of them, and the belief on their part, that we mean to continue these.

Stalin promises them—never mid how reliably—release. Can we persuade them that we can and will help more in that release? This, and not A-or H-bomb construction is the crucial question in this cold —or hot—war discussion. And this is within the responsibility and power, of democratic citizens.

Staff, (Philosophy).

Contradiction

Editor, The Varsity:

It is necessary to point out that the heading on your report of the discussion in the Grad Union on the subject "Can the Atom-Bomb Be Banned?" does not express the content of the views expressed there. The contradiction between the heading and the article underneath makes this obvious.

In point of fact we were divided in particular as to whether the form of international control and ownership projected in the Baruch is essential to effectively ban the bomb and therefore provide a minimum basis for U.N. discussion or whether the more attainable form of control through inspection is sufficient and therefore the Russian proposals provide a feasible basis for discussion. More generally there was disagreement as to whether the solution of the present impasse is aided by public pressure on the government such as petitions to ban the bomb whether it is to be found in a technically adequate formula — a matter for the political scientists.

It is my personal opinion that we must entertain doubts of the correctness of the principles included in the Baruch Plan. This is a precondition to any worth-while criticism of it. This head-line has unfortunately had just the opposite effect.

Immature Feature

Editor, The Varsity.

Sir: I have always been under the impression that The Varsity was written by a fairly competent staff and still am for that matter, but the article, "In a Din of Sirens," in Tuesday's edition displays the childlike thinking that can be expressed in our U. of T. paper. For complete coverage of campus news I think that type of article is just trying to cover space on the page. The thrill of seeing "hundreds" of girls, of eating at the same table with them, and finally of departing from they with "see you at the milk bar'" must tend to accelerate their minds back four or five years to the days when the sight of a girl filled them with breath-taking swooning.

Surely the readers of The Varsity deserve a more mature, more widespread coverage of the news than this tripe.

Vox Varsity

Now that our last show, "Man and the Moon," resulted in the SAC office being swamped with calls for return tickets to the Moon, we have decided to get definitely back to earth. The subject chosen for tonight is the much discussed topic of "EUTHANASIA." This round table talk will be aired on the Senate Club of St. Michael's. The Club President, Fred Furlong, will be moderator. The panel consists of Catherine Johnson of St. Joseph's, Dick Busse of St. Mike's, Jim Simpson of Vic, and Joe Smith from Meds. Production will be by Rocky Martino with technical operation by Jack McQuarrie. Announcing will be by Dan McCarthy. With this topic creating more than passing interest a real evening's entertainment is assured.

For those who are interested in our broadcasting facilities at Ryerson the following information may be of some interest. The actual station is made up of two studios, eight microphones, a completely equipped control-room with broadcast lines to and from the C.B.C., and excellent facilities for recording. Operating over a frequency of 88.3 megacycles this 3000 watt transmitter covers an area of Southern Ontario which includes three-quarters of the population of the province.

The station broadcasts for a minimum of an hour and a half weekdays, Monday through Friday. Broadcast time is divided between live and recorded shows.

All our shows are produced by the Radio Workshop under the supervision of Eric Palen, Director of the School of Electronics, and John W. Barnes, Production Director and station boss.

C.J.R.T.F.M. is the first of its kind in Canada for EDUCATIONAL purposes.

NOTE TO LOCAL DISK JOCKEYS: Down Montreal way the M.C. of that city's Make Believe Ballroom, Don Cameron, has auditioned McGill students for recorded fifteen minute musical sessions. To qualify the students must know modern music, and be interested in being a disk jockey.

The idea has gone over so well that C.J.A.D. is continuing with these programs on a full time basis in order to create student interest.

Now Mr. Mike Wood, Mr. Keith Sandy and Paul Hanover what say? With the talent we have around here perhaps even to give your tonsils a rest you could do the same.

See you next week in VOX VARSITY. John Livingstone.

Communist Ways

Balkan Invasion 968

The first evidence of Russian occupation of the Balkans dates back to 968. At that time the Emperor was so struck with Roumania that he almost moved his capital to that country. Here the professor pointed out the difference in history which would have followed if the Kremlin had not been situated in Moscow.

After she had thrown off the Tartar yoke, Russia continually defended the Balkans against the Turkish oppressors, he continued. There were no less than ten invasions, and after each, Russia demanded and got more constitutional rights for the Balkan peoples.

Russia as Defender

The lecturer then traced Russia's growth as a defender in the eyes of the Bulgarians and Roumanians, coupled with her religious and political ties.

Although this declined after World War I with the loss of Russian prestige because of the anarchy and civil war, he said that it had returned after the recent war as Russia assumed her new role of victor.

He explained that Russian Communism had succeeded in these countries because of their similarity to Russia, and the similarity of their economic conditions to those of Russia in 1917.

Evacuation

setting in the East. The sociological and psychological effects on the various members of the family are stressed, to show what evacuation did to Japanese-Canadian homes.

The film will deal with the removal of Japanese Canadians on the coast to Vancouver's Hastings Park where they lived in barns meant for livestock exhibits. It will show how families were split up when young men and fathers were taken to work camps. Then, as the next step in their trek across Canada, the families were moved to the interior towns of B.C. where they lived in cramped quarters, small cabins, ghost hotel rooms in ghost towns.

"We have no ghost town," commented Ferguson, "But, we're going to try and transform Bolton camp by judicious camera angles."

Huge Crowd Scenes

There's a lot of technical problems involved in a film that covers half of Canada. The scenes, therefore, will be reproduced by sets to duplicate the action. Parts of Toronto will appear as Vancouver and the Hasting Park scenes will be shot on the 'Ex' grounds.

The film is planned to run for twenty minutes, though that means cutting out a lot of material. The producer is Les Carter, II UC, and there'll be six cameramen. It's "De Mille" in style, according to Ferguson who predicts that "The cast will consist of hundreds" because of crowd and railway scenes.

The UC fourths made it two for their side against the red and gold basketeers as they chalked up a more decisive 34-24 win over the Vic fourths in the four o'clock go.

Duke Pearlstein, steady scoring threat for the red and white fourths, was high for UC with a neat thirteen point total while Hewak followed with ten and Sukmanowski added five. Lowery led the list for Vic with six points while Philpot and James contributed fours.

On the minor floor Meds eights handed the UC Hurricanes a 32-23 beating yesterday with Frankel in the driver's seat as he potted nine points for the winners. Pace, Asselstine and Spivak shared top honors for the Hurricanes with six apiece.

Dresden Negro Issue Subject Of Speech

The Dresden Civil Liberties Case and its implications for Canadian life will be the subject of an address today at the Women's Union at 4 p.m. Sponsored by the UC SCM Forum, the speaker will be Miss Nancy Fraser, a U of T graduate who is doing research on the different racial and cultural groups in Canada. The Dresden issue concerns the plebiscite—of the town citizens who voted 5 to 1 against a by-law preventing public places from barring Negroes. Such discriminatory practices in most Canadian towns and cities are legal.

One dollar contributed to UNICEF buys enough raw cotton to make 15 diapers.

U. of Buffalo Cagemen Take Double Honors

Ints Lose 37-35 To Bison Frosh

Hart House Sports Nite patrons again got their share of neck and neck basketball thrills as the University of Buffalo Freshmen shaded the Varsity Intermediates 37-35 last night in a keenly contested hoop tilt. Diminutive Jim Rooney, shot making guard for the Buffalonians, put the game on the shelf with only seconds to go.

Jack MacKenzie and Doug Kettle sparked the Intermediate quintet as they fought doggedly to the very finish to get the edge on the Buffalonians. MacKenzie's accurate hook shot accounted for most of his thirteen points which led the Toronto total. Kettle, who displayed remarkable hustling and shooting ability, seemed to be the sparkplug of the Varsity machine. He was very active on the backboards of both friend and foe while netting ten points in the Varsity cause.

The locals and their opponents showed good ball handling form as the game began. Jack MacKenzie racked up eight points before the rest of the Varsity squad could get going while Rooney and fellow guard Sam Kantrowitz provided the markers for the Bison total with a fine lesson in the art of set shooting.

With Barber and Kettle managing the rebound department and MacKenzie sparking the scoring drive the locals were tied 15-15 at the half with the sharpshooting Buffalonians.

Buffalo drew ahead at the three-quarter mark by virtue of their temporary rebound control provided by Annable and Wise, entering the last stanza with a 27-23 lead over Varsity. Big Don Barber and MacKenzie combined to even the count only to have the lead change twice again. MacKenzie, with two minutes to go, sank a foul shot which knotted the count at 33-33 and Rooney began his clutch scoring display sinking a set shot which Barber nullified with one of his own. Seconds later it was Rooney again, this time for keeps for a close Buffalo win.

Buffalo Frosh: Rooney, 15; Smutko, Gilman, Kaplon, Shanbrook, Kantrowitz, 1; Craft, 9; Wiser, 3; Annable, 3; McGloin.

Varsity Ints: Rogers, 2; Stevenson, Denton, Ken Brown, 4; Al Brown, Kettle, 10; MacKenzie, 13; Cole, Barber, 6.

Speaking Of Sport

By BOB DNIEPER

The rules commission of the Canadian Intercollegiate Athletic Union meets this Saturday at Montreal, and all four coaches of the senior league have submitted proposed changes to the football rules now being used. Our own Bob Masterson has sent in suggestions for changing eight rules, and we agree that most of these rules need changing.

But—Masterson asks that either unlimited blocking is allowed, or that backfielders are allowed the regular ten yards blocking allowed linemen. In our humble opinion unlimited blocking would be bad for the game; it would open it up a little too wide and change the style of football from a combination of speed and power to one of speed alone.

One aspect of the game that we, for one, enjoy immensly is the strategy necessary to pierce an opposing line. With unlimited blocking, football would depend too much on speedy backs and blockers, rather than on the effectiveness of smart plays. Allowing backs ten blocking yards, however, is a change for the better. As it is now, most backs block past their limit anyhow, and are rarely called for it for the simple reason that the referee hasn't got twelve eyes. Coaches have even been known to instruct their backs to break the rule, knowing that the ref has little chance of catching them. To correct this farce, the CIAU should either provide an official for each offensive back to distinguish them from the linemen, or allow them ten yards.

Masterson also suggests a change in the third-down blocked-kick rule where the kicking side retains the ball after a blocked kick on third down, with a twenty-five yard penalty. He would like to see the blocking side get possession of the ball just the same as they would any other time the offence did not make yards in three downs. This seems a rational argument, and for our part, we can't see why the present rule was ever instituted. This rule puts a team in the position of gaining more by playing worse. If the attacking team plays badly and get their kick partially blocked and fail to make yards, the defence gets the ball. If the offence plays still worse and the kick is fully blocked, they get the down over 25 yards back and promptly kick for a net gain of 25 or 35 yards.

The University of Toronto is also asking for some less important changes, such as regard referee's signals, goal line fumbles, number of men dressed, kick-off blocking, and downfield receivers. They will also ask that behind-the-scrimmage-line forward passes be legalized.

Most of these changes have little chance of passing, though, because while the rules commission of the CIAU may pass them, the CRU probably will not. The intercollegiate league, while having a rules committee of their own, play under CRU rules because the CIAU is affiliated with the CRU. All we get out of this affiliation is uniform rules, but we are also put under many handicaps. All four intercollegiate coaches are in favor of these changes, yet they won't pass. Isn't the CIAU grown up enough to keep its own house?

Uniformity of rules may be okay, but it precludes any comparison of rules between two leagues. We feel that experimentation would be valuable for all leagues, and the sooner colleges play the way they think best without waiting for the time to lag of the conservative CRU, the better it will be for all concerned. The old idea of no tickee no laundlee should be applied to the CRU. No advantages, no affiliation.

By the way, whatever happened to George Drew?

Puck Ints Win From Macmen By 5-2 Score

By JOHN DUGAN

That hot Intermediate Hockey Club hit the McMaster Macmen in Hamilton yesterday and the rough, tough Macmen hit right back, very hard, but Jack Life's boys skated off with the win, 5 to 2.

The game started slowly with only one score in the initial canto. Preston scored from a breakaway on a spot pass from Barnes. In the second period things began to roar. Lickley and the Brothers Gawinski each notched one for Toronto while holding their opponents scoreless. Tempers flamed in this stanza as both teams came off the bench at one point, ready for action, and rarin' to go (at each other's necks, that is). The officials let things get out of hand, and a real fight finally started when Wally London, who seemed to be "Target for tonite" for the burly Macmen, was cross-checked into the boards and clubbed over the head as he fell. London pinned his attacker in one fall and was proceeding to massage his face gently when the law (officials) arrived and sentenced him to a major and a minor session in the sinbin. Wally was so incensed that he left the game and went and got his battered ear sewed up. Things simmered down after that.

The third period was much more peaceful. Pat McLoughlin and Pete Gawinski scored for Varsity while the McMaster scoring combo of Barnes and Preston joined forces to score one for Mac. McMaster's rough style of play slowed down the little Blues who like to stick to hockey and leave the fighting to the boxing and mat teams. Gary Carl played a stellar game in goal as he turned back several breakaways and weathered not a few lapses by his defenseman. Bill Allan steadied the defense and played the game well.

This win practically insures the Intermediate Crown for Varsity, but the boys will travel to London next week to sew it up by beating the big, capable Western Seniors who are the only serious competition.

Interfaculty Sports

Senior UC kept in the swim yesterday as they posted a close 27-25 victory over Senior Vic in the noon hour major hoop encounter. The red and white clicked well on the offense but were unable to tighten their defensive wall as much as they might have.

Art Schipper with eight points was tops for the winners followed by Cy Durbin with six and Slim Tisdale who got five. Freeman and Johnson were good for four each for UC while track star Jack Milne led the Vicmen with six points. Other Vic producers were MacIntosh with five and Harris with four.

Intercollegiate Volleyball

The Intercollegiate Volleyball team has been picked and the following are the girls who will defend their title this Saturday at McMaster: Ev Aiken, Vic; Shirley Brown Vic; Sylvia Holmes, PHE; Bev Lowry PHE; Eileen Jackson, PHE; Pat Conway, PHE; Muriel Chinn, U.C. (playing manager); Tana Jensen, Vic; Dody Jones, St. H.; Marilyn Jones, St. H.; Joan Lynn, Vic; and Mary Manon, St. M.

Intramural Volleyball

St. Hilda's fought to a clean win over U.C. 1 on Tuesday to the tune of 32-18. Vic 1 edged out Physio in a close-fought game, with a score of 31-27. Playing off in the semi-finals are: PHE 1, League 1; Vic 1, League 2; PHE 11, League 3; U.C., League 4; Meds, League 5.

UC I battled their way to a one-sided 4-0 victory over PHE II in yesterday's hockey game. Jean Gillan led the scoring with two goals, with Betty May and Marg McGuiness copping one each.

The PHE team lacked the ability to play as a team and much of the play centred around their goalie, Joan Summerville. This pretty well puts PHE out of the running for top slot in their league. Meds are still leading with six points, and UC I follow with four.

"Big Boy" Chalmers Tops Victorious Buffalonians In 57-29 Hoop Debacle

It was a tall, fast team who knew their basketball that marched out onto the floor of Hart House at the Sports Nite last night and soundly trounced the Varsity Blues by a score of 57-29. The University of Buffalo Srs. had the situation well in hand right from the opening whistle.

Buffalo checking was extremely effective in the first half and the Blues did not light up the scoreboard until 5 minutes had passed. Once again faced by a taller team, the Blues were faced with the difficulty of gaining almost no rebounds at either end of the court.

The Blues showed the necessary fight, but their set shots, taken from far outside the free throw line, could not kep up with the hoop-shooting of tall Buffalo men from the key area.

Big Jack Chalmers, 6'3½" center for the visitors was a tower of strength in both the rebound and the scoring departments. He led the pack in scoring with 11 points and set up many more baskets with his tricky handoff plays.

Score at the half was 22-10 for the visitors, but as the second stanza opened the play speeded up and the scoring along with it. Led by the set shots of Doug Wigle and Jack Gray, the Blues managed to keep pace with the visitors temporarily.

Blue fouls were heavy, and the Buffalo squad proved that they were not ones to miss an opportunity by making a high percentage of their chances. Ted Luck was the only man who seemed to be able to pot fouls with any consistency for Varsity.

As the last 5 minutes of play rolled around, the Buffalo boys really opened up with the attack, with Willie Needham and Harold Kuhn pacing their teammates. The Buffalo lead was gradually widened, until the scoreboard read 57-29 at the final whistle, a 28 point margin in their favour.

The visitors showed a strong depth in all positions that the Blues could not match. All three center men had the advantage over Varsity's Ted Luck, who played a hard game for the Blues.

Lineups

BUFFALO — Muto (2); Nappo, John (9); Ingham, Gicewicz (2); Miller, Stephens (2); Thorn(2); Kuhn (6); Corral (2); Gushue (10); Needham (8); Chalmers (11); Reid (3).

VARSITY—Wigle (6); Carruthers (1); Gray (7); McManus (6); Bell (2); Braithwaite, Huycke, Henderson (1); Luck (5); Gibbs.

Central Defaults To Toronto Jrs. Replay Tuesday

Varsity's entry in the junior city basketball league didn't see action last night as their scheduled contest with Central Y was called off due to the failure of the "Y" hoopsters to make an appearance. The game, the first of the three encounters carded for last night's Sports Night in Hart House, was an important one which would have decided the undisputed holder of first place in the league standings and the accomanying bye into the city playoffs. Coach Barry Lowes announced that the game would be played next Tuesday night at Hart House.

The reason for the absence of the Central squad, it is understood, was the early hour of the game although other league contests have been played at that hour earlier in the schedule.

Central Y and Toronto Varsity met last year in the city finals with the "Y" taking the nod and going on to win the Dominion championships. The games this year have yet to see a Varsity win but the scores have been consistently close as they were last year right up until the final game.

The juniors split up into two squads last night to substitute for their scheduled game and put on an inter-squad display for two ten minute periods before the intermediate meeting.

on the sidelines

By BETTY ASTON

Perhaps the most obvious reason why girl hockey players seem to have trouble staying upright in a game, is that their sense of balance is obviously lacking, but there is a reason behind the reason. It takes practice to gain this equilibrium on skates, and practice is something this year's teams in the intramural league have not had.

Take the PHE seconds for instance. Ten girls on this team had no previous hockey practice. Sure they've skated before, but skating with a hockey stick clutched in your hands, trying to keep your eye on the puck, on the girl who looks as if she might just take the law into her own hands and do a little bodychecking, and on the boards because you have to stop before you get to them, is a different matter.

These ten girls who do or die for PHE all have the primary requisites needed to hold their own on any girl's team, but they haven't had enough practice. Usually both girl's and boy's teams practice on outdoor ice, but this year there have been very few opportunities to do so due to the bright sunny weather we have been enjoying. PHE had one practice before they started their league games, and this was barely enough time for the coach to choose a team, let alone work out plays for attack and defence.

The next time you see a breakaway start at a team's own blue-line, and you laugh because there are no defence players defending, bear in mind that perhaps those defence players haven't yet figured out whether they are playing defence or forward. The only practice they have had to learn how to play as a team has been in the three or four games they have played, and by the end of the season they will be just warming up.

SAC To Aid Carabin Plan With Money

Plans are under way to improve local Carabin Weekends and to pursuade other universities to take up the idea of visits of students from one university to another.

These plans will be implemented in two ways: The SAC Wednesday night promised stronger support for future visits of University of Montreal students to this campus. The local NFCUS committee expects to present a report along with one by the University of Montreal committee at the NFCUS national executive conference next September telling of the students' visits made between the two universities during the last two years. The two reports will be meant to encourage other universities to have similar visits.

The SAC Wednesday night decided to give official support to future Carabin weekends and accept financial responsibility for them. For future weekends the SAC will appoint a chairman who will preside over a committee of two other organizers; one from the local NFCUS committee and one from the local ISS committee. The NFCUS committee is a working committee of SAC.

ISS Started Idea

Local NFCUS Committee Chairman Tom Symons said last night it is natural for the ISS committee to take part in future Weekends, since it did the whole job of organizing the original one last year and it helped run the Weekends this year.

He said the new system is meant to ensure the Weekends will become an annual affair, possibly of a more extensive nature.

"The Weekends this year and last have engendered a lot of good will between Carabins and Varsity students," he stated. "They have given an opportunity to get together and hear the other person's viewpoint."

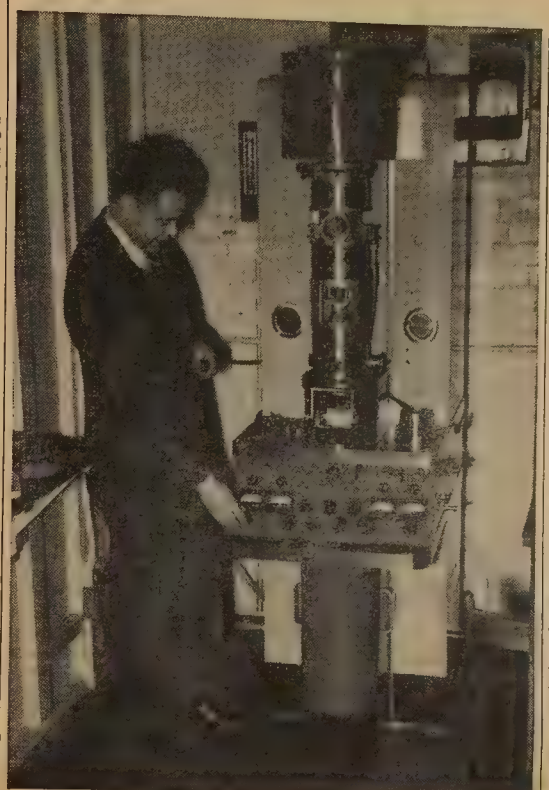
It has been suggested that the Weekends be made longer, possibly including more cultural events than past ones have.

At its next meeting the NFCUS committee will discuss the drawing up of a report on the success and organization of the Weekends. They will also decide whether they should ask the University of Montreal NFCUS committee to bring a similar report to the national executive meeting next September.

"Brunswickianne" Now Pink Sheet For Co-ed Week

Fredericton, Feb. 10 — (CUP) — A pink sheet has been issued by the U. of New Brunswick. The name of the student newspaper has been changed from "Brunswickian" to "Brunswickianne". All this is in honor of Co-ed week.

The paper, which is normally run by the usual mixed staff, has been taken over by women and the editorial column is filled with bright homilies such as "Never underestimate the power . . ." etc.



The week started off with a flourish Monday night with a toboggan party which broke off promptly at 11:59:30.

Laval Hosts To Fourteen For Weekend

Fourteen students are spending the weekend at a conference at Laval University as part of the Eastern Canadian conference arranged by the External Affairs Committee of the Laval Students' Council. The topic for discussion will be "The Christian in the Contemporary World." It will be conducted in French and English and there will be several outstanding speakers.

The students who left for Quebec City Wednesday night were drawn from Vic, St Mike's, Loretto, Knox, and Emmanual Colleges and the School of Graduate Studies.

Lectures Miss Objectives; Informal Groups To Help

That lectures are falling short of their objectives, resulting in a widening gap between professor and student will be the theme of a series of informal discussions groups to be held by the ISS for the next three years. This series and the idea behind it is something entirely new on the campus, an ISS spokesmen said.

First of these discussion groups will be held in the Rhodes Room of Trinity College next Tuesday, the 14th. Official topic will be "What Lectures Are Intended To Do" and the keynote opinions will come from Professors Saunders and Coventry, while the student viewpoint will be represented by John Hastings and Geoffrey Pearsons.

Since such a group is a new idea it will of necessity remain a large single body this term. It is hoped, however, that later it will be possible to form individual groups so that students will be able to meet their professors on even and informal terms.

It is also hoped that the meetings will serve as an informal battleground in which conflicts of opinion within the student body and between professors and students may be settled.

BEER STEINS FOR ARTSMEN

Edmonton, Feb. 10 —(CUP)— A baby beer stein will be given away to all persons attending the Engineers Ball at the U. of Alberta. The stein, about the size of an egg-cup, was originally designed for Artsmen, so they could quaff their beer round for round with the Engineers.

WFDY Reps Reds Kirkconnell Claims 'No' – SCM Replies

Wolfville, N.B., Jan. 31 —(CUP)— "Only three Canadian representatives were SCM'ers, the others were Communists," stated Dr. Watson Kirkconnell, president of Acadia University, last week, referring to the Canadian delegation which attended the Budapest Festival of the World Federation of Democratic Youth held in Hungary last summer.

"The S.C.M. delegates to the W.F.D.Y. sponsored Budapest Festival were not completely innocents abroad" stated President Kirkconnell. Because reports on the festival were written by socialists who did not have even an elementary knowledge of the economic system of their native Canada and who had an apparent ignorance of the language and history of eastern Europe, President Kirkconnell said, he felt most of their evidence and conclusions must be discounted; and further, that "the S.C.M. group seemed to have condemned our existing system without studying it."

"At least seven Canadian representatives were non - Communist" declared Mary McCrimmon, General Secretary of the Students Christian Movement, at Toronto yesterday.

"We were quoted as 'condemning our existing system' when we continually stood up for the liberal democratic system precisely on the grounds that our way of life has serious faults and we hope to correct them," Miss McCrimmon stated. "Both privately and in a speech before the Congress we contradicted the Communist black-and-white picture of the struggle between America and the Soviet Union."

Miss McCrimmon added: "Dr. Kirkconnell apparently misjudged us merely because the idea of arguing with 'Communist reptiles' as with fellow human beings has never occurred to him."

Canadian Unity Ahead Victoria Debate Topic For Monday Evening

That present trends in Canada give no hope for true Canadian national unity, will be debated in Alumni Hall, Victoria College, on Monday at 8 p.m.

Defending the motion for Vic will be Harry Green, IV Poli Sci., and Jim Service, IV Hist.; Wally Emon, III SPS, and Peter Mosteller, III Pass, will opose the motion for St. Mike's.

Mosteller claims that, "The issue is important to all of us as Canadians because we are in part responsible for the unity of the country. To prove disunity would reflect personal failures in each of us."

Service said that the affirmative will attack the question from the standpoint that there are certain prerequisites essential to the attainment of true Canadian national unity. "These essentials have not yet been achieved."

Emmanuel Plans Spiritual Invasion Sunday Evening

Inspired by Dr. Soper's evangelistic work in England, Dr. W. J. Johnston of Toronto's Eglinton United Church conceived a local invasion of his own charge. He looked to Emmanuel College to effect a visitation campaign, to have the students wage a spiritual invasion of his congregation, under the mission theme "Let Christ Be Lord."

Dr. Johnston's plan had similar inspiration at Emmanuel and the two will come to fruition in the Emmanuel College Student Society (ECSS) Mission to Eglinton Church last night when the students will visit some 800 members of the congregation. Sunday evening ECSS President Don Wilson will conduct a service of witness; The College Choir under Dr. Kenneth Cousland will sing the anthem, and Dean A. Dawson Matheson will speak.

Instrumental in planning the mission were a committee of three; Ross Crighton, Jane Bone, and Stewart Porteus, preparation was under Jack Mettler, and visitation under Jim Young. The campaign's purpose is two-fold: to assist the minister in reaching a charge of 2400 members, and to give the participants invaluable experience for their life work. Over and above this the mission will be an aid to revitalize personal and family worship, under the guiding principle, "Let Christ Be Lord."

The SAC Story

Not A Garbage Can

By JOAN EDDIS

(This is the fifth in a series of articles dealing with the Students' Administrative Council and its many activities.)

It has been called the "garbage can" of the SAC. It's not because the work done by the Student Service Commission is trash but because often the leftovers and miscellaneous tasks are tossed into its lap.

Most of the activities that fall under the jurisdiction of the Student Service Commission are routine matters that are handled by the administrative staff of the SAC. Housing, employment and interest-free student loans all fall into this category. Since 1947 five people have been employed during the summer and about a dozen more in September in order to find adequate housing for students. Throughout the year a separate office and staff are maintained to handle this service. Last session around 4,000 students and over 150 staff were found a place to live with the assistance of the press, radio and various organizations throughout the city.

Find Employment

In 1948-49 the SAC found Christmas and part-time employment for over 5,000 students. Well over another 5,000 were placed in summer jobs ranging from digging post holes to painting towers, and from driving busses for scenic tours to delivering ice.

Thanks to the untiring efforts of the Student Service Commission last session, a thriving second-hand book exchange was set up this fall which required five part-time workers to handle the rush of business. Over 1070 students brought in books to be sold at their own evaluation and more than 6,000 texts were purchased through the exchange.

Student Service Commissioner is UC's Jane Hill, one of Varsity's six delegates to the ISS seminar in Breda, Holland, last summer. Although she wears a beret around the campus she says she wore a blue and white knitted toque on her travels throughout Europe.

As Student Service commissioner Jane is the connecting link between ISS and the SAC. When drives such as Red Feather or UNICEF crop up, it's Jane who gets the job.

NFCUS Benefits

Student service and co-ordination on a national scale are the task of the National Federation of Canadian University Students (NFCUS, pronounced "Nifcus"). NFCUS had its beginnings back in 1927 but it was not until it was revamped after the war that many positive achievements were accomplished. Reduced rail fares for students, the forming of the Canadian University Press (CUP), student exchanges and the brief presented to the Massey Commission in Halifax on "Federal Aid To Higher Education" are all NFCUS accomplishments. This year will be highlighted by the first NFCUS seminar ever to be held.

The set-up of the committee here is unique in two ways. Of all the NFCUS committees across Canada it is the only one which is incorporated in the Students' Council. Because of this, all Toronto NFCUS policy is voted on by the SAC. In this way any decision, such as NFCUS-IUS affiliation, carries extra weight. The closer tie-up also keeps the SAC in touch with what is taking place on campi across Canada. This has proved especially valuable this year for the NFCUS committee has taken the lead in the investigation of the price of text books across Canada.

The second unique feature of the committee is that all its 17 members are elected representatives of the various colleges and faculties. No other Council commission has its members especially elected from the student body. NFCUS chairman Tom Symons, Trinity SAC rep, is keeping his committee hopping. In addition to the weekly meeting, the NFCUS representatives gather once

Giants With Clubs

The last half century has seen two ruinous world wars and a long depression. This new half century has already heard the "go-ahead" signal for the production of the most destructive weapon yet known. What hope is there for the world and its people in the remaining fifty years of this century? For in the whole history of the universe it is only the next fifty years which are of any real concern to us.

Ideally, a university is a place where all human knowledge is earnestly and honestly investigated. A valid argument is never rejected because it is unpalatable; prejudices and pre-conceptions must bow to reason.

Our best hope for a peaceful and well-ordered world lies in our understanding of the stresses and strains which beset our increasingly complicated civilization and in our successful meeting of the challenges presented.

This can only be achieved by a free speculation in all realms of thought. Scientist and philosopher: theologian and atheist: fascist and marxist: genius and crackpot: all these must be encouraged to brood to their heart's content while at university.

If any of these shock or offend us, they must be indulged for the slightest suppression is the thin wedge of oppression. A totalitarian state depends for its continued existence upon thought control but a democracy survives by a continual stimulation of radical ideas.

At the crux of the matter lies the argument that some of the more radical forms of thought must be suppressed in this democracy for the democratic way to survive.

Democracy and Communism are still apparently irreconcilable; the political freedom we enjoy makes the autocratic methods of the modern Communist state repugnant to us. But, if Communism or any other political philosophy has anything to say, let us listen; we may learn something for we still have much to learn.

Our campus has been described as a "hot-bed of Communism" in spite of the fact that Communist arguments have attracted very few adherents. Such unreasonable and provocative charges are a sharp reminder that the anti-Communist hysteria now gripping the US may well menace us here in Canada. The mental atrophy which such a hysteria tends to produce is most inopportune at this time when the infant UN and the precarious world peace must be nurtured with every bit of wisdom and patience we can muster.

The next fifty years of this century may well be the biggest turning point in the history of the world. The lead and conceivably the direction in working our way through the maze before us, will have to come from the students of today.

To face the problems we need a grasp of the facts before us and the courage and the honesty to face these facts.

We are menaced by a strong and unscrupulous Russia. But that should provoke neither hate nor panic.

If the US and Russia face each other like two giants with small heads and large clubs they are condemned to mutual defeat before they start using the clubs. As people learn to govern themselves rather than to be governed, ideas rather than clubs will shape the course of human events, and while giants may fall and their clubs splinter ideas are indestructible.

ART ∞ MUSIC ∞ DRAMA

Albert Marson

Mr. Albert Marson presented the third of the Hart House Five O'Clock Concerts on Wednesday afternoon. The programme consisted of two oratorio arias, and German, French and English songs. The arias were Waft Her, Angels To The Skies from Handel's Jeptha, and Haydn's In Native Worth from The Creation. Mr. Marson's rich voice made both thrilling. There was a little of the ethereal in the former, and the latter was joyous rather than noble, but in the interpretation of oratorio there is much variance of opinion. This writer would have preferred a slower tempo in the Haydn aria, which might have given more nobility or dignity, especially in the piano introduction. The recitative of the Handel selection was given dramatic treatment, in keeping with the text, which portrays the anguish of a father forced to sacrifice his own child

Mr. Marson's voice was somewhat less effective in the German lieder and the French songs, though it was never unpleasant. It is most effective at forte and double forte range. When soft effects were required, the voice sometimes sounded cramped or metallic, and this was more evident in the French than in the German. Adelaide by Beethoven, and Minnelied by Brahms were the German numbers; Le Temps des Lilas of Chausson, and Le Moulin by Pierre were the French.

The most effective of the English songs for me was Elgar's Like To the Damask Rose. Sigh No More, Ladies was accurate rather than suave. Mr. Marson closed his recital effectively with a group of spirituals Nobody Knows; Heav'n, Heav'n; Honour, Honour; and Josh'a Fit the Battle of Jericho.

Miss Irene McLellan was accompanist, and followed the soloist accurately from the rich, expansive mood of The Bird of the Wilderness to the quiet pathos of "Nobody Knows de Trouble I've Seen". There wer times when her playing seemed rather brittle; and as mentioned above, the opening of In Native Worth was somewhat lacking in dignity.

CBC

This week the CBC Wednesday night drama production was a play by Lister Sinclair. Directed by the author, The Hand That Made the Mask was well conceived and produced with that high standard of acting ability that we have come to expect from the CBC.

Lister Sinclair deserves credit for the contribution he has made to the Canadian theatre in his consistent choice of such topics for his plays. Unfortunately he sometimes gets carried away with himself and deals with such an obscure little corner of this sprawling country of ours that the more significant repartee is intelligible only to some 500 souls perhaps only 10 of whom ever listen to the CBC. The Hand That Made the Mask never falls into this error. The setting is as homey and familiar as mother's apple pie, and the characters involved could be found in almost any Ontario town.

The play largely concerns a duel between a professed intellectual, ably played by Bud Knapp, and an upstanding Scotsman of iron character, equally well played by Frank Peddle. The duel is moral in nature the principals being concerned with maintaining the nimbus of each being much sinned against by the other. Seconded by various offspring and friends the combatants fought until the defection of their sympathisers forced a draw. In the process the middle class pillar of society, smug with the assurance of his local minister that his reservation is checked through with heaven, is discovered to have feet

Results Differ For, Against Vic's Column

Nine out of ten students want to keep "Vic's Corner" in The Varsity, announced Vic Publicity Director, Kip Fleming, III, yesterday. This figure was a result of replies to the questionnaire in the last column.

He added, "The response was rather limited, and we realize that it is biased." VCU officials are now undertaking a series of telephone calls in an attempt to poll about 150 students, and in this way get a more authoritative report.

Varsity Poll

In attempt to get a slightly more complete coverage, two Varsity reporters went over to Vic to conduct a small poll of their own. The results were found to be about 2 to 1 against keeping the clounn in its present form.

Supporting the column, Art Payne, I Soc. & Phil. "From my experience on office papers I found that people like the personal touch However I doubt very much whether it is worth two hundred dollars."

Frank Jennings, II pass said, "I'm in favour of it. It consolidates the news into one spot. I think it is better than last year's."

"Vic's Corner' reports what is going on at Victoria better than The Varsity does," said Ian Scott, I Soc. & Phil.

"I think it is written to cater to the high-school mind and it isn't indicative of University intelligence," stated Bruce Brock, III Pass.

Jack Rutherford, I Soc. & Phil. said that he'd read the first column and half of the second, but after that he stopped reading until the controversy. "I feel that anything important enough to get in the column should get regular news coverage," he said. "They should use the space for news coverage."

"I have no definite ideas on the subject since I doubt if I have read the column more than twice in the past years," stated R. M. Minty, IV English Lang. and Lit.

"I think it is worth while for news coverage", said Ralph Scane I Soc. & Phil., "but there is too much extraneous detail and Fleming's humour isn't too funny some times. I might add that the

Tag Day Net For UNICEF 43,610 Milks

Yesterday Varsity students gave the equivalent of 43,610 glasses of milk to UNICEF for children around the world. One hundred girls donated their time to tag in the drizzle and slush, collecting $623 for the United Nations International Children's Emergency Fund.

But the UNICEF drive for funds on the campus is not over. A dance is being held tonight in Hart House. The three orchestras for the dance, one of which is Bobby Gimby, have been donated so that all the money raised will go to UNICEF.

The entertainment planned for the dance will include Eric Christmas, who has been called "the funniest man in radio". Skits and impersonations are his specialty.

Tickets for the dance will be available today at the SAC offices in Hart House and the UC basement, and tonight at the observatory.

British Nutrition Improved By Rations Says Socialist

Prof. Cass-Beggs told the UC CCF Club yesterday that the issues in the forthcoming British Elections could be divided into two groups — that is those that are phony and those that are real. The phony issues are those of the Conservatives who seek to reduce social services and taxation by removing subsidies. These issues are phony because the social services and improved standards of living are impossible without high taxation and a planned economy.

The speaker stated that the Labour Party is seeking a mandate to continue and consolidate their program of nationalization and planned economy. There is no spectacular program being presented to the voters. He believes that Labour will try in the next five years to organize the work undertaken before burdening the administration with an increased load. The full benefits of nationalization already undertaken have not been realized. Therefore further nationalization will not be brought about for its own sake until the administration is ready.

The Labour Party has improved housing conditions and standards of living. Prof. Cass-Beggs said that improved nutrition was due to rationing and secure prices brought about by subsidies.

On the other hand he said that the Conservatives believe they can produce these benefits by means other than a planned economy.

The speaker believes that there are two danger groups for the Labour Party. The first is the group from twenty to thirty years old. They are accustomed to taking orders after army training and are not used to thinking for themselves. They did well during the war and now have to work.

The other group is the upper middle class who resent having their ranks swollen by the better paid workers who can now afford their luxuries. The middle class privileges have not been curtailed by the Government, but everywhere they go, for a vacation or recreation, the facilities are crowded by those who can now afford these things for the first time.

Prof. Cass-Beggs predicted that despite an increased vote in the rural areas the number of seats gained by the Labour Party will not be greatly affected in the new election. If Labour wins a majority for the next two elections there will be no Conservative Party but only Right and Left Socialists.

REPORTER BARRED

Ottawa, Feb. 10 — (CUP) — A Carleton reporter was barred from a meeting of the Student Council recently. He was asked to leave the meeting while a contentious amendment regarding council control over the Carleton undergrad newspaper was debated.

"If the press were present I think motives would be misconstrued", said the member who moved the in camera session. The amendment which was passed by the council, gives any member of the council the right to hold up publication of the paper for twenty-four hours, or until a Council quorum can be found, on the grounds of undesirable material. At Toronto, the Editor and one other masthead member are non-voting members of the SAC, and are permitted to sit in and talk on all issues.

Work For Peace To Be Theme At SCM Conference

"The Task of Christians in Working for Peace" is the theme of a conference to be held Saturday at St. Cyprian's Church at College and Manning Avenues. The discussions are sponsored by the Student Christian Movement of the U. of T. and youth groups from churches in the city.

Reverend Franklin Wu of China will speak on the topic of "China and the Future". He will point out the role China can be expected to play as a force for peace in the immediate future. Discussions will follow on such topics as: "What can be done to hasten U.N. control of the Atom bomb" and "What can individual Canadians do about present day world problems." They will be introduced by a panel of three students.

"This is a strategic time to hold such a conference", Ted Baxter, chairman of the conference reported. "The recent announcement that the H-Bomb is going to be produced has brought the whole question of atomic energy more sharply into focus, and made the necessity of some sort of regulation even more urgent."

"Events in China within the past few months have left many people wondering what will happen to the East-West balance, which is so

Anti-Discrimination Legislation Asked By Sociology Grad

There is no justification for condemning the discriminatory practices against Negroes in Dresden only, because prejudices prevail in many Canadian communities, said Miss Nancy Fraser, Sociology Grad at a meeting of the UC SCM forum on the "Dresden Issue and Its Implications for Canadian Life." Miss Fraser is now engaged in research on relations between different racial and cultural groups in Canada. "It is appalling that more group surveys are not made of minority prejudices. Many would be shocked if the information would be placed before them," she continued.

Miss Fraser explained that 17% of the residents of Dresden are Negroes descended from those who escaped from slavery on the underground railway prior to the American Civil War. There has been some intermarriage between the two races. In schools there is also a dual system of education with considerable equality in the early grades. Regarding public places, Miss Fraser said that of the five restaurants, three serve only white people; no barbers or hairdressers would serve Negroes, the hairdressers for example giving the excuse that their equipment was not suitable for that type of hair. The only club that allows Negroes is the Canadian Legion which however has had no social activities until last month.

Mainly Farmers

Most of the coloured people of Dresden are farmers since as Miss Farmer explained this was the only work they could do "without being kicked in the jaw." Girls who take some stenographic training usually have to return to the farm because they cannot get clerical jobs in spite attitude that the coloured people are of ability.

"The people of Dresden take the fine but should be kept in their place," Miss Fraser said. "Like the people of the South the feeling is that they should be free in their own sphere but the white residents resent any disturbance of the situation they feel is fine for all as it is," Miss Fraser continued.

One of the reasons that the referendum didn't pass was said to be because the word "compel" public places to serve Negroes was included. Other reasons, Miss Fraser said, that were given for the defeat of the referendum was the publicity. But the speaker felt without publicity the feeling would be at a lower level and the issue would not get the airing it needed.

Recommends Legislation

As a solution to the problem, Miss Fraser suggested that legislation was the immediate need with education and the influence of the pulpit as a long range project. Although the situation is unbearable for the Negroes of Dresden, legislation that prevented restricted covenants in housing and fair employment practices for all is needed for all the provinces.

As an example that such legislation can work, Miss Fraser referred to the anti-discrimination act in New York State. The law there, she explained, works in two parts. The first is a board of official commissioners which investigates employment discrimination, and unofficial groups such as community councils and social workers and prominent persons who prove an incentive for education by talking to employers and round table discussions on prejudice. Miss Fraser also noted that the legislation had proved its worth in that many employers changed their employment practices immediately. Others had been educated through the law in that people find that they can enjoy working with different peoples whom they have probably had no close contact with before. Only a few cases have actually been taken to court, she said.

Widespread Discrimination

Miss Fraser described the widespread discrimination in Canada by noting that even in Toronto where there are 6,000 Negroes and many other minorities such as Jews, Chinese and Japanese Canadians who cannot get many jobs regardless of their ability. In Nova Scotia the Negroes, she described, have been held in uneducated, poverty-stricken despair that has only recently begun to improve under the initiative of the Negroes themselves.

ISS Announces Tours To Europe Being Arranged

International Student Service Study Tours to Europe are now being arranged, announced Bill McDougall, chairman of the Toronto committee of the ISS.

These Student Tours are designed for students who wants to go abroad and see the world; who want to learn about the cultural, political and economic life of other countries; who want to travel and study with students from other lands; who believe that "ignorance of other's ways and lives has been a common cause throughout the history of mankind, of that suspicion and mistrust between people of the world through which their differences have all too often broken into war"; who want to help interpret the best traditions of America.

Tour themes were chosen to help students understand the economic and political trends in the countries visited. Other Tours are designed for those interested in Art, Music and Architecture.

Informal groups, informed leadership, students from other nations and serious study themes, are characteristic of these ISS Tours. Furthermore students will have opportunity to visit historic and cultural spots in Europe, hike in the Alps or attend the Salzburg Music Festival.

Personal Attention

Each tour will accommodate 20 persons. This provides for individual discussion with leaders in government, industry, labor, education and social services who are chosen to meet the group and who are able to give firsthand information about the political, cultural, economic and social life of their countries.

Students Gripe; Too Much Work At U. of Alberta

Edmonton — (CUP) — Students at the university have no soft life. A survey by the Gateway, shows that a student at the university is required to spend almost as much time at labs and lectures as the average office employee is expected to spend at work. And this does not include the extra hours that must be spent studying the course.

An investigation into the work required for a fourth year chemistry student shows that a total of 45 hours a week was taken up by labs and lectures.

In medicine much the same problem exists. A fourth year med student, it was learned, spends around 40 hours a week in lectures, labs and clinics. In addition to this around five or six hours are spent in travelling between the university and city hospitals to attend clinics.

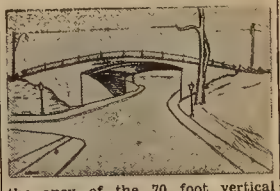
Science and Engineering

By JOE HARRISON

Getting away from the destructive aspects of science and engineering, today's column deals with a subject a little closer to home. The new by-pass on the east side of the campus made its debut quietly and without fanfare, and for those who think a bridge is merely a span thrown haphazardly across a gap we offer this description of the new addition to the campus. It is gratifying to note that the much maligned engineer can approach his work with an aesthetic appreciation worthy of the artist.



Mr. Davis is a fourth year student in Civil Engineering, President of his year and one of the stalwarts behind the activities of the Engineering Society.

J. H.

THE QUEEN'S PARK CRESCENT BRIDGE

By H. B. DAVIS

A pleasing new configuration in the silhouette of the University has been added with the completion of the new overpass over Old King's College Road. It is, at the same time, a striking exhibit of the modern structural designer's attempt to achieve aesthetic dignity in conjunction with economic and structurally sound design. The bridge can be classified in structural parlance as a rigid frame of the reinforced concrete slab type. This particular type is the most common of the rigid frame family and is best adapted to span lengths of the order of 40 to 80 feet. The Queen's Park Bridge has a clear span of exactly 50 feet, with a crown thickness of 18 inches at the apex of the 70 foot vertical curve which composes the floor contour.

New Structural Species

The rigid frame bridge is a new structural species which has evolved within the past thirty years, thanks to the dual causation of a revolutionary change in structural thought and the prodigious growth of automotive traffic following the first World War. The concept of continuity in the design of structural members is a radical, but logical, departure from the old idea of thinking of each component of a structure acting independently. With continuity we think of the whole structure acting together to resist the applied load with a consequent gain in economy. The prime obstacle to the use of this logical principle was that it made the structure statically indeterminate, and this engendered fear, or laziness, as regards the mathematics involved in indeterminate design.

New Designs

However, a research student at the Univeristy of Illinois, one Mikishi Abe, was able to correlate analytical and experimental data from a series of tests to prove that the rigid frame had effective continuity and that it was capable of exact design. Shortly after these results were published, Arthur G. Hayden and his associates on the Westchester County Park Commission were attempting to find a solution to the problem of an economical type of grade separation structure for use on the controlled access parkway system they were pioneering. After unsuccessfully trying three-hinged arches and other types they designed a rigid frame bridge for overpass and found that it was economically, as well as structurally, suitable. In the decade which followed, Hayden and his associates had ample opportunity to design and construct many varying styles of rigid frames on the network of parkways which Westchester County built. They used a design scheme which would technically be called a modified slope-deflection method and which proved adequate for their needs. In 1929, however, Professor Hardy Cross of Yale published his theory of moment distribution which has been called 'perhaps the most powerful and versatile tool of structural analysis ever invented'. This was the grand-daddy of the Relaxation Methods which Sir Richard Southwell, the third Wallberg Lecturer, has put to such excellent effect, and it proved to be the tool which has placed continuous structural design within the grasp of the average structural designer. This method is now used in most rigid frame designs and it was the basis of the design of the Queen's Park Crescent Bridge by Tom Ivory, formerly of the City Bridge Department.

The continuity effected between the abutments and center span of the bridge allows the structure to be shaped to follow the moment intensity which is a minimum at the crown and maximum at the knees, thus presenting the characteristic inverted U-shape which we associate with the rigid frame, and which is its strongest architectural advantage.

Neighborhood Bridges

There are other rigid frame bridges in the city and vicinity with which we are all quite familiar. One of these is the CNR bridge across St. Clair Avenue between Prescott and Caledonia, which was the first rigid frame built for railway loading on this continent. The Department of Highways are using a particularly beautiful style of frame on their new dual lane highways such as 2a and the Toronto-Barrie highway. Although these have the external appearance of the ordinary slab type, they are actually hollow concrete girders built around steel frames which serve as the reinforcing and also as a support for the formwork during construction.

All these bridges serve as ample proof of the fact that a structure can be structurally sound as well as being aesthetically 'right', and point the way to that for which all structural designers should strive, a structure which equally fulfills the requirements of aesthetics, economics and structural design.

that the itineraries of the first may be extended if desired.

Beginning this year there will be a "packaged" Tour. Many European countries will be visited giving students an opportunity to study the major problems related to the establishment of economic unity in Europe.

Canadian Study Tour Members sail from Quebec on a student ship sailing June 26 and will return on a similar ship arriving in New York on September 15. Return passage will cost $325.00 approximately. Per diem costs range from $3.00 to $5.50, depending on the country visited.

Applications for these Tours must be in to the local ISS committee before March 15. Selection will be made on the basis of academic and personal qualifications, on interests and ability to make available the summer's experiences to the Tour participant's campus.

of clay.

A typical Sinclairism is the clever device whereby the play is drawn together by the almost continuous presence of a colourless self effacing newspaperman, who quaintly borrows small amounts of money in order to attract attention to himself, and in whose hands is vested the final explanation of the final mystery in the play. In some subtle way Mr. Dutton (played with sympathy and restraint by John Dranie) seems in his triumph to transcend the more vital characters. This triumph of mediocrity and goodness over vitality and human frailty is somehow sad.

Students Gripe

Arts students seem to get a better deal. Average number of hours a week for the arts students is about 18. But one arts student pointed out that while the hours of lectures were lighter in this course than in any other, the additional amount of reading made up for it.

One agriculture student told the Gateway that he could spend all his time on just a couple of courses out of the six he is taking.

Anti-Discrimination

"Although much of the reduction must come from the people of Dresden and other communities themselves, legislation is the immediate need for it—a legal basis upon which prejudice can be reduced. This proves a need for a Bill of Rights in Canada for as the situation stands today no test case such as the Dresden issue can be taken to the courts or be declared unconstitutional as the American constitution provides," Miss Vivian Mahood, member of the delegation sent to Dresden to investigate the case by the Civil Liberties Association, commented at the meeting.

The delegation of organizations that presented a brief on the need for Civil Rights legislation to Premier Frost recently received a cool reception, Miss Fraser concluded. She said she thought the government was not yet ready to support the issue because they probably did not realize the situation existed until recently nor that legislation has been passed that can work.

a week to discuss how to improve NFCUS nationally.

Being a Trinity man, Tom sports a blazer and puffs a pipe which consumes untold quantities of matches. Just as he is lavish with matches, Tom is unsparing with his own time and energy, sparking many projects which would otherwise die out.

This year his committee has co-operated with the UTDU (U of T Debating Union), under SAC rep Dave Quigley, and with the national executive of NFCUS in forming the National University Debating Association. The first National debating championships will take place at the University of Ottawa after exams.

Debates chairman Dave Quigley hails from St. Mike's where he is president of the Students' Council. Dave is a man of action. If he believes in something he won't hesitate either to state his views or to act on them. When the Macmillan Co. refused to continue the sale of books to the University Press in the fall, St. Mike's, led by Dave, was the first to suggest a remedy for the situation. The suggestion was to boycott Macmillan.

Speaking Of Sport

By BOB DNIEPER

The green, corroded statue of Jason in the Hart House Quadrangle sits there year in, year out, just staring into space. Poor old fellow! In all kinds of weather he sits there looking and thinking, and nobody appreciates him; nobody knows why Jason stands in the Quadrangle. We'll tell you. Jason is an engineer!

Three years before the present School Of Practical Science was built, (B.C. 413) a young Greek by the name of Jason Speropopulous was sent to the University of Toronto by the Greek government to study Civil Engineering. The engineering course at the time was held in the old Mechanics Institute where the Police Headquarters are now, so that Jason, who lived on Bloor Street, had to walk past the library every day on his way to and from lectures.

And every morning Jason sauntered past the library whistling, and in very cheerful spirits, until one day in February he noticed something. The Spring Thaws had arrived, and the Artsmen from UC, Vic and St. Mikes were tramping through the front campus mud on their way to Convocation Hall lectures. Now Jason, being an observant engineer, noticed that fewer students were emerging from that sea of slime than were entering. Looking closer, he saw that students would just sink out of sight in deep mud; girls were losing their shoes, and the suction of the mud was so great that some girls lost their nylons. Jason even saw the odd pair of bloomers floating on the front campus.

Now as everyone knows, Greeks are great people for feeling sorry for people, and Jason Speropopulous was no exception. He felt very sorry for those poor Arts types, and after several mornings of spectating thousands of students risking life, limb, and cleaning budgets, Jason's engineering brain forced him to do something.

Immediately the solution came to his mind. He would build a temporary wooden sidewalk! It could be made cheaply; the boards could be spaced to save lumber, and the whole thing would be light and easily set up or removed. So Jason, being a civil engineer, built it, and he was cheered by thousands of Artsmen.

His name was a byword, and he was never short free beer bought by thankful Artsmen. Unfortunately, the nearest pub to the Mechanic's Institute was located where the Hydro building now is. And there was no direct walk from the engineers' classrooms to McKerry's Oasis. The Engineers, brilliant souls, immediately got a bright idea. They removed the walk from the front campus and put it down as a high-speed highway to McKerry's Oasis.

When Jason found out, he was dumbfounded! His fellow-engineers were thieves! He had been betrayed! So he got to brooding, and one morning he sat down on the very spot where he stands now and began to figure out the engineers. He is still sitting there, (slightly the worse for wear) still trying to figure out the engineers!

on the sideline

By DOREEN DUFF

This fall the University, under the direction of Miss Winnifred Baxter, presented an Aquacade entitled "Dawn to Darkness." Complete with theme, music, costumes and lighting this show was one of the first of what we predict will soon be the rage in Canada. In fact right now there is a Water Ballet School in Toronto which, in view of one day forming a company, is using Volkoff Instruction to develop new techniques in swimming production.

All this is a result of a new thing called "Synchronized Swimming", and its origin?—well listen. It all began back in 1947 when our own Intercollegiate League conceived the idea of two girls swimming together to music accompaniment. This was quickly taken up by the States who developed it into an interpretation of the music. Canada proved herself equal to this advance however when her duet champions June and Gail Taylor of Western University competed last summer to win the U.S. title.

Inspiration for Synchronized Swimming has come from ice-skating, and it was inevitable that it should carry over into solo work. You will remember that in competitions Barbara Ann Scott had to perform certain compulsory tricks for 60% of the points and, for the remaining 40%, a routine to music judged on execution, composition.

Last year this procedure was legalized for all Canadian Championships and the Gale Trophy competition now requires five compulsory figures and a routine. Our inter-faculty and collegiate meets this year used the same plan.

In view of competition of this kind one day becoming International, Canada has adopted the American name of "Synchronized Swimming" for all types of Ornamental work. The future looks bright for this new water baby and we predict that Canadians will continue to be leaders in the fast-expanding fields of demonstration and competition. Just wait and see!

Varsity Teams Tackle Buffalo Indoor Sports

A tri-sport delegation from the University of Toronto will leave at noon tomorrow for Buffalo to compete with the University of Buffalo counterparts in the swimming, wrestling and fencing fields.

Fencers from Varsity will have to compete in all three weapons as only four members will make the trip. These are Mark Kellow, Ken Soga, Lucien Goldenberg and Jack Roberts.

The intermediate fencers will go to Hamilton to defend the intercollegiate title they won last year. Also in the competition will be Western, and OAC. Jim McCougan, Jack Teft, Albert Slama and Julius Alpar, the old master pointer will make the trip.

The wrestlers will perform in the Buffalo ring in all the classes from the 125 to the 190 and heavyweight Paul Lobraico will go in place of Peter Samuels who has contracted mumps.

S. Wigle and J. Crang who are members of last year's championship medley relay team head the aquatic contingent. Coach Warren Clayson will bring fourteen swim surprises in his bundle to oppose the strong Bison squad. Ken Tulley twice holder of the intercollegiate diving laurels will be on hand to augment the Varsity point total.

Interfaculty Sports

Junior Vic won their ice battle with the Trinity A's yesterday but lost the toss which would have given them a bye into the second round of the playoffs which start next Monday.

Trinity started the scoring race as Lawson tallied from Leishman but the Victers in the persons of Sheridan and Andrew wrapped up the totals in the first half to make the final score 2-1.

St. Mike's Bees trampled Architecture A's 40-16 yesterday as Murphy sparked the winners with twelve points. In the other major fixture Law A's topped Knox A's by a 29-11 led by Bernstein who collected twelve counters.

Hockey

Shuffling of lines and Inica Janecek, goalie, were not quite enough to enable UC II to overcome Physio's one point lead in the deciding game for league leadership. The final score read 2-1 for Physio.

Mary O'Rielly, Physio, made the first tally early in the first period. In the second stanza Lil Betanoff racked up a second point for the winners.

UC finally capitalized in the last canto when Jean McPhail sank the last goal of the game. Physio now have the league leadership bagged and will proceed to the finals.

Volleyball

PHE I trounced Vic I in the first game of the semi-finals last night, scoring 73 points to Vic's 17.

Metras' Cagers To Headline A-Night In League Meeting

Johnny Metras and his Western Mustang cage quintet, who have won the intercollegiate crown for three seasons running, will be in town tomorrow night to headline the Athletic Nite sports festivities. The Mustangs boast a squad almost as powerful as last year's championship array and will provide the stiffest league test the Blues have yet to face.

Three Hoop Games

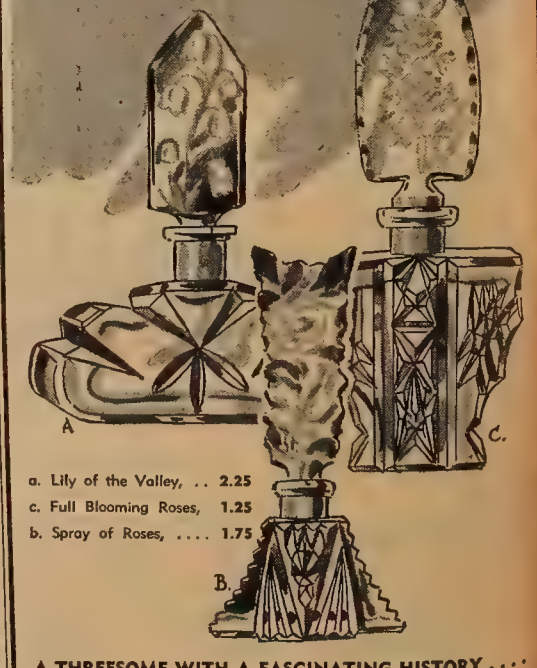
Tomorrow's A-Nite will be authored by SPS and Architecture who are famous for their entertaining talents. Besides the blue basketball game there will be two other hoop encounters. The Western Colts will face the Intermediates in the sandwich encounter while two collegiate teams will hold the opening spotight as Humberside faces Bloor Collegiate.

There will be water polo and Intramural gymnastics on the bill with Trinity College School coming up from Port Hope to compete on an exhibition basis.

A special hush-hush feature is planned by the hosts which will be staged as the interfaculty open boxing tournament. That is all we can find out from their agents but the architects have announced that they will display some products of their art in the lower gallery.

Movies and dancing will round out the program which goes on the block for a mere fifty centavos. The usual tickets will be on sale at the door.

McGill At Varsity Carabins Idle



The MecGill Redmen are in town today to meet the Blues at Varsity Arena. Though McGill are eight points behind the Blues, they have improved vastly in the last few games. They got off to a bad start due to lack of pre-season practices because of the scarcity of ice in Montreal (You think the THL has troubles!) but were beaten by the Carabins last week only 3-1. Three points is the least the Montrealers have been held to this season.

The Blues have played McGill twice this season, both times in Montreal, and have beaten them by four points both times.

The Blues scrimmaged lightly yesterday and held a short shooting practice, with Doug Orr the victim, as usual.

Since the Carabins are idle this week-end, a win for Varsity will give them a tie for first place.

"Cowshed" Demolished

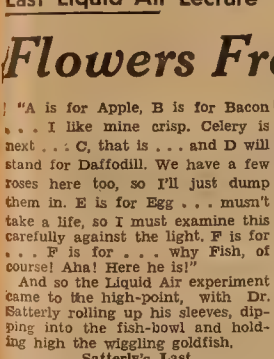
The city has given the university permission to close Devonshire Place, and the construction of the new addition to Varsity Stadium has begun. The old covered stands, the first part of the original stadium, are now being demolished. They will soon be replaced by larger and safer concrete stands with a greatly enlarged seating capacity. The trees on Devonshire Place have been cut down, as part of the new stand will overhand the sidewalk. The cost will be about $600,000 and will add 10,000 seats to the stadium capacity to bring it up to nearly thirty thousand. The contractor has promised that the new stadium will be finished and available in time for the first rugby game of the next season.

Last Liquid Air Lecture

Flowers Frozen, O-Bomb Blasted



By JIM SIMPSON

"A is for Apple, B is for Bacon . . . I like mine crisp. Celery is next . . . C, that is . . . and D will stand for Daffodill. We have a few roses here too, so I'll just dump them in. E is for Egg . . . musn't take a life, so I must examine this carefully against the light. F is for . . . F is for . . . why Fish, of course! Aha! Here he is!"

And so the Liquid Air experiment came to the high-point, with Dr. Satterly rolling up his sleeves, dipping into the fish-bowl and holding high the wiggling goldfish.

Satterly's Last

There was one sour note during the performance. In spite of the exuberance of the Master of Ceremonies, Dr. Satterly, everyone knew that it was to be his last of a long series of these Liquid Air experiments. This is to be the last year that the Professor of Physics will be here to conduct the experiments. In the spring he will hang up his slide-rule and gown to retire to a life of relaxation.

But it was far from his mind as he dashed about the long low table in the lecture theatre. With measured abandon he threw switches that made neon signs glow and huge magnets pick up pliers and screw drivers. Helmet on head, extinguisher in hand, he stood back with a taper ready to set off his own invention, the Oxygen Bomb.

Frozen Flowers

From the balconies the people were leaning forward to get a better look at the show, while down in the front the audience was ducking behind the row ahead, trying to escape the show of super-cooled air, the burning embers of blasting bombs, the fragments of frozen flowers and fish.

It took only an hour and a quarter for the whole experiment, but it seemed that it lasted a half century. Not because it was boring, but because of the mad crush of people who still tried to get in, even up to the last minute. As the time progressed, the air became smoky with the fumes of burning crackers and cotton waste, and hotter by the minute with the press of human bodies in the closed room.

Breathing Air Scarce

At one point all the lights were out, the windows were closed, and the doors were jammed with spectators. Although this lasted for no more than two or three minutes, people were reeling from lack of air.

At last one o'clock rolled around, and doffing his army helmet Dr. Satterly called out that the class was over. Another scramble, this time for the door, resulted as the throng rushed out on their way for Hart House and Whitney.

The army helmet was left in the room, for at eight o'clock Friday evening Dr. Satterly was to go through the whole routine again. This was for the benefit of the staff who wished to see the show, for in the rush of students there was no room for any others.

So the one in the morning was supposed to be the last one? Well, that's the way it goes. For those who have never seen one, take heart, for the last Liquid Air Experiment has been held every year since its start.

Victoria, St. Mike's Split As Colleges On 'National Unity'

Students at last night's Victoria College Debating Parliament voted down 22 to 10 a motion that "present trends in Canada give no hope of true Canadian national unity."

Opposition Wins

Visiting debaters from St. Michael's College successfully opposed the resolution, which was supported by Vic speakers.

The representatives of St. Mike's voted to a man against the resolution while Vic supported it unanimously.

Three Racial Groups

Speaking for the motion were Jim Service, IV Vic, and Harry Green, IV Vic, while Wally Emon, IV St. Mike's, and Peter Mosteller, III St. Mike's, opposed the motion.

Service said true national unity is something which transcends the barriers of race, language and religion. It means an understanding for one another. This cannot be, he contended, when there are ten different school curricula, one for each province, and in Quebec more as there are both secular and religious schools. Service claimed that Canada is made up of three racial groups in equal proportion, French, English and European. Only this last group look to Canada as their homeland, and until all groups do the same there is no hope of true Canadian National Unity.

Home Sweet Home

Emon, first speaker for the negative, said the feeling of national unity was an emotion, the feeling that we are Canadians and this is our country. Unity grows out of this feeling, he said. The cultural aspects of Canadian life demonstrate that there is national unity, Emon asserted. The Group of Seven have established a Canadian style in painting, Roy and MacLennan in literature and the CBC in broadcasting.

Ontario Gains

Green, speaking for Vic, asserted that there are certain geographical and natural features of Canada that are not conducive to national unity. He pointed out that 60 per cent of the population lived between the St. Lawrence River and the Pre-Cambrian Shield. In almost every case, he said, economic policies of the Dominion benefit industrial Ontario and Quebec to the detriment of the Maritimes and the West.

The provinces will be forced to work closer together, Mosteller said, because of the dollar shortage and the sterling block which will result in greater Dominion cohesion.

McGill Executive Rejects Affiliation Of NFCUS-IUS

Montreal, Feb. 13 — (CUP) — NFCUS-IUS affiliation was "vehemently" opposed by the Student Council of McGill University yesterday. An 11-0 vote against the proposed union followed a hot two-hour discussion.

While turning down the resolution, the Council added . . . "keep as close a contact with IUS as possible in order to provide material for study of IUS programme and its aims and successes. . . ."

There was no attempt to take a student vote on the McGill campus on the IUS affiliation question. The McGill Student Executive Council voted unanimously against affiliation in a regular Council meeting.

Last Wednesday the SAC of the University of Toronto voted in favour of affiliation with the IUS. The Council members had previously gone back to their faculties to obtain the majority opinion in the individual faculties and colleges.

S A C Meeting

A special meeting of the Students' Administrative Council is to be held on Friday at 5 p.m. at the request of SAC President Bob Hetherington. Topic to be discussed is the motion passed concerning The Varsity ad policy at the last SAC meeting.

WEATHER OR NOT

Montreal, Feb. 13—(CUP)—McGill is going to have winter, weather or not. Plans for the McGill Winter Carnival Ski Jumping Competition, slated for Feb. 18, have included provisions for artificial ice on the ski jump, in case.

Mayor Houde has also offered to give McGill any available snow lying around—if the students will supply the elbow grease to move it.

The SAC Story

The Council's Chronic Headache

By JOAN EDDIS

(This is the sixth in a series of articles on the Students' Administrative Council and its many activities.)

With its expanding services, the SAC has been sorely pinched by the shrinking value of the dollar. In fact, the Council's in the straits familiar to all of us—almost flat broke.

The SAC fee, which is paid along with University fees, has remained $3.00 since before the war. Nearly half of this fee goes to the Council publications — The Varsity, Torontonensis and the Student's Handbook which are under the jurisdiction of the Publications Committee. Chairman of this committee is soft-spoken Mary Agnes Wilkinson, SAC rep. for St. Joseph's and Loretto.

Mary Agnes Wilkinson

Doesn't Dictate Policy

The Varsity, which has been publishing since 1880, came under the Council's wing in 1912. Although it covers the expense of publishing The Varsity and hires (and sometimes fires) the editors, the SAC does not interfere with the freedom of the press by dictating editorial policy. From time to time the editor, who is a non-voting member of the SAC, is censured for his policy or receives suggestions from the students' representatives, but it is turn and turn about.

If you turn to page two and look at the masthead you will see that "Opinions expressed in these columns are not necessarily the opinion of the Students' Administrative Council." Thus the editorial staff are free to point out any neglects, faults, or shortsightedness they may see in SAC policy.

$300 An Issue

When printing, masthead and distribution costs are totalled up, it comes to about $300 per issue to publish The Varsity. Advertising brings in about $160 an issue, but that still leaves approximately $14,000 a year to be made up by the SAC. In the thirties the subsidy ran as low as $6,000.

The Torontonensis deficit has been skyrocketing too. The largest edition of this publication in the history of the university, which was printed last year, was subsidized by the SAC to the tune of $13,000—nearly $8,000 more than the 1939 subsidy.

Even the handbook has been munching into the SAC's shrinking pocketbook. Despite the charge of 25c charged for the "bible" last session, slightly more than $700 had to be made up from general revenue to cover the cost of printing.

Turn Down Requests

The publication expenses combined with increasing budgets for most of the committees, including the Radio, Music, and Debates committees, add up to a big headache for the Finance Committee. The

Earl Orser

The publication expenses combined with increasing budgets for most of the committees, including the Radio, Music and Debates committees, add up to a big headache for the Finance Committee. The Council maintains two $600 scholarships and contributes $600 towards the expenses of one DP student brought to Canada but is forced to turn down many requests by charitable organizations and recognized societies because there are no scrapings left at the bottom of the financial barrel.

This fall, for example, the SAC refused to contribute to the fund for pipe band uniforms, even though most Council members agreed that the band was an asset on the campus. The subsidization of the Carabin week-end was also cut down to fit the tight budget.

It's easy to see why Finance Commissioner Earl Orser of UC is one of the most vociferous members of the council. If anything pops up in which money is mentioned, up pops Earl—and almost every item up for discussion has money in it somewhere.

The Finance Committee is holding special meetings to see if it can cure this chronic headache. After studying SAC budgets and expenditures for at least the last ten years, the financiers have come to the conclusion that the $3.00 SAC fee is inadequate.

They are drawing up a brief to present to the Board of Governors outlining the financial status of the Council and asking that the fee be raised.

There may be one catch to their proposal. The Governors already have a brief, submitted by last year's Finance Committee, asking them to investigate the high cost of a university education.

The Common Enemy

The purpose of last Monday's special issue of The Varsity was to focus student thought on the implications of the H-bomb. From the various reactions since, it seems that the special issue was a success in its intention.

Some of the reactions have been constructive. An example is the approach taken in the Graduate discussion group on bomb control. Some of the reactions have been destructive. The extreme in this is the accusation that The Varsity is merely helping along a "Communist-inspired" H-bomb scare. We wish that was all that is scary about the H-bomb.

A more common attitude is the question:

"All right, so it's a problem. But what's the answer? You haven't given one."

The reason why we have not given an "answer" is that we don't know it ourselves. All we have tried to do is to point to the desperate need for such an answer.

The editorial in the H-bomb Issue suggested an approach. That is, we must try to change our attitudes. We must go beyond the everyday routine of our lives and make personal efforts to understand why we have gotten ourselves into this jam. And from this, we must try to find how we can get ourselves out of the jam.

The basic point about the H-bomb is that it is the common enemy of humanity. The danger of the H-bomb is threatening the Russians and us alike. And also the rest of the peoples of the world, sandwiched in the duel between the East and the West. The H-bomb threat is one thing we all have in common.

There is another thing the Russian people and we of the west have in common. We are all concerned with making the happiest and most satisfactory life out of what we have. Because we pursue this goal by rules of different ideologies the Russians and we are in stubborn deadlock.

Professor Einstein warns us that the H-bomb can mean annihilation of the earth. Not just big hunks of the world like the super-Atom bomb threatened. The whole works. This is not easy to imagine. But try imagining it. We will not be able to run away from the H-bomb.

The immediate reaction to the horror of the H-bomb is the loud suggestion that the Bomb should be banned. This is the most-publicized reaction on this campus.

The supporters of Banning the Bomb include both sincere idealists and well-known campus Communists. In the case of the Communists here, their cries of: "We do not want to kill! We do not want to die! BAN THE BOMB!" only cloud the issue by the usual emotional smog.

The idea about Banning the Bomb is fine in moral principle. But it is putting the cart before the horse. In emphasizing the banning aspect, the key to the problem is being side-tracked.

This key is the question:

"How can we alter conditions in the world today so that controlling (a much better word than "banning") of the Bomb will be feasible?"

We do not know how world conditions and world attitudes can be altered. We only know that they must be. There is no other choice.

Some among us fling themselves aside from the "scare." We, they say, have enough to worry about without troubling ourselves about a Bomb and a Situation that defies comprehension.

This is an understandable attitude. It is not a forgivable one. Today it is an impossible one.

No one will be able to run away from the H-bomb.

Place Of Engineers

Editor, The Varsity:

It's high time the Engineers and the scientists began taking a proper place in society. These men go about their business of creating weapons of destruction without a thought of the ultimate moral good of their creations. Most of them take the attitude that they are mere research workers who are concerned primarily with discovering the mysteries of nature. They are wrong.

True, they are scientists—collectors of facts—but they are also men; they are also citizens of the community. For them to adopt a negative attitude towards the moral implications of their work is nothing more than a shirking of their duty to their fellow man.

To this indictment the scientist has two stock replies. First, that if the findings of science are bent to such nefarious ends, the responsibility rests not upon the scientist, but upon the practical men of affairs—the statesmen, the politicians, the captains of industry and finance. But this is only to plead guilty to the charge so often levelled: "The education of the scientist and technician leaves them indifferent to the social consequences of their own activities." Indeed, of late scientists have come to regard themselves as the members of a privileged guild, entitled to go their way without reference to the fate of society. Rare indeed is the social conscience of such men as Alfred Nobel.

The second stock reply of the scientist to the charge that science has been unconcerned with higher human values is that science, as such, is normally neutral. It has no concern with value; it is interested in quantities, not qualities; it studies only what is, not what ought to be; it can tell only what is true, not what is right or good or wise or beautiful or holy. For knowledge of these we should turn, not to the scientist, but to the philosopher.

If we accept this defense of the scientists, then we must also assume that science is the servant of philosophy—that science merely provides the means whereby philosophy can validify and clarify human values. But rarely is the scientist so modest. Usually he is quite convinced that scientific knowledge alone is entitled to respect, and emerging from his laboratory, he thrusts aside the work of the philosophers as worthless. He immediately proceeds to formulate a view of human life and destiny in harmony with his own professional bias.

But the scientist is wrong. Working in his laboratory with the basic conceptions of matter, mechanism

Hospital Vets To See, Hear Campus Revue

The entire All Varsity Revue cast is going out to Sunnybrook Hospital tonight to entertain the vets there. The hospital theatre only seats 1,000 but microphones will carry the show throughout the hospital.

The All-Varsity Revue orchestra under Bob Cringan has been granted permission by the union, the Toronto Musical Protective Association, to play for this performance without being paid.

About half of the original sets will supplement the show at Sunnybrook, All-Variety Revue chairman Nipper Benson said last night. Most of these were on their way yesterday.

Show Goes to Carnival

About 25 members of the All-Varsity cast are leaving this Friday for Montreal to participate in the McGill Carnival. These students will represent Toronto in the Saturday theatre night to be composed of selected skits from the campus shows of several universities. The trip is being subsidized by the SAC and by the McGill Council.

The All-Varsity Revue, which ran throughout last week at Hart House, was a complete sellout. The SAC office in Hart House was besieged Friday and Saturday by requests for tickets. During the matinee, several people sat in the aisles to see the show.

A financial statement has not yet been released by Revue officials but Miss Benson stated that the show did not lose money.

Hart House Art Committee

Not Experts But Interested

By DOUG BROOKS

The Art Committee of Hart House may not be quite as well known as some of the other committees, because the nature of the work they do is such that it does not create a great deal of publicity. The art gallery is always open and we know that there will always be an exhibition of paintings there, without benefit of advertising.

All Canadian Work

Hundreds of people each week visit these Hart House Exhibitions, which are made up entirely of the work of Canadian artists. An attempt has been made in recent years to procure collections from across Canada, each group being representative of the art produced by that particular part of the country from which it was gathered. Every two weeks a new lot of paintings arrives, and this is hung for the following two week period.

Another activity of the Art Committee is the conducting of an art class which anyone with a desire to sketch or paint may attend. The instructors are well known artists, and the results are best judged by the excellence of the pictures which appear in the exhibition of undergraduates' work which is held annually.

Among Finest Collections

Hart House boasts one of the finest collections of Canadian paintings in the country. This is the permanent collection of Hart House, and it is the job of the committee to purchase new paintings to add to it, and to care for and maintain it. Some of the pictures from this collection are on loan to other exhibitions.

Few of the undergraduate members of the Art Committee are experts, but most have become members because they have an interest in art, and by becoming more intimately associated with it, they hope to add to their present knowledge.

Honest Living Made By Robbers

Boulder, Col. Feb. 13—(UPRESS) — Burglars entered 25 fraternity rooms last night and made off with currency, checks and contraband to the value of over $1,000. Watch dogs, watchmen and watchers offered no alarm.

But it was all part of a stunt dreamed up by the editors of the "Silver and Gold", U. of Colorado newspaper, to show students how easy it is for a thief to make an honest living on the campus.

The editors, with a policeman as added security entered the rooms, which were in most cases unlocked, and removed the loot. They then repaired to the local police station, photographed the assorted wealth, and returned it to the original owners. Once again, watch dogs, watchmen and watchers offered no alarm.

One House, One Chairman Brings Hillel Drama Debut

With the acquisition of one house and one drama chairman, the Hillel Dramatic group has decided to exhibit its dramatic talent. This Wednesday three one-act plays will be presented at the Holy Blossom Temple for their theatre-lovers.

The three plays, Soroyan's "Hello Out There," Susan Glaspell's "Suppressed Desires," and the Canadian playwright, Robertson Davies' "Eros at Breakfast," have been in rehearsal since the beginning of the second term. Students who have acted and directed in the Women's Union Theatre and Hart House, now turn their talents to a new stage.

Little items like no sets, lecture interference and missing scripts have failed to upset the venture. The prospect of stringing black tape from ceiling to floor to represent, abstractedly, the bars of a cell, seemed a brilliant idea to those concerned. Only one difficulty presented itself—how could one get to the ceiling? Using several tables, one on top of the other, a three-foot ladder and a six-foot man, the tape was attached to the ceiling only after one incident of a broken arm. One sadist sitting by and watching the operation, remarked, sotto voice, that there was a large ladder backstage.

The plays on the bill have been presented at one time or another by the other theatre groups in the University. The evening is designed to provide one "last fling" for those actively involved and for the audience.

OUR READERS WRITE

The H-Bomb and the NFCUS-IUS Problems

MISTAKES MADE IN UN POLITICS

Editor, The Varsity:

Albert Einstein has recently warned us that the results of a war with the H-bomb would so poison the earth's atmosphere with radioactive materials that human life would be impossible. . . . The hydrogen bomb bears the same relationship to the plutonium bomb as does the plutonium bomb to R.D.X. or T.N.T. Both atomic weapons involve such tremendous increases in destructive energy that they compel a complete re-evaluation of international relations. . . .

Every university student owes it to himself to read the proceedings of the U.N. Atomic Energy Commission. I venture to predict that he will receive quite a different impression concerning the nature of the impasse than that which has been so widely reported. He will see that the case is not so one-sided as is generally supposed.

First of all he will notice that the Baruch Plan was presented with a peculiar diplomatic ineptness for the psychological point of view of the Russians. This plan had attached to it the name of one of America's greatest financiers and bankers. . . . The Soviet leaders, trapped by their own propaganda, would have found it most embarrassing to explain to loyal Communist party members that they had accepted a plan from the representative of their most hated class. . . . The State Department might just as well have sent a Venderbilt or a Rockefeller to the conferences as far as the Russians were concerned.

Also the reader of the reports will observe that the American negotiators of the Baruch Plan violated a most fundamental rule of diplomatic bargaining procedure in presenting their minimum demands first and thus forcing themselves into the absurd position of not being able to grant a single concession to the Soviets. . . . The Russians, who in particular, are brought up in the Oriental tradition of bargaining, would have found it humanly difficult to accept any American plan holus bolus, even if it were a far more generous proposal. National prestige demands a compromise on both sides.

If one is aghast at the obstructionism of the Russian delegates one also wonders at the sincerity of the American negotiators. The U.S. News-World Report comments that the U.S. negotiators were privately relieved when the Russians did not accept the Baruch Plan. After this the American negotiators even requested the abandonment of all further negotiations on atomic weapons with the Russians. The Atomic Energy Commission only continued to meet after the strongest urgings of the General Assembly. One wonders if the leaders of both the U.S.A. and the U.S.S.R. were only putting on a puppet show to deceive their peoples.

I believe that at least the initial bargaining on so vital and delicate a matter as international control of atomic weapons should be done in secret to prevent the negotiators from publicly committing themselves to positions which in private they would find more amenable to change. . . .

These points of criticism may seem to be quite trivial to some. But let us not escape into that treacherous generality that the disagreement over atomic energy control is far more fundamental than diplomatic ineptitude — really a matter of conflicting ideologies. I disagree with this counsel of despair. Co-operation was possible between Communist Russia during the war and the neo-capitalistic West Under the threat of a common danger each group proved an amazing ability to rationalize the other's position. We can do it again under the super threat of the H-bomb

Today the U.S. and the U.S.S.R are exhibiting the symptoms of mass paranoia — a situation of mutually regenerative suspicions which force both sides to commit hostile acts which only serve to confirm their mutual suspicions. Where are the men of good will in this university who are willing to assume the role of psychoanalysts to help these two impatient patients get rid of their disease.

THE KISS OF DEATH

Editor, The Varsity:

Congratulations on your H-bomb issue — all serious students welcome your bold editorial innovation.

We wondered why you didn't get a Communist to present the Communist ideal; for example, Stanley Ryerson, the National Organizer of the LPP, a distinguished graduate of the U of T and a good representative of the Communist ideal in theory and practice.

For our part we wish we had improved our own contribution.

(I) We did "hell" up a little brown.

(II) We failed to show that the historic possibility of preventing war rests on the overwhelming desire of all people for peace.

We must mobilize this desire of all people for peace around concrete programs of action such as the campaign to

ANONYMOUS LETTER

A letter dated Feb. 10, and titled "Philosophy of Doom" has been received by The Varsity. This letter contains some questions on the H-Bomb problem and merits publication.

The reason why this letter cannot be printed is that The Varsity does not know who the writer is. The name given is not in the university directory. The writer is asked to contact The Varsity in the interests of good faith.

READS ARTICLE; DEEPLY SHOCKED

Editor, The Varsity:

The announcement that the support of the University of Toronto would be given to the affiliation of the NFCUS with the IUS coincides very neatly with the appearance of an article in this week's Saturday Evening Post. The article is by a graduate of Montana University who attended the "World Youth and Student Festival" last summer at Budapest, Hungary. This "festival" was jointly sponsored by the World Federation of Democratic Youth and the International Union of Students.

According to the article the festival was little more than a monster Communist rally, using propaganda of the most flagrant type in a manner redolent of the best Goebbels' Propaganda.

To anyone believing in democratic principles, the description of what went on makes disgusting reading and I am deeply shocked to think that the U. of T., or any other Canadian university for that matter, would even consider having anything at all to do with such an organization.

G. W. Mills,
IV UC.

Ed. Note: Reader Mills should have read carefully to the end of the Saturday Evening Post article. It reads:

"To me the fact that he (a German Communist) is still looking for the truth, that he is willing to hear 'all sides' of the ideological controvery being fought between East and West, is extremely encouraging. But we ought not underestimate the effect on the young people of the world of such carefully slanted affairs as this World Youth Festival. The Communists are paying a great deal of attention to the younger generation. If that younger generation doesn't get to hear or see the other side of the picture about the United States, and soon, it will be next to impossible to change their minds about us."

EDITOR, THE VARSITY:

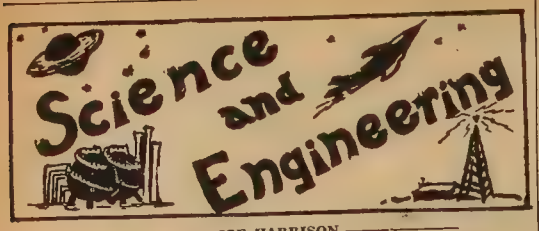
FINDS AFFILIATION ARBITRARY, UNFAIR



Editor, The Varsity:

I do not think that I have ever before seen any action so irresponsible, unfair, arbitrary, discrediting as that taken by the SAC in approving affiliation of NFCUS with IUS. I am sure that the majority of students are opposed to it. The only fair way to decide the question is to ballot the entire student body.

IUS is quite openly a Communist-operated group. If you honestly think that Canadian membership will in any appreciable way affect the actions of this group, I can only conclude that you are a fool. This alliance will only serve to connect Canadian university students with the party line. It is only apparent that the general public already has an exaggerated idea of the prevalence of Communism among students. It is most unfair that a few ideological, but irresponsible hotheads should discredit us further.

I believe that the fresh and vigorous thought of intelligent young people can add a great deal to the well-being of our country. This is obviously impossible if we are considered as naive and impractical children, neurotic intellectual misfits, and enemies of our

The spectacular portents embodied in the conception of atomic energy have pushed into the background some of the recent and not nearly so colorful innovations in engineering. Although the emphasis generally has been on the destructive powers of the atomic bomb it has been widely assumed that it was only a short step until this immense source of energy could be utilized for domestic purposes. This is wishful thinking at its best, for there are a number of considerations which tend to belie this optimistic assumption.

At the moment at least, atomic energy is a jealously guarded political and military weapon, and its development along those lines is not hampered by considerations of cost or profit. Unfortunately before it can be utilized for domestic use both the cost and the profit motive will have to be satisfied; a tall order at its present stage of development.

Unsuited for Propulsion

Much of the loose talk regarding the possibilities of atomic energy centres around its use as a means of propulsion. Unfortunately at its present stage it is particularly unsuited for use in this field. In order to maintain the slow-chain type of reaction carried out in even the smaller atomic piles at least 50 tons of shielding material are necessary, and although this may enable a pile to power some of the larger ocean going vessels its use on aircraft, cars, or trains seems out of the question in the very near future.

Therefore I think we must turn our eyes to some of these new developments that have been overshadowed by the glamour of atomic energy for a more immediate picture of the innovations to come.

Next to atomic energy perhaps the most important of the new tools of man is jet propulsion. Like all of man's "new" tools it is new in application rather than principle, for historians describe a form of jet engine in Heron's Aelopile dating back to the first or second century B. C.

Jets For Locomotives

The application of jet propulsion to aircraft is a familiar phenomenon but an interesting development of this principle appeared tucked away in the corner of a newspaper a few weeks ago. Railway officials in Britain announced the acquisition of a jet locomotive built in Switzerland with a top speed of more than one hundred miles per hour.

In order to anticipate any mental pictures of a locomotive hurtling across the countryside belching forth sheets of flame and hot gas, a little elaboration may be in order.

Jet propulsion in the form which it is applied to aircraft has its limitations for land and sea traffic. There is another way however in which the principles involved can be applied. Many locomotives used in America are driven by steam turbines in which a jet of steam at high pressure impinges against a paddle shaped wheel and the circular motion of the turbine wheel is then transferred to the driving wheels.

Complicated Engineering

However instead of allowing steam to impinge on the turbine blades we can utilize the compressed gases of jet propulsion to drive the turbine. Although the principle is simple, its application involves engineering of a high order. The gas turbine engine consists of four main parts, the compressor, the combustion chamber, the turbine and the heat exchanger. The engine works by sucking in air from an inlet, compressing it in the compressor and allowing it to escape into the burner where the fuel mixture is ignited by an electric candle and the combustion chamber is filled with hot compressed gases.

It is these gases which impinge on the turbine and drive a big electric dynamo which provides the driving force for the wheels. In addition to driving the turbine the hot gases are used by means of the dynamo to drive the compressor and it is here that technical knowledge had to be utilized to a high degree.

Compressor Needs Power

In the efficiency of the compressor rests the ultimate efficiency of the jet turbine. The Swiss locomotive has to develop 8,000 h.p. in its turbine to get a useful output of 2,000 h.p. from its dynamos, the

Looking Backwards

Mid-Century Highlights

I MARRIED A HOTTENTOT, OR WILL YOU LOVE ME IN CASABLANCA AS THEY DO ON STROMBOLI?

The Varsity, in keeping with its educational policy has always devoted space and effort to the achievements of faculty members. One particularly interesting feature was based on the adventures of Prof. Archy O'Logy in darkest Africa. This account appeared serially in 1908 issues of The Varsity.

The expedition was jointly financed by the Sherman Fur Company and Rose Shnark Bandeaux. The Sherman people were interested in determining the commercial possibilities of the double barreled, egg-laying, three legged newt. They had hopes of marketing a garment that would alleviate the demand for the then popular mutated prairie dog. On the other hand, the Shnark firm wished the good prof. to tap the uninhibited African market.

Takes Tonsil Tonic

With the aid of a Sars Roebuck catalogue, Professor O'Logy outfitted the expedition with sufficient supplies. A glance at his requisition form reveals that the professor saw fit to include such items as one electric razor, one portable delco plant to run electric razor, three gallons of Dr. Seagram's Snake Bite Remedy, one whisk broom for tse-tse flies, two gallons of Dr. Schenely's Tonsil Tonic, one gallon of grey paint to touch up the professor's pink elephants, two gallons of Dr. Corby's Revolution Intizer, one gross Toni Kits with plastic curlers, and four gallons of Lord Calvert's Panther Sweat. Unfortunately the Professor drank the best part of his supplies during the ocean trip. Things had gone from gooderham to worts. The professor finally landed on the African coast and assembled a band of native bearers. In his log it is recorded that his native boys remarked as follows regarding his paraphernalia: "Oubi ghaz ocks persnity." (Translation: "The white man cometh without a pot.")

Has Visitors

On entering the hinterland Professor O'Logy, started living like a native, eating like a native, thinking like a native and smelling like a brewery. The rains came and with them, Somerset Maugham and Sadie Thompson. The weeks melted into months and still no sign of the elusive newt. Then, one morning, Professor O'Logy, sick at heart, weary of limb, and kind of pooped, stumbled into a clearing. There on a throne of green vitrolite, sat the beautiful white goddess surrounded by faithful maidens chanting, "Hoi boli boli alei." (Translation: "Give us firewater and we'll make it hot for you.") Professor O'Logy overcome with amazement and exhaustion, fell into a stupor.

On awakening several seasons later he found no trace of the white goddess or his boys and supplies. Ah Africa, land of illusions!

Settles Down

The inevitable happened; nature wrought its mean way with the professor. He went native. Joining a tribe of nomadic Hottentots, he adopted their ways, even to taking unto himself a native wife. Oola may not have been a paragon of beauty but she did skin a mean snake. Professor O'Logy loved her dearly and under her guidance rose from low man on the totem pole to medicine man thus making Oola queen of the moola.

The following spring a crisis arose in the marital relations of the professor. Oola was in the bathroom rinsing out a few things while Archy awaited impatiently for her to finish. Under this pressure the professor has a rude awakening. What was he doing among these natives? Who was the woman with whom he shared his washroom? And what of the newt? He newt no more about it now than when he arrived. Uganda spent your life ir. this fashion or Kenya?

Mongoose Helps

There and then the professor packed his other loin-cloth and, taking along with him two guards of betel-nut juice, made his way to Port Nairobi riding side-saddle on a convenient mongoose. A tramp brought him home and so ended the African adventure.

I visited Professor O'Logy last Tuesday evening and found him seated on his bamboo bush beating his tom-tom. Some trick of his imagination (or maybe it was fever) made me appear to him as Oola. He grasped me around the waist, sang two verses of Simileu and shouted, "Oola, listen, they are playing our song!"

Hart House Concert - Glen Gould

One can only shout superlatives after hearing pianist Glenn Gould in Hart House last Sunday. His mastery comes from a mature and positive interpretation coupled with proficient technique; both factors augguring well for the future of anyone 17 years old. Difficult as it was, his program did not display glittering fingerwork and an empty head. Neither the ascetic figurations of Bach, the brutality of Beethoven, nor the frugal harmonies of Hindemith permit this type of virtuoso playing.

Beethoven's seldom-heard Variations and Fugue on a theme from the 'Eroica' Symphony was played with an ease and confidence which almost disguised the immensity of the work, but could not disguise such things as perfect fingering, full intonation, and the restraint and control of the musician who regards each note differently, places it into the phrase, then the variation until it becomes part of the whole work and something very great. Great is the only word to describe composition and performance.

Absolute music, excepting a few moderns, ended with Bach's death and his Concerto in the Italian Style is an example of this abstract music. Glenn Gould played with dexterity and a rich sonority, especially in the Andante movement.

The Piano Sonata No. 3 by Paul Hindemith is a leisured piece which also seems to fall into the abstract category. The opening Allegretto is marked by abrupt rhythmic change and fascinating contrapuntal effects. Again Gould was the master, and in the Fugue finale was very competent with the harmonics.

It is a disgrace to the University that only 150 odd people attended this recital, certainly one of the most exciting of the season.

VIENNA CHOIR BOYS

When a small group of boys of public-school age are slated to present an evening of good music and entertainment of professional rank, one's first impulse is to wonder just where the 'catch' comes in. But in Massey Hall Saturday night, only the minute's singing by the Vienna Choir Boys was all that was needed to convince the large audience that there was no 'catch', just one display after another of astounding genius.

Ably accompanied by their leader, Harald Hedding, an excellent conductor and accomplished pianist, the choir began with five religious numbers of distinct liturgical stamp. These were sung with such clarity, precision, and maintenance of pitch and tone as to almost cast a spell.

The second part of the program took the form of an operetta entitled Tales From Old Vienna, arranged for the Choir by Richard Rossmayr and based on motives and music by Johann Strauss. Although the operetta itself has a simple plot, the choreography and the pantomime could well be envied by any ballet or drama school. At times their ecstatic mood was so genuine that its contagion had a visible and audible effect.

The last part of the program comprised classical works: two Schubert lieder, God in Nature and Wandering; hymn to the Virgin by Joseph Bohm, Brahms' Der Bratigam (The Groom); and an adaptation of Strauss' Tales from the Vienna Woods. But none was so appealing other 6,000 h.p. being used to run the compressor. In addition to the problem presented by the compressor efficiency, a further problem was introduced by the conditions under which the turbine blades operate.

This called for the development of a heat resisting alloy capable of operating at extremely high temperatures (about 1100 deg. F.) for long periods of time, since the life of a locomotive must extend for at least fifteen years. Even with these heat resisting metals the exhaust gases have to be cooled before impinging on the turbine blades and in the process the cooling air is heating. This heated air is later passed through the heat exchanger and into the gas burner to increase the efficiency of the cycle.

Some figures issued in 1947 are given as to the locomotive's performance. The continuous output of the unit is given as 2200 h.p. The locomotive weighs 92 tons with full fuel tanks and the fuel consumption is about one pound per h.p. per hour or about 250 gallons per hour at rated output of the turbine.

Compared to the steam locomotive the jet engine has many advantages. The use of fuel oil helps to reduce the foulness of the atmosphere. By the use of purely rotating instead of reciprocating machinery the lubrication costs are considerably reduced. Lubrication in the steam locomotive accounts for nearly ten per cent of operating cost and this is reduced to one per cent in the turbine engine.

The weight of water carried in the orthodox engine runs as high as 100 tons, and the elimination of this item not only reduces the weight but also cuts down interruptions in service due to cleaning and repairing of boilers. The initial cost of the gas locomotive lies somewhere between the cost of a steam and a Diesel electric engine.

Many improvements and refinements on the existing models are contemplated and predictions are that with a further increase in the efficiency in the compressor, an efficiency of 90 per cent for the gas turbine is possible. This, coupled with some of the latest developments in metallurgical science, will make the jet locomotive the railroad engine of the future.

Outcry

"Tops 'Open City' and 'Paisan' "—Variety.

"Excellent!"—N.Y. Mirror.

"Emotional!"—New Yorker.

"Inspiring!"—N.Y. World-Teleg.

Following this impressive publicity campaign accompanied by a sexy still, an Italian film called "Outcry" began its Canadian premiere run at the Hollywood dual auditoriums yesterday. While I would go along with most of the above descriptions, I draw the line at Variety's.

'Outcry' is unusual in the variety and excellence of its characters and some of their rather unorthodox attitudes toward the war. Deserters of the Italian army are treated sympathetically and, in fact, include the hero and his brother. Their peasant father manages the estate of a foundry-owner whose decadent family sits around raising hot-house pineapples and playing Duke Ellington records and considers the war a pesky inconvenience. They are forced to deal with the hero's black-marketeering brother and to billet a Nazi officer in their house. This boy hates higher-ups' orders as they interfere with his pleasure, provided largely by one of the daughters of the house. The hero impresses a foundry foreman's daughter by joining a partisan group who finally start a war in the village and drive the Nazis out. Surprisingly enough, both hero and heroine live to the end of the picture, which notes that people have already forgotten the war.

The profusely captioned film is mainly notable, however, for its introduction of Lea Padovani, (seen here last week in "Give Us This Day"). She is a fine actress.

Also showing is "Take One False Step" and "out-of-the-rut" mystery in which Shelley Winters creates another character who could have stepped right out of F. Scott Fitzgerald. Wm. Powell's the man who makes the faux pas.

Club's Flight Weekend Success Say Officials; Breakfast Flight Soon

The Ajax Flying Club's introductory flight weekend was an unqualified success according to Club officials. The weather, by previous standards, was good and on Sunday two aircraft and instructors were busy all day.

To wind up the February drive for new members the Club is scheduling the much-delayed breakfast flight for Sunday, Feb. 26. "Operation Hamilton," if not delayed for another week by inclement weather, will leave Toronto Island Airport at 8:30 as a twelve aircraft flight of about thirty members and their guests and will be back from Hamilton by 11:00 a.m.

Anyone interested in flying along with the Club should see the UC notice board for further information.

The future of the "Corner" has been widely discussed. Right now the year exec's are taking a telephone survey to give us a fairly accurate sample of student opinion.

The results of the poll will be presented to the Assembly and VCU Exec for consideration. If they think the findings significant they shall likely make recommendations for next year.

You can be assured the future of the "Corner" will be carefully considered in the light of existing facts.

The 5T0-5T1 Class Party (Cupid Capers) is set for next Saturday, Feb. 18, Wymilwood, music by the Melodaires. (This is a step forward to the pre-war style of class party which was always in Wymilwood. Its advantages over Burwash Hall for such a function are obvious.) It looks like it will be the best class get-together for the year!

Mathletics: The hockey playoffs begin this week. Jr., Vic plays Inst Management Tues., 4 p.m. If they win this they play Dent A Monday, Feb. 20, 8 p.m. Then begin the semi-finals!

Sr. Vic plays Fri., at 12:30 Their opponents will be the winners of the game between Dent B and Trinity B (played yesterday).

Gathletics: The Gals' hockey team plays St. Hilda's tomorrow (Wed.), 12:30. If they win this they are in the semi-finals. They seem confident of a win in spite of the tie (1-1) last time they played them.

The Vic 2nds are really breaking all records this year! They scored a 2-0 win over St. Hilda's, giving them a total of 3 goals in two years! Coach Jack Lowery was almost overcome with the unexpected success!

An Athletic Banquet is planned for March 15 for all gals active in sports this year—to be held in Burwash.

Snoopography: The Athletic Directress for Vic gals is Di Rogers. Graduating in Mod Hist, Di plans to go to OCE. A graduate of Forest Hill, she has been active in sports, plays centre for Sr. Vic this year, also a member of the Debating Parl Exec.

Three Colleges Produce One-Act Plays Tonight At Hart House Theatre

Three college dramatic societies will present plays at Hart House this evening at 8:30. This will be the final bill of one-act plays presented at Hart House this year, the University of Toronto Dramatic Committee announced.

The first production will be Philip Johnson farce entitled "Mr. Twemlow Is Not Himself". It will be produced by the Victoria College Dramatic Society. Previously this year they produced "The Flattering Word" and "Gammer Gurton's Needle".

Second presentation will be Trinity rendition of Miles Malleson's adaptation of Tolstoi's "What Men Lives By", a dramatic study which as adapted has been re-titled "Michael". The cast features little girls, young girls, Russian peasants and a Russian nobleman as well as the archangel Michael.

Anton Chekov's comedy "The Marriage Proposal" as produced by the St. Mike's Dramatic Society will be the final feature of the evening. Tickets may be obtained for fifty cents each at the four arts colleges and Hart House Theatre Box Office.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

Last year their publicity director came into The Varsity Office and asked the editor to run a short advance on the show because it was the best on the campus, and to send over a writer and a photographer. The editor, who had been given the going-over by every campus show group, and who had heard from every publicity director that their respective productions were the best, blew his nervous safety-valve and almost threw the Fizz-edder out. The advance did not run; but the editor saw the show on a couple of free tickets, and by gollies, it WAS the best production of the year. Shouldn't miss it.

Ottawa's Don Scott McEwen, the cinder flash who went to the University of Michigan, has done it again. In a meet last week he did the indoor cinder two miles in a record-shattering 9:06.9. The world's record is held by Gunder Haag who did it in 8:42.8 on an outdoor track in 1944. If coaches have to be believed, McEwen will take this record pretty soon. It is really too bad that the kid had to go down to the States to get the recognition he deserves and the coaching he needs.

B-BALL BLUES LOSE

By BRUCE MacDONALD

Despite a four point lead at the three quarter mark and a team strengthened by the addition of two men, the Senior basketball Blues were unable to withstand a scoring drive staged by the Western Mustangs and went down to a 39-50 defeat at the hands of the visitors.

The Blues had no trouble holding their own for the first three stanzas, as Don Barbour, who carried out his assignment by holding Wearing to six points, and Doug Kettle, two tall boys brought up from the Intermediates for the game prevented the Mustangs from controlling the rebound department to too great an extent. Led by Jack Gray and Johnny McManus, Varsity scorers managed to keep page with the Mustangs who featured big Bill Wade, Paul Thomas, and George Arnott as scoring guns.

Lead At Half

The Blues took over a 21-19 lead at the half on a last second basket by Bill Huycke, and continued to press the attack in the first 15 minutes of the second half. However, the Western shooting eye finally got the range in the last quarter. With Jack Gray out of the game on five fouls, and the Mustang marksmen potting basket with deadly accuracy from long range, the visiting squad shot ahead to a commanding 10 point lead with only 5 minutes to play.

A couple of crowd-pleasing baskets by Bill Henderson and one by Johnny Braithwaite were not enough to even the score for the Blues. Western swung into the old freeze-the-ball routine with 2½ minutes of play remaining, and the crowd was shown a perfect example of how the new two minute rule for foul shots at the end of the game slows the action up almost to a standstill. The sign on the wall read Blues 39, Western 50 as the final whistle sounded.

McManus turned in his usual fine effort for the Blues, scoring 7 points. Jack Gray was strong defensively and led Blue scoring with 8 points to his credit. Don Barbour was a welcome addition in height but seeme reluctant to shoot even when he was left comparatively unguarded.

Wade Tops

Bill Wade was top scorer for the visitors, hooping 14 points. Teammates Thomas and Arnott, with 13 and 12 points respectively were also very effective. Captain George Wearing was a tower of strength defensively for the Mustangs.

The win leaves the Mustangs undefeated in their Intercollegiate schedule up to date.

Lineups

Western — Beck, Fitzgerald, Thomas (13), Arnott (12), Ellis (3), Hunt, Ford (2), Wade (14), Wearring (6).

Varsity —Wigle (2), Barbour (2), Gray (8), McManus (7), Bell (5), Huyoke (4), Henderson (7), Kettle (2).

Ints BowTo Colts 40-28 In Spite Of 5 Point Lead

Although Barry Lowes' Intermediate hoopsters jumped into an early lead in the first half, the big Western Colts managed to overcome the deficit and emerge victorious 40 to 28.

Led by John Mackenzie's accurate hook-shots and Al Stevenson's playmaking sparked the Blue-boys to a 17 to 12 lead at half-time, but the Colts, led by McNichol's ten points, surged back in the second half. Varsity was able to hold them for a while in the second, but Western's slight advantage in height began to tell. McNicholl and teammate Wigle were particular thorns in the Blue sides as they outreached the Lowesmen.

The Intermediates played a smooth game and handled the ball well, but their shots just weren't hitting with the usual frequency and that was the whole story. The promotion of tall centre-man Don Barber to the Senior team didn't help any.

McNichol with ten and Wigle with thirteen were high men for the Colts, while MacKenzie's ten were tops for the Intermediates. Bruce Rogers and big Doug Kettle, who played two games, rebounded well and played good ball.

Scoring: Varsity — Rogers (4), Stevenson (4), Denton (2), MacKenzie (10), Cole (5), Kettle (3), K. Brown, Al Brown, Bernstein.

Scoring cont.: Western — Wigle (13), McNicholl (10), Kitchen (6), Davidson (4), Clark, Gerilach (3), Gallow (2), Carroll, Gerry, Vincent.

Varsity Girls Runners Up In Volleyball

McMaster took top place in the invitation volleyball tournament that took place in Hamilton on Saturday. The all-Varsity team put up some tough competition and came out with a close second. OAC and Western were the other two teams in the meet.

The Mac maidens defeated Varsity in the first game by two points, their only loss, with the final score 30-28. From then on it was clear sailing for Varsity. They defeated OAC 40-23, and Western 59-18.

The tournament was the first of its kind and a big success to boot. Running the game off in a round robin each team played three games, and finished off the day as guests of the McMaster girls for supper. McMaster will play a return match with Varsity in the LM gym on Feb. 20.

The line-up on the all-Varsity team was as follows: Ev Aiken, Vic; Shirley Brown, Vic; Sylvia Holmes, PHE; Bev Lowry, PHE; Eileen Jackson, PHE; Pat Conway, PHE; Muriel Chinn, UC (playing manager); Tana Jensen, Vic; Dody Jones, St. H.; Marilyn Jones, St. H.; Joan Lynn, Vic; and Mary Manon, St. M.

Buffalo Edges Varsity Swords

Varsity fencers turned the tables on their Buffalo rivals this weekend when they took the epee class in the fencing meet at Buffalo by 6½ to 2½ score. However, they were edged out in the sabre and foil classes and dropped the meet to the University of Buffalo Bulls 14½ to 12½.

Several mishaps hindered the Varsity effort. Ken Soga broke his glasses and Lucien Goldenberg suffered an injured knee. It is hoped that repairs to both will be completed in time for the Intercollegiate meet with McGill at Hart House next Saturday.

By BEAUREGARD YUMPF

Intramural sports are fast coming to a close. Volleyball finishes today; hockey is in its final stages; and badminton starts this morning at Strathgowan with the tournament to be completed by tomorrow.

Intercollegiate games are just starting, however, with the all-Varsity hockey team playing Queens on Friday. The badminton team goes to Queen's on Feb. 24, and the basketball to McGill for the Mar. 3 tournament.

Hockey

Vic II rang up a 2-0 count over St. Hilda's II last Friday noon. Joan Beattie, St. Hilda's goalie was the main factor responsible for the score being kept down to the two mark.

Barb Sagar opened the scoring early in the first stanza and from then on the play was fast and furious. Jessie Nugent, Vic, and Ruth Hintzon, St. Hilda's, made several drives for both goalies, Joan Beattie and Cat Card held them off.

St. Hilda's pulled a spectacular play in the last two minutes of the game when they took out their goalie and used six players—big-time stuff. The trick back-fired and Ann Carnwath broke through the scramble to tally the last goal.

More Hockey

The Vickcters second team did not fare as well yesterday at the hands of St. Mike's. Vics bowed to a 2-1 defeat although they showed promise throughout the game.

Peggy Quiggan sank the first goal for Vic, giving them a lead which they held until the second stanza. Joanne Smith, St. Mike's, tallied early in the second to even up the score. A third canto drive on the part of St. Mike's finally paid off when Joan Garvie made the final count of the game.

With this win St. Mike's made a clean sweep of their league, walking off with all eight points.

Meds defeated PHE II in the last minute spurt in their semi-final volleyball game last night, 36-34. Meds will play PHE 1 in the finals today.

Our good friend and bosom (not boozin', Mr. Typesetter) companion Mr. Johnny P. Metras invited us out to dinner last Saturday when he was here with his basketball Mustangs, and we had a nice long talk about football players and sports in general. It was an extremely interesting evening, and we came out of it with one conviction for certain: to wit—if you're going to write anything bad about Metras, don't talk to him before you write it, because as sure as the sun comes up in the morning, you won't write it. A real nice chap, and now we know why so many South-western Ontarioans swear by him.

Anyhow, we got everything straightened out, but we are afraid neither of us convinced the other of very much concerning the subsidization of athletes. However, we certainly garnered plenty of information on sports and athletes from a man who certainly knows the subject from 'A to Z. Sometime we'll pass the stuff on to our reader—if the Students' Administrative Council ever allots enough money for the publication of The Varsity for the scheduled number of issues.

Blues Beat McGill Digby Line Stars Now In First Slot

By BARRY THOMAS

The Blues captured their seventh win of the season as they turned back the rugged McGill Redmen 3-1 in a close checking game at the arena last Friday night. The win lifted the Blues into a first place tie with the Montreal Carabins. The latter, however, have a game in hand.

The McGill team checked fiercely but were no match for the smooth skating Halder men who were always one stride ahead of their opponents. After spotting the Montrealers a second period goal the Blues fought back, with all three forward lines dividing the scoring honours.

The first period was slow and ragged at times as both teams played cagey hockey while short-handed. The best scoring opportunity of the period occurred when Rich Howson skated in on the McGill net and passed to Porky MacDougall who missed the net by inches with a short flip shot.

Fast Pace

The pace picked up considerably in the second stanza as both teams opened up their attack. Russell started off the scoring at the 10:52 mark when he took a pass from Zemel inside the blue line and blazed the puck into the far corner of the net behind Doug Orr who had little chance on the shot. Less than three minutes later Howson laid a perfect pass on the stick of Wilf Digby, who sped around the defence and fired a blistering shot past McLelland to tie up the game.

Wes Moore slapped in the winning goal with less than three minutes to go in the period, when he finished off a passing play set up by linemates Cec Turcott and Norm Fox. Moore who had previously been out-lucked on several occasions was finally rewarded for his efforts. Only two penalties were handed out in the period, both to McGill.

Picture Goal

The third period continued at a fast clip with Varsity holding a decided edge in the play. The picture goal of the evening came at the 4:23 point when Joe Kane carried the puck up to the McGill blue line and flipped it through to Bob Bazos who cut in behind the defence, picked up the pass and raced into score the clincher. The applause that followed clearly indicated the enthusiasm of the fans towards Coach Halder's new forward line of Bazos at centre flanked by Artie Bell and Phil Arrowsmith.

Red-Hot Goalie

Bob McLelland was a standout in the McGill nets having 37 shots to handle compared to Orr's 20. Sanderson was strong on defence while Rube Zemel, Rockey Robillard and Irving were the best up front for the Redmen.

The Varsity defence was steady throughout the game with Kane and MacDougall turning in particularly fine efforts. Porky, incidently, has developed into the best rushing defenceman in the league. The Blues take on the much improved Golden Gaels from Queen's this Friday at the ice palace. The locals just managed to eke out a close 4-3 victory at their last meeting in Kingston, so the game promises to develop into quite a battle.

McGill—Goal, McLelland; defense, Tilley, Sanderson; centre, Irving; wings, O'Neill, R. Robillard; alternates: Reynolds, Zemel, Murphy, E. Robillard, Taylor, Andrew, Kent, Russell.

Varsity: Goal, Orr; defense, Addison, Kane; centre, Arrowsmith; wings, Bazos, Bell; alternates, Hayes, MacDougal, Turcott, Moore, Fox, Vernon, Howson, Digby.

Referees — Ken Holmshaw and Snubber Scott.

Interfaculty Sports

The opening round of opening Interfaculty hockey playoffs got under way yesterday when Trinity B's, winners of group 5, were held to a 4-4 tie by the group 8 winners, Dents B. Trinity scored all their goals in the first period, with Mike Creole getting two and McCarter and Andison each bulging the twine for a marker. Mesaws accounted for Dents only goal in the opening stanza. In the last half of the second period, the Trinity defence fell to pieces, allowing Mullen, McMillan, and Kidd to score before the whistle blew to end the game. The match will have to be replayed to decide the tie.

In the Sr. SPS vs Knox tilt, the Engineers completely out-classed the theologs to take a 10-2 decision. Sawyer, Sinclair, and Coates scored twice for SPS, while McPherson tallied both goals for Knox. The picture goal of the contest was scored by Hubie Sinclair when he split the defence on a solo effort just five seconds after the start of the second stanza.

In the major league basketball world, Sr. U.C. edged Sr. SPS by a 28-24 decision in Hart House yesterday noon to move into a first place tie for the first division with the Skulemen. Freeman was the guiding light for UC with 12 points to his credit. Gregory, Wilson, Pierce, and Willsie all notched 6 points for the Engineers.

Lineups: UC—Freeman 12, Schipper 4, Bocknek 3, Tisdale 4, Robeson 2, Johnson 2, Wengel, Durbin, Kennedy 1, McFadden. SPS—Gregory 6, Wilson 6, Pierce 6, Willsie 6, Wigle, Latinovitch, Moran, Pogontcheff, Braithewaite, Chorestickl, Buchanan.

SPS lost their second major league tilt of the day when the 3rds went down to a 32-22 defeat at the hands of the PHE 1sts. Hadlow paced the Athletics with a 12 point total. Lineups: Gayman, Furlong 2, Hadlow 12, Heath 4, Keegan 3, Carr, Strom 4, West, Housiry 7. SPS—Austen 2, Tarasick 8, Lafontaine 5, Rubina, Nagata, McCaggerty 1, Rootham, Blackwood, Richardson 2, McFayden.

Bow To Bisons Lose 5 Bouts Buffalo Strong

By ART CHETWYND

Although the U of T wrestling team went down under defeat at the University of Buffalo on Saturday night with a score of 23-9 (the team showed great improvement over their earlier meet of two weeks ago when the score was 26-5. On Saturday, Toronto won 3 and Buffalo 5 out of the 8 matches.

Toronto's three winners supplied the bright spot and the most enthusiastic of the evening. George Wright at 155 once more convincingly defeated his opponent Joe Doyle, a win by decision. Peter Hopkins first year meds, wrestling in his first public appearance, in the 165 lb. class took on Landon of Buffalo who is the state champion and proceeded to give him a real wrestling lesson, and won a decisive decision, just missing scoring a fall. In the 190 lb. class Bill Dingwall ran into an opponent, Dolan, with too much experience and lost by a fall in the end minutes of the first round. In the Heavyweight class, Paul Mobrait weighing 185, was matched against Don Beitleman, 235 lb. and Four State Champion, and in spite of a gallant effort was pinned with the first 30 seconds of the first round.

Results

125 lbs. Upper beat Lubbock (T) fall.

135 lbs. Adams over Pitman (T) fall.

145 lbs. Berd over Hebert (T) decision.

155 lbs. Wright (T) over Doyle decision.

165 lbs. Hopkins (T) over Landon decision.

175 lbs. Graham (T) over Lane decision.

190 lbs. Dolan over Dingwall (T) fall.

Heavy. Beitleman over Sabo (T) fall.

Seeing Double?

Two Of Other Leads But Only One Othello

Double casting will be inaugurated for the second time at the forthcoming production of Othello, Mr. Robert Gill, director of Hart House Theatre announced in an interview yesterday. This technique was used last year primarily because Shakespeare has few women characters in his plays. In order to give as many people as possible a chance to act the important female roles, double casting was inaugurated, so that a different set of actresses could be used for each performance, Mr. Gill explained. The same procedure will be used this year.

Two Iagos Too

Besides the women's parts, Ed. Follows, IV UC, and Eric House, IV UC, have been cast as Iago. "These fellows are so good that they both needed a chance to play this role which doesn't come along very often," Mr. Gill said. "It is interesting to compare the two performances. Acting is so individual no two people play a part the same way but each gives different shades of meaning to the character they are playing. At this stage of rehearsals, I can't say one is better than the other; they are both very good," he continued.

Double casting has never been carried on to so great an extent in Hart House productions before.

Careful Editing

The play itself has been cut for time and carefully edited with the assistance of several texts for comparison. Mr. Gill explained that Othello has been one of the most corrupted of Shakespeare's plays and the editing has been an attempt to achieve as clear and understandable a performance as possible, though none of the original wording has been changed.

The performance will be staged in two parts with one break. In order to achieve and maintain a smooth flowing pace, the Elizabethan device of a whole stage and a forestage for each successive scene will be used. The set itself will be built on three levels mounting to the back. Mr. Gill explained that this helps add to the feeling of fluidness on the stage. The set was designed and painted by Margaret Macdennell in a chartreuse and brown colour scheme.

Difficult Play, Says Gill

"This is the most difficult of the three annual productions of Shakespeare that have been attempted at Hart House. The verse is complex and irregular and the characters are extremely difficult to interpret," Mr. Gill said.

David Gardiner IV Vic will portray Othello. In the part of Desdemonda will be Aila Filppula, II UC, and Phoebe Templeton, IV Vic. Emelia will be played by Helen Armesto, II SMC, and Clarinne Jackman, III SMC, and Bianca by Lillian Becker, I UC, and Beth Robinson, II Vic.

Tickets for Othello go on sale tomorrow and the show will be premiered on the 25th of February.

Mr. Gill also announced that casting for next season's productions will begin as soon as Othello has begun.

Hart House Theatre director Robert Gill rehearses part of the double cast for the forthcoming production of Othello, opening Saturday, Feb. 25. Edward Follows and Eric House will play Iago on alternate nights, while Clarine Jackman and Helen Armesto will alternate as Emilia. Double casting is being used to give the girls a chance at Shakespeare, and to let Follows and House both have a chance to play Iago.

SAC Meeting

Students' Administrative Council members are asked to note that there will be a special meeting of the Council on Thursday, at 1 p.m., in the Board Room of the Mining Building. The special meeting, called by SAC President Bob Hetherington, is to discuss a motion passed at the last regular SAC meeting regarding Varsity advertising policy.

Stress Facts First Then Give Details —ISS On Lectures

"The best lectures are those which present us with an emphasis on the important facts. Only then should a lecturer deviate into the byways of theories," commented John Hastings, 5th year Medical student, speaking at the first International Student Service discussion on problems in current university life held last night in Trinity college.

The round table, which will be continued through the spring term on various topics related to "The Crisis in the University," discussed "What Are Lectures Meant To Do?" Among the questions raised were: Should lectures be on a reporting basis or should they be given an editorial pattern? How much time should be given to lectures, or are they even necessary? Could text books replace lectures?

Both professors and students took part in the discussion. Faculty members stressed that students can not get any value from lecture courses unless they realize that they must put a great deal of effort into the process. On the other side of the fence, students asked professors to first give them the facts necessary to pass examinations, and then go into theories and theses.

One of the faculty members present, Professor Coventry, Department of Biology, pointed out that in many of the Arts courses where the student is "spoon-fed" with facts, both professor and students are unable to get the most out of lectures.

Arts And Sciences Agree Co-eds Are Here To Stay

By LENORE KERT

Somewhere in one of the downtown dailies, there was an article last week about a certain man's speech, to a group of clubwomen. At present I am unable to track down the speaker or the whys and wherefores of his address, but at least I can remember the gist of what he said.

It was his contention that an educated mother means an educated family and that the more formal education a woman has, the better it is for her and for her associates. The values, both positive and negative, of advanced learning for women have often been debated, but the following is not intended as a time-worn restatement of these arguments. Its purpose is merely to acquaint you with the views of some of your fellow-students on this matter.

The first person questioned on the subject was that object of much abuse, an Artsman. This particular one felt that "an educated woman is a greater menace than a trained household pet." By this he means that they are more trouble, and cause more trouble, than they are worth. Another boy who was standing by wanted to know if love was based on intellect. Both of them seemed to agree on the fact that women's unceasing quest for greater beauty and their increased social drinking were results of their higher education. They could not explain precisely what the correlation was, but they were sure that it existed.

Someone had to favor education at the university level for women, but where, oh where was that carbon someone? At last he was found, coming out of the Medical Building. This student felt that a wide and complete as possible education could only be an asset to a future mother. Although admitting that plenty of 'Dumb Doras' can be found on any campus, he maintained that the majority of girls take advantage of their education. This is a question that does not have as cut and dried answer, so we feel perfectly free to choose whichever side you want. The fact remains that like night baseball, co-education is here to stay.

"Most Daring" Dawson's Gone

Montreal, Feb. 14.—(CUP)—"The most daring thing McGill has ever done," will close down May 31. Soon all McGill men will be gathered beneath the rare "Ginko" tree, which stands guard at James McGill's grave, to officially terminate what has been a thorn in McGill's side for the last few years. Dawson college, which was modelled after Toronto's Ajax, will be closed.

Electrical's New Television Mast Toppled By Wind

The Electrical Engineering Society lost one of its newer innovations yesterday when the television aerial recently set up atop the Electrical Building blew down in the worst storm of the year.

The aerial had been attached to the main aerial mast last summer. The supports on the 66 foot mast gave way yesterday morning, and by afternoon, the aerial had toppled over and was hanging almost straight down from the top of the main mast.

The chief technician of the Engineering Building stated that a new aerial could not be installed before next summer. It will be designed by the Engineering staff, he said.

National Scheme Student Exchange Off For 1950-51

Plans for a nationally-organized Canadian - American student exchange next year have fallen through. The University of Western Ontario NFCUS Committee have informed NFCUS Secretary Don Seldon, of McMaster University, that they cannot carry out the plan because the United States National Students' Association has not cooperated, the Western Gazette reported in its latest issue.

Toronto Still Trying

Despite the collapse of the national plan the University of Toronto NFCUS Committee hope to arrange student exchanges with U.S. universities for any interested students on this campus.

"We are very disappointed at the collapse of the national plan," Toronto NFCUS Committee Chairman Tom Symons said last night. "But we will do our best to arrange exchanges for Toronto students."

The UWO Committee reported to NFCUS Secretary Seldon that they had collected from other Canadian universities the names of Canadian students interested in taking part in exchanges with American students. However, they had heard nothing from the USNSA in spite of repeated requests.

To Suggest Change

Toronto Committee Chairman Symons said last night that the local committee expects to present two suggestions to the NFCUS conference next September regarding Canadian-American exchanges. The first recommendation, although not yet definitely worked out, will suggest reform of the organization of the exchanges to prevent repetition of this year's difficulties.

The second suggestion will be that the NFCUS and the USNSA send observers to each other's national conferences. Symons said this would aid other work between the two national-student organizations, as well as Canadian-American exchanges.

Under the exchange plan each Canadian student would be paired off with a United States student. They would pay their fees and board in their own universities and would attend each other's universities. This would avoid foreign exchange

Ban Stromboli!

There is a concerted effort now afoot to prevent the showing in Ontario theatres of the new and just-released Ingrid Bergman picture, Stromboli. Today we join our voice to those already clamouring for this banishment.

For many years past it has been the policy of the Provincial and Dominion governments to provide a certain minimum of illicit thrills for citizens by banning such items as films, books and magazines. But those interested persons could always hope to add a bit of spice to a usually dull Canadian diet of moral truisms by stealing over to Buffalo or Detroit to see the picture or buy the books.

In this regard, we wish to register a strong protest against the recent removal of Joyce's Ulysses from the "Banned in Canada" lists. Several thousands of people have spent thrilling moments smuggling this book across the border. Thousands more have spent titillating hours struggling through the text, their only inspiration that it was forbidden fruit. Now the possibility of the thrills has been removed by a thoughtless Dominion government.

So, it is with a good dead of self-satisfaction in our stand that we say to the government censor in charge of this sort of thing: "Ban Stromboli! There are hundreds of people whose every personal anecdote from now till Doomsday depends upon your decision."

Looking Backwards

Mid-Century Highlights

The Sex Habits of the Average Canadian University Student or Is It True What They Say About Kinsey?

The Varsity has often carried out exhaustive research projects on topics of student interest. The most ambitious of these schemes was launched in 1927 under the personal guidance of Editor-in-chief Lindsey. The esteemed editor was in his graduating year and being an alert newspaper type had noticed that many of his fellow scholars were showing a decided interest in females of the opposite sex.

Do not misunderstand, Lindsey was not naive; he had been told about the birds and bees early in life and at the time was going steady with a humming bird. Believing that there were others on the campus, perhaps encloistered in some forgotten lab or gathering dust in a faculty library, who shared his interest in current events he organized the memorial project. Staff reporters armed with questionnaires assailed the student body. A mass of data was obtained, edited, statistically analyzed and published in a series of informative articles.

The questionnaire was compiled by the editorial board with the purpose in mind to answer the pertinent questions, where, when, why and with whom? Examples of some of the type questions included were:

Do you believe in interdigitation before marriage?

Have you ever seen a century plant in bloom?

Do you approve of boys and girls matriculating in the same room?

Are you in favour of two-handed canasta?

Which do you enjoy more, dancing or intermissioning?

Do you reckon your descent patrilinealy?

Who was that lady I seen you with last night?

Does absinthe make your heart grow fonder?

What is your definition of a sport?

Have you any children to speak of?

That was no lady, that was my roommate.

Have you ever been to Montreal?

Are you inspired by a celestial body.

Have you ever been a-ghast at a nudist colony?

Do pecans make you giddy?

Do you believe marriages are made in heaven?

Would you consider the offspring of an oak and a maple a son of a birch?

Do virgin sturgeon need no urgin?

From the material appearing in that series two earth shaking conclusions were reached: Firstly, college girls prefer buildozers two to one, and secondly, when in trouble, head for the roundhouse — they can't corner you there.

Editor, The Varsity:

The U. of T. students, through their representatives to the SAC have voted in favour of NFCUS affiliation with IUS. A suggested program of action, to be followed if affiliation was approved, was outlined in The Varsity in the last of Jack Gray's series. Point (5) of that program suggests "that we take our place in IUS as a militant opposition." Is this the policy which is going to lead to peace? The editorial Feb. 10 issue of The Varsity claims that "ideas rather than clubs will shape the course of human events." Have we Canadian Students no better "ideas" than militant opposition to Communism to shape the course of human events toward Peace? Of course we have! But what action is planned to develop and correlate these ideas so that our delegates to IUS may be the "best informed, the best prepared, and the strongest student leaders available," so that the students at home "give them full support, both financially and morally"? (see Jack Gray's point 3).

The editorial in Feb. 9 issue claims that "Toronto students have managed to look beyond the surface of the problems and have injected a certain amount of vision into their thinking". What is this vision, militant opposition to Communism carried to IUS? The Communists know quite well that most Canadian students are militantly opposed to them. To cross the Atlantic with such a policy would be sheer waste of time and money and would depend for its effectiveness on the participation of two thirds of Western Block Student Unions so that the west might capture control of IUS. But what good would that do? Better we stay home and spend our time and energy designing H-Bomb shelters.

Beginning with the H-Bomb Issue The Varsity began to stir the thoughts of the campus on the issue of Peace and War. Editorials and articles continually state the problem, and The Varsity is to be congratulated for doing this, but nowhere do we find the answer to the problem. The answer must be found or ———!!! It would seem logical that we as students of a university "where all human knowledge is earnestly and honestly investigated" (according to Feb. 10 editorial) could find some answers. The answers could be the "ideas" that could shape the course of human events. It would seem logical that, having worked out some "ideas" they might be given to the delegates or observers to IUS so they would have a positive policy in going to meet the Communists. A policy that would be a step to-

ART — MUSIC — DRAMA

Radio: Stage 50

The CBC seems to be breaking out in a veritable rash of Lister Sinclair plays. On Stage 50 last Sunday night it was "Hilda Morgan" a play well up to the usual high Sinclair standard.

A girl who lived by a moral code of her own making, Hilda Morgan was indiscreet with a struggling young man who was killed in an automobile accident on the eve of announcing their engagement, and after learning that she had become pregnant. Her family and friends were deeply shocked, not so much at the idea of a child born out of wedlock, but at the thought that she welcomed the child as her lover's son. Her mother wanted her to go away, have her baby and then put it up for adoption, her sister suggested abortion, and her ex boy-friend suggested a quick marriage with him to forestall gossip. Hilda considered such courses ignoble. "We're only the weaker sex when it comes to weight lifting", she said as she moved out of the family home.

One could not help but sympathize with Hilda; what she did was possibly wrong, but her punishment is an indictment of the hypocrisy of our middle class morality.

Sinclair often comes close to greatness; he certainly did in Hilda Morgan. Scattering such gems of homely advice to young men as, "There're the ones to settle down with and the ones to settle up with, but you never know which until it's too late", he skilfully resolved the situation in which love flourishes in a marriage before God, but marriage is economically unfeasible. Never maudlin, never preaching, Sinclair just gets his heroine with child, and lets her face the music. The only flaw, the only shortcoming in the play is the fact that society is too roundly condemned. Surely with Hilda herself somewhat tarnished, the rest of the family must have something to be said for them.

ward peace and would not depend for its effectiveness on two thirds participation by Western Block student unions, though that would be desirable.

Jack Gray's program of action for NFCUS is sound, and it is to be hoped that is being carried out, except for point (5). To develop "ideas" to replace militant opposition the following action should be taken by NFCUS.

Commissions of students and professors should be set up on all Canadian campi to study and report the ideas which represent the best university thought on:

(a) the essence of our way of life
(b) Fascism and Imperialism, Democracy and Totalitarianism
(c) Capitalism and Communism
(d) the Atomic Energy deadlock
(e) the history of the Cold War and necessary steps in the direction of its conclusion.

Equipped with these reports, correlated by an conference of representatives of all Universities in May, observers to IUS this summer could be the best informed, best prepared, best able to make Canadian participation in IUS a step toward Peace rather than War.

This is no easy task, in fact it is a gigantic task. But if we are not prepared to accept the responsibilities of our privileged position in the University, if we are willing to talk and not to act, we do not deserve peace. War can happen! War doesn't have to happen! Time is running out!

Blues Lose To Mikemen 6-2 Retain One Chance In Race

By DAVE BUTTERS

Varsity Junior Bees retain only a mathematical chance for a tie in the Junior B hockey race. If they win their last three games and St. Mike's lose their next three, including one with Varsity these two teams will end up in a third-place tie, forcing a play-off. Last night the Bees lost to St. Mike's 6-2 when the Mikemen led by Harrison and Mihlison with two goals exploded in the third period for four goals. Fullerton bagged two for the Bees while continuing in his early season form which he regained two weeks ago.

Using eleven players last night coach Wade shuffled his forward lines to get the best advantage. The combination showing best was the line of Fullerton, Wardrop, and Kent. These players accounted for the Bees goals with Dave Kent missing shots by scant inches. Gord Harrison and Joe Mihlison combined to account for four of St. Mike's goals while Gerry Young kicked out shot after shot poured at him by the goal-hungry Bees.

Line-ups

Varsity — Goal, Taylor; defence, D'arcy Prendergast, Paul Prendergast; center, Sinclair; wings, Kent, Yeo; alternates, Fullerton, Brown, Wardrop, Ladly, Machim, Moore, Nichols.

St. Mike's — Goal, Young; defence, MacNamara, Clune; center, Harrison; wings, Mihlison, Peart; alternates, Lee, Bourke, Murphy, Lemon, Scanlon, Tattersall, MacCarthy, Ratchford.

Barr Breaks Mile Record At Open Meet

Dave Barr, slight, bespectacled middle-distance star of SPS, set a new Interfaculty record in the indoor mile in the Hart House Meet yesterday. George Webster, SPS I, was but a few steps behind him. Barr's time was 4:29.3, and Webster's a tenth of a second slower.

Chuck Wortman, Vic, won the novice mile, lapping every man in his heat. There was originally to be only one heat, which was won by Walt Farrell, SMC, in 4:58. Wortman's late arrival changed this—and the winning time.

The St. Mikes' quartet won the relays—again—with the team of John Hryshko, Gary Garossino, Bill Davies, and Paul Forestell, doing the eight laps in 2:32.2. SPS rated second, the Trinity II team third, and Vic fourth.

Top Times

Open mile—Barr, SPS, 4:29.3; Webster, SPS, 4:29.4; John Hryshko, SMC, 4.39.6.

Novice mile—Wortman, Vic, 4:37.8; Farrell, SMC, 4:58; Best, Trin, 5:01; Crawford, Vic, 5:01.6.

Relays—SMC, 2:32.2; SPS, 2:34.5; Trinity II, 2:37.7; Vic, 2:41.6; Trinity I, 2:45.9.

Sportswoman

The interest shown at the last swimming class has made two more coach periods possible at U.T.S. The first is Thursday, Feb. 16, and if well attended another will be held on Thursday, March 9. This means practice and instruction for any student with a good medical standing, in style, tricks, diving, and coaching.

The badminton tournament reached the semi-final stages yesterday, and will be completed today when Jane Matthews, Trin., plays off with Pat Montgomery, PHE. The winner advances to the finals to play Mary Matthews, Trin., for the championship.

PHE took the volleyball championship for 1950, defeating Meds 42-21, by dint of a smashing attack in the last half.

Gaels vs. Blues

Friday is the day everyone has been waiting for. Coach Harry Boyd's all-Varsity girls' team will play their first intercollegoate hockey game of the year against Queen's in the arena at 4:30. Come early to avoid the crush for seats. Will the Gael girls wear kilts?

Blues-Rochester OAC vs. Ints Tonight

The Senior cage quintet from the University of Rochester will be the guest performers at tonight's Sports Nite at Hart House. The festivities are scheduled to get under way promptly at 7:15 with a league duel between the OAC Aggies and the Varsity Intermediates. The senior game will go on at 8:30 and promises to be a close contest if Masterson's men can come up with another stellar effort such as the Western tangle.

Barry Lowe's Intermediates are counted upon to come through in their tilt tonight against the Aggies. Though they have lost driving Doug Kettle they are still a team to be reckoned with in the intermediate league. The admission is fifty sous and tickets will be on sale at the door at 6:30. For middle of the week entertainment it just can't be beat so get out and give the Blues a boost.

Interfaculty Sports

As the interfaculty hockey league playoffs progress it becomes evident that there is not a very big gap between the style and quality of play of the different groups this year. While the scores may belie this fact in some instances, it is none the less true. The games are really worth while watching and deserve more interest than they now receive.

Now that the voice in the wilderness has subsided, the brothers Duffy of St. Mike's made the noon hour interfac playoff somewhat of a family affair as they netted four of their team's five counters in a 5-1 victory over SPS fourths winners of the fourth group.

McKillop from McNamara was the title of the first tally of the game from whence Earl Duffy made it two for the double blue with the assist going to Roden. W. Marshall netted the lone skule score unassisted to end the scoring for the half.

Earl Duffy again and then two goals from brother Pat with McKillop and Robertson handling both assists wound up the encounter which saw Paul Wainhause, stellar Mike goalie, receive a cut above the eye.

Junior Vic eliminated Institutional Management, group six winners, by a 4-2 margin in the other encounter. The purple and white clad managers were first to light the red lamp as Whiteside banged one in with only 25 gone in the game. Crotteau of the managers ended the scoring with their other counter.

For Jr. Vic is was Dohner, Andrews, Penning and Sheridan in that order all unassisted. The Vicmen now meet Dents A of group three who received a bye in the second round.

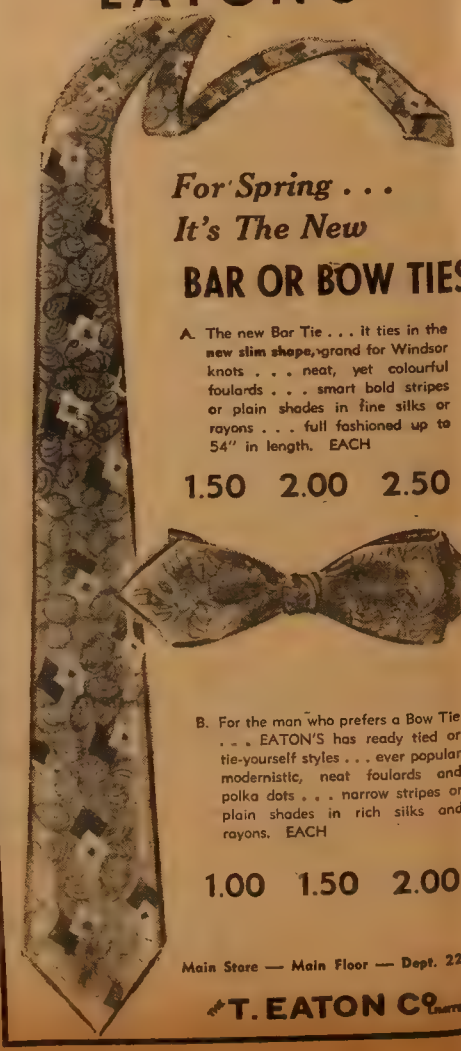
Jr SPS and PHE thirds took major hoop victories. The Skulemen took over Jr Vic by a 28-18 score to tie Dents for second place with Clark and Leibowitz leading the way with seven points each.

Student Is Killed By Front Door

Toronto, Feb. 14—(Canadian Pressers)—Beauregard Yumpf, well known student at the University of Toronto, was killed yesterday when he failed to move fast enough and had the front door of Hart House close on him. When the ambulance arrived, Yumpf was wedged tightly between the two halves of the door, and seemed to be in great pain, but was still alive. He died on the way to the hospital.



Yumpf had left a lecture at noon, and had made his way to Hart House in the hope of getting his lunch before he had to go back to lectures at two o'clock. On arriving at the front door, Yumpf attempted to open it, but found that he was not strong enough. He enlisted the help of another student, but still could not get inside.

Yumpf, who was exceedingly hungry at the time, looked around for some method of opening the door. According to the student who was with him, Yumpf knew the door was open because fourteen students had opened the door from the inside by pushing on it all at once. The construction crew working on the Queen's Park roadway testified that they were approached by Yumpf who wished a loan of their bulldozer. Yumpf took the caterpillar tractor and drove it to the front steps of Hart House. There he attached a three-quarter inch steel cable to the knob of the door and the bull-dozer. His friend drove the bull-dozer while Yumpf tried to squeeze in. The bull-dozer was powerful, and the door moved open a few inches. Yumpf immediately pushed himself in between the open door and the closed half.

It was then that the tragedy happened. The steel cable broke under the strain and the door slammed shut.

Varsity students voiced the opinion that it is a wonder this had not happened sooner, and most of them hoped the Warden of Hart House would take steps to remedy the situation. Warden Ignatieff, when approached for comment, said that he was very sorry, and sent his sympathies to Beauregard Yumpf's family, but that unfortunately nothing could be done about the door. Services will be held Friday.

Open Letter

Students' Administrative Council
University of Toronto.
Dear Councillors:

Would you reconsider the motion you passed re Varsity ad policy February 8? We honestly feel some of you do not understand why we are so perturbed.

Let us try to make ourselves understood. To you it is clearly a matter of straight business policy. It is just an affirmation in writing of a condition that has always existed. To us it is much more than that. Before your motion was passed the Editor and the Business Manager had equal voice in deciding on emergency measures in ad policy. Now the Editor has no voice whatsoever. The Business Manager has full authority, regardless of what emergencies may crop up.

The present Business Manager, Mr. E. A. Macdonald, has recognized that the motion could destroy the harmonious relationship between the Editor and the Business Manager, and is in favor of replacing the motion.

We realize that at no time did you intend the motion to censure the Editor. But the specific reference to pulling the ads from the H-bomb issue makes the inference unavoidable. It implies non-confidence in the Editor's discretionary powers. The motion makes any future editor incapable of negotiating with the Business Manager on even terms.

Now we hope you can see that our resignations are a matter of principle rather than a threat. No one with integrity could continue to work under such limitations of discretionary freedom.

We still are optimistic enough to hope for some satisfactory compromise.

The Lady Godiva Memorial Band have accepted the invitation of the Hart House Committee to play at the Spring Dance to be held here March 3. The LGMB will parade up and down Hart House Tuesday, Feb. 21, when the tickets go on sale, from noon to two o'clock, to give a preview of what may be expected at the dance. Other music at the dance will be provided by Art Hallam, and two other orchestras as yet unselected. The Spring Dance will be the last big all-Varsity social event of the year. The main entertainment feature will be a Quartet Concert sponsored by the newly-formed Hart House Society for the Prevention of Extinction and Encouragement of Barbershop Quartets. This will take the form of a contest, and a suitable trophy will be presented to the winners. Judging will be done with a special applause meter. Other features will be a dimmed-out lounge, soft music, a log fire, and a lunch-room cabaret. Ticket sales will be limited to 750 couples so as to prevent overcrowding.

Rather See Than Be One

Don't let the beginning fool you, this story is really about cats.

Some engineers like forty beers; maybe even all engineers like forty beers. Some engineers just love cannons. And just about all engineers are crazy about medieval white horses which roam about under medieval nude women. Hugh Sutherland, II SPS, is different. This story isn't about Hugh Sutherland either.

Hugh Sutherland has a cat. A great, big, white, fluffy, Persian cat. His name is "Candy Cane's White Frost." What's that to me? you may say. Just this, brother. Nothing! But it's more than nothing to Hugh Sutherland; to him it's really something. (Hugh Sutherland can stop reading this feature right now, because his name is not going to appear again).

Anyway, this engineer, you know, the one who just stopped reading, got Candy Cane's White Frost from his girl friend. For his birthday! What she really wanted to get wasn't really a great, big, fluffy, white cat at all. She really wanted to get a BLUE one. I wonder what he ever did to her to deserve such treatment at her hands. I bet her hands are rough and red! Anybody who would give a guy a blue cat for his birthday must have rough, red hands. But that's all beside the point.

The point is this. The guy likes it! He doesn't like it as much as he would have liked a blue one (he could call a blue one Candy Cane's Blue Monday or something) and not nearly as much as he would have liked a green one. Even his parents, who never were any great shucks on cats, like it. Maybe they're just glad the thing is conservatively colored. I'm told that they might as well be grandparents, the way they love the thing. Maybe grandparents love cats more than other people do. But I digress.

White Cane's Candy, however is a pretty smart cat, I hear. They tell me he can turn out the light all by himself; there is a string attached to it. (What's so smart about that? I can turn the light out too, and I don't need a string to do it.)

Anyway, if you would really like to see this beautiful animal, (which I, personally think looks like a pile of soap suds somebody spilled on the floor), go down to the Orange Hall on Queen St. E., on Feb. 20 and 21, when Handy Andy's Frost Bite will be strutting her stuff with about 100 other cats.

Better bring a pair of dark glasses though, one of the entries is a NEON cat.

Accepted By SAC Will Take Effect At End Of Month

The resignation of the editor-in-chief of The Varsity was accepted by the Students' Administrative Council at a special meeting held yesterday in the Council Room of the Mining Building. The resignation was accepted by a vote of 9-2.

"Unable To Continue"

Editor H. S. Fillmore said a motion passed by the Council at its meeting Feb. 8 could be interpreted only as a motion of no-confidence in himself, and that he would be unable to continue as editor if the motion stands in the minutes of the SAC.

The motion in question states that "before any scheduled advertising is removed from The Varsity, it first must have the permission of the business manager." It was the word "permission" to which Fillmore objected. He also stated that a paragraph following explained that the motion referred to the advertisements removed from the Feb. 6 (H-bomb) issue implied a lack of responsibility on the part of the editor. Fillmore said he felt this paragraph should be stricken from the minutes.

SAC President Bob Hetherington said that with the present financial situation of The Varsity, the removing of scheduled advertising was a dangerous practice which could conceivably alienate the advertisers and reduce the amount of revenue The Varsity could produce.

When the objection to the motion was first raised at a meeting of the publications committee last Monday, SAC business manager E. A. Macdonald said if the motion should destroy the harmonious relationship between the business manager and the editor, he would rather have it replaced.

At yesterday's meeting, Hetherington suggested the tacit agreement on advertising between the business manager and the editor should be the form of a motion to cover any exigencies and to form a basis for future groups to work on.

Vic SAC rep Doug Thomas, in moving that the motion in question be rescinded, said he felt the Council should have confidence in the judgement of its appointed editor and pointed out that since an agreement already exists between the business manager and the

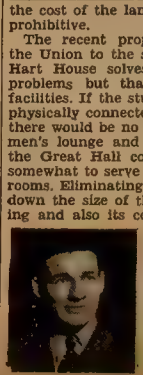
Time, Two Feet, And Diplomacy

(This is the seventh in a series of articles on the Students' Administrative Council and its many activities.)

By JOAN EDDIS

✣ ✣ ✣ —



The Student Union is becoming more and more of a reality. SAC Student Union chairman Ian MacLennan, V Arch., has been handling the endless negotiations.

When it comes to dealing with Hart House, the university planning committee, the university administration and the Massey Foundation, what is needed is time, two feet and diplomacy. Ian has given all these, especially time. Ask his profs who are wondering when he is going to hand in his thesis, long overdue.

Reject St. George Site

Ian's final year thesis project is for a student Union located on St. George Street, the site considered until recently. This location was rejected for several reasons. For one thing St. George is a long walk away from several university buildings including St. Mike's, the Banting, Vic and the Economics building. Besides the cost of the land there is almost prohibitive.

The recent proposal of building the Union to the south and east of Hart House solves not only these problems but that of overlapping facilities. If the student Union were physically connected to Hart House, there would be no need to include a men's lounge and the kitchens for the Great Hall could be expanded somewhat to serve the Union dining rooms. Eliminating these rooms cuts down the size of the student building and also its cost.

MACLENNAN

Size is an important consideration, for the proposed area has its limitations. The grade differentiation between Queen's Park Crescent and the campus road is 14 feet which means that if a basement were included extra (and expensive) precautions for re-inforcement would be necessary. The size of the Union is also curtailed by the campus roads and by aesthetic considerations.

Co-operate With Hart House

However, by co-operating with Warden Ignatieff to eliminate duplication of services and by leaving out the theatre and memorial chapel, a three-storey student building may yet be erected following fairly closely the suggestions put forward in the brief by last year's Union committee under Gordon Gwynne-Timothy. Naturally the cost analysis outlined in that brief has had to be revised to suit present prices. On the basis of a unit cost of $14 per square foot, Ian estimates that the students will pay roughly $500,000 for their building.

Pumps In New Life

The question of finances stymied the Union committee. But belated Christmas cheer was offered by President Sidney Smith last month. He pumped new life into the committee by saying the university might be able to find a little nest egg for the student project.

However, the details of how students will pay back the money to the administration have yet to be worked out. One solution may be a straight levy of a few dollars per student each year until the loan is repaid. Under this system the debt would be paid off in 15 to 20 years.

Meanwhile the students would have the use of the building with its cafeteria, coffe shop, dining rooms, committee rooms and, yes, washrooms. Although the men's lounge has gone by the architect's boards, the spacious co-ed lounge and women's lounge remain. After all, as Ian put it, the women have to have some place free where they can chatter about the men while the male of the species is over in Hart House.

Citizens Of The U Of T

Last week John Finlay of Victoria took his future in his two bare hands. He stood up before the VCU Assembly and suggested that Vic dispense with college shows and from now on devote all "show" energies to All-Varsity efforts.

Mr. Finlay pointed out that few people in the college shows actually get a return from the show that is anywhere equal to the effort expended. He added that college shows are a drain on "university loyalty", are usually in the red, and in general add to an already crowded social schedule.

We here at U. of T. and students at other Canadian universities could use more of that kind of non-provincial thinking. It is refreshing to know there are students with thoughts that transcend narrow clique, club or college thinking.

We congratulate Mr. Finlay.

Factual note: the VCU Assembly turned the motion down, cold.

Intellectual Snobs

Too many students are selling students short these days.

We've been listening to the various opinions of various students, leaders and otherwise, all through the year. The main idea we get is that students are (a) not capable of thinking for themselves, and (b) students are childish lovers of spectacles and pep rallies.

We disagree . . . violently.

Students are capable of clear thinking—of responsible and social thinking—and what is more they use these capabilities. Of course the student student's advisors would point out the chariot race debacle, the non-attendance at "cultural" affairs, and the general low level of student thought.

But . . . the self-appointed judges miss the fact that the Engineering Society quickly realized the shortcomings of the chariot race and made good solid suggestions for its future.

AND . . . they miss the fact that for the last two weeks there has been endless discussion on this campus about two very notable items—the H-Bomb and NFCUS-IUS affiliation.

AND . . . they miss the fact that if students can see a problem students can tackle it. True, often the true problem is not too apparent. Often many extraneous situations are taken for true challenge. But we feel that students, when they do perceive clearly, can think responsibly.

Those ultra-ultra students who wander around with all the answers, full of sneers for the common garden-variety student, have fallen into the major pitfall of a university education—intellectual snobbery.

Too bad—Canada needs all her citizens.

Our Readers Write

World Government

Editor, The Varsity:

In your excellent editorial of Tuesday, Feb. 14, you defined the present world problem in the following terms: "How can we alter conditions in the world today, so that—controlling the bomb will be feasible?" The World Government Association of this campus feels that World Government would provide conditions under which control, not only of the H-bomb, but other means of warfare, could be effected.

Members of organizations in 27 countries promoting world government today are not in complete agreement as to the wording of a constitution, method of representation in a legislature, or type of executive body. They do agree however on the principle of a supra-national authority, which can prevent use of force in disputes between nations.

The obvious question at this point, is, "isn't that what the United Nations Organization is for?" Admittedly that is its purpose, but few people today believe that it has any chance of controlling the war-potential of its member nations.

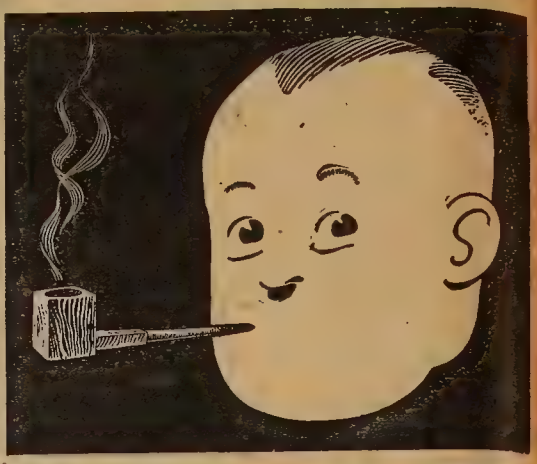
The reason for this failure is inherent in its charter—U.N.O. is merely a conference, which means that the countries come to the conference table as autonomous nations, each free to do as it pleases in its relations with other nations. An analogy to more familiar ground is to imagine no federal government at Ottawa, and an attempt to keep peace and order among our ten provinces with a permanent United Provinces Organization. But we have overcome that absurd situation by each of the provinces yielding some of its jealously guarded rights to a supra-provincial government, at Ottawa, which speaks to the individuals in the provinces, and hence enables a handful of R.C.M.P., in the absence of local armies, to keep order.

The next logical step forward from national governments is to world government, with representatives elected from constituencies or small areas, not delegated by nations.

No group supporting World Government today has fixed answers for the details, but in general outline, the Varsity Association agrees with the following segments of a world order:

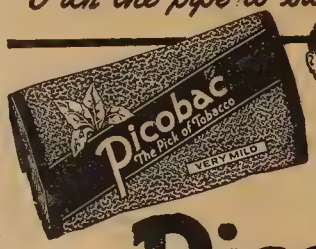
I. Constitution, defining:
(a) The system of voting and representation to be used in electing members to a world legislature.
(b) The precise jurisdiction of the World Legislature.
II. World Legislature:
It will consist of elected citizens of the world, passing laws on topics such as atom bombs, war-potential, air transport, shipping on high seas and a world food board.
III. World Courts—to interpret these laws.
IV. World Police Force——to enforce these laws.

The crucial point will come on the lay when the first World Atom Inspection Board sets out for Russia or for Oak Ridge, Tennessee, because in essence that is the end results when demand "Ban The Bomb". Since none of the great powers trust the written guarantee of the others not to use the bomb, then inspection on a world level is the sole answer:



In order to permit this inspection, the nations must yield some of their sovereignty to the higher power; the only form of higher authority which cannot be deadlocked by power blocs, is a world Government.

How can world government be achieved? How are the complex problems of language, race, unevenness in population, industrial strength, and literacy to be overcome? Our group believes with the editorial, that the advent of the H.Bomb has at last provided a "common-enemy," (which even the atom bomb did not)—a fate so fearful that it will force the world to unite. An invasion from Mars would probably have brought world cooperation with startling suddenness years ago.



Our duty as students is to make these facts known, and to press for the political changes necessary. There doesn't seem to be much choice. Certainly no "magic helper" will achieve World Government for us, any more than pass our examinations for us in May.

NFCUS Committee Ask For Increase From 6-25 Cents

The local NFCUS Committee last night passed a motion urging an increase at the per capita NFCUS fee from the present six cents per student to 25 cents per student. The main aim of the proposed fee increase is to support a permanent full-time national secretary.

Presents Case

The Committee passed the motion after discussing a report from national NFCUS Secretary Don Seldon, who presented an outline of the arguments in favor of a fees increase.

The motion will go to SAC as a recommendation, and SAC will make any final decision whether the University of Toronto wants the increase.

In his report Seldon pointed out that, "NFCUS can continue operating on its present administrative and financial basis provided Canadian students will be content with a restricted program and the prosecution of that program in what often oppears to be a slow and inefficient way."

Outlines Forces

However, improvement of the program would make necessary an increased fee, he said. There were three "forces creating pressure for increasing the scope of NFCUS activities":

"A universal movement towards greater student participation in international affairs.

"Increasing realization of the value of inter-university affairs such as seminars, choral festivals, debating and athletic competitions.

"Increasing student familiarity with NFCUS which results in increased demand" for other services like aid to travelling students.

Secretariat Costs Most

Of the total $12,500 per year Seldon estimated the new fee would provide, $8,000 would be used for the proposed national office and full-time secretary. One reason the national office is needed, Seldon said, is to provide someone who can give continuity to the administration of activities from year to year.

Another reason was that Canadian universities are widely separated, so that students have diff-

Stud'nt Union Report Soon Plans Coming

The perrenial question of the Memorial Students' Union arises again with the notice of a release of the report of the SAC committee on this subject.

Last night, SAC Union Committee Chairman Ian Maclennan said that the recent advances would be made public in a release to appear next week.

At present nothing official is available, but plans for a three-day-problem in fifth year Architecture drawing class have been hinted to be based on a drawing of a proposed plan for the Union. If this actually happens then all the senior students in Architecture will submit a plan for the building. With over fifty members in the class the results will form the nucleus of the annual exhibition.

The report from the committee will give an outline of the financial standing of the Union, as well as the response of the officials affected to the publication of the tentative plans. It is understood that unofficial approval has been given the setup by representatives of the Massey foundation.

Among the problems to be resolved are the relation of the new building to Hart House, and the administration of the new building.

Sari At Soiree

One of the students from India who will be at the Varsity International Ball tonight is seen here in her national costume. Many of the students who will be there will be wearing their country's dress and the ball is expected to be one of the gayest and most colourful dances of the year.

Varsity Placement Service Helps Grads Obtain Jobs

So you're going into the world in a few months. You've got your B.A., well, practically, so that now you really have to look at the future. No more part time jobs for you, nope. But, because you're a grad of the U. of T., the University Service, located at 67 St. George will help you to get the job you want. It's the central co-ordinating body for all placement on the campus.

In order to cope with the big number of employment seekers, Placement Service attends to the grads, while the colleges look after the undergrad, by posting up the employment ads the Service sends them.

Plenty of Notices

There are billboards for these notices in the U.C. Rotunda, and outside the Placement, and the Registrar's offices in Trinity Victoria, and St. Mikes. If the grad-to-be does not find a satisfying opening through these notices, by the time the exams come, he can go to the Placement Service and fill out an application, which deals with the applicants vital statistics and with what he wants to do. His card is matched with the jobs in his category.

Artsmen may wonder what their B.A. degree is going to fit them for. J. K. Bradford, the director of University Placement Service, says, "Employers do not hire a degree. They want an individual who has become mature by taking the degree."

Attention 5T0 Grads

How does the employer get to know about the facilities of the University Placement Service? "There are a certain number that keep in touch with us every year," said Bradford. "This year a pamphlet has been prepared and sent them out to many firms to acquaint them with the Service."

Bradford also spends a lot of time out talking to employers. Further contacts are made through Alumni groups in Winnipeg and Montreal.

"The 5T0 grads should watch the notice boards in their colleges," advised Bradford. "Everything that comes in here, goes there. If you don't find anything, fill out a form.

Indispensable, Skule Guests, Convince UC

A Faculty of Applied Science is a useful and desirable part of a reasonable university, decided the U.C. Mock Parliament yesterday afternoon by a vote of 31-26. Special guests and voting members for the debate were a group of about thirty representatives from Skule.

The government, upholding the resolution "that a Faculty of Applied Science is superfluous and undesirable in any reasonable university", was led by Chuck Cohen and Fred Gilles of U.C., while the opposition leaders were Bill Morash and Jerry Lawson, of fourth year Skule, and Harold Krever, III U.C.

Demoralizing Influence

The artsmen contended that an Engineering faculty was "a demoralizing influence" on any campus, and that as long as there are pure science courses, Skule is superfluous. They also stated that the function of a university is to stimulate thought, and a course which merely teaches the application of the ideas of others is contrary to the ideals of the university. They stated also that all that is taught is mechanical principles and work that an electronic calculator can do better.

The Skulemen tried to justify their presence on the grounds that Engineers make a useful contribution to society, and proceeded to enumerate several examples. They mentioned several graduate engineers who occupy places of prominence in Canadian business and government. They also contended that their faculty was necessary to provide spirit and "joie de vivre" in academic work.

The debate was featured by extensive heckling and quick questioning of the speakers. Order was however maintained by Speaker Harold Carter.

ISS Official Here Monday: To Talk On South East Asia

A "Report on the Universities of South East Asia" will be given here on Monday at 4:00 p.m. in the Women's Union Theatre by Dr. Sigdart Wolontis, General Secretary of The International Student Service and World Student Relief, local ISS officials said last night.

Dr. Wolontis, who holds one of the high executive positions in International ISS, has just completed a trip through India, Pakistan, Burma, Malaya, Indonesia, Australia and New Zealand, and is on his way home to Geneva.

A Swedish medical doctor, the ISS General Secretary has a long record of activity in student work, having spent many years as a vice-chairman of the Swedish ISS before he took his present post with International ISS and WSR.

Jungle Explorer At U.C.

Remember the stories of the Spanish Main, of explorers penetrating the dense jungle of South America, and of the many strange new tribes discovered there? Well, Syl Dirk, now a student of Anthropology and Languages at U.C., has spent much of his time there.

Originally from Saskatoon, Saskatchewan, Syl went to Peru to work with a linguistic organization interested in solving the complexities of the Indian languages, with the ultimate objective of translating the New Testament and aiding the missionary work there. Syl and his wife were especially connected with the Campa tribe, the largest of fifty tribes in eastern Peru — incidentally, all speaking different languages.

Primitive Life

Living conditions are quite primitive. Homes are jungle huts, the roofs of which are thatched palm leaves, and the walls built of the trutiks of the same trees. These can be built by the natives within a few weeks. The food of the white settlement consists of canned stuffs plus the native diet. The latter includes fish, corn, wild pig, and the mamiac root, a vegetable similar to the potato. Bananas are often eaten raw, fried or boiled. (Imagine eating boiled banana!)

Travelling to this part of the world must be done by seaplane or motor launch at the Campa Tribe is far from the reach of car or train. Even then, going from place to place in Peru must be done in dug-out canoes which is definitely hard on the constitution. Syl remembers travelling ten days in one of these crafts on flood waters.

Not For Amateurs

Syl wouldn't advise anybody to dash off to Peru on the spur of the moment. Malaria is prevalent among both native and foreign peoples, and it is advisable to carry lots of medicine to counteract this and other diseases. It's also necessary to have a guide along on an expedition not only to lead the way through the thick jungle, but also to inform the natives who you are and what your business is.

The natives are friendly, but only if you are. Living so far from South America, most people think of it as full of wild and ferocious animals. This is true only of very remote parts of the country. On the Sambo River there are mostly monkeys, parrots and the odd boa-constrictor.

Strange Customs

Among the native customs are many interesting superstitions. If a person died in a house it is immediately abandoned and probably burned because it holds evil spirits of death. The birth of twins is considered an evil omen, and the children are left in the jungle to be eaten by wild animals. Opon one occasion, the members of the mission approached a mother concerning the fate of her two new-born infants.

She agreed to give the girl to the mission, while bringing the boy up herself and pretending the girl had never existed. She picked up her daughter, handed her to her eldest daughter who in turn gave it to the

One Act Plays

Tuesday evening saw three one-act plays presented by the University of Toronto Drama Committee.

Victoria brought forth Mr. Twemlow Is Not Himself, a sort of a farce. The Twemlows represent that prim, puritan, virtuous family who abhor drinking and carnivals. Comedy arises when two husbands meet, the twist coming when they change personalities. The respective wives decide that they prefer the husbands the way they were before and then the situation returns to normal.

One feels more pity, for the Twemlows than amusement at the twist of fate, and is unconvinced by the characters or the moral: Appreciate what you've got, it's better than you think. Man Worden was delightful as the Twemlow daughter who was studying up on the sly to be a gangster's moll. The rest of the cast seemed much too serious in their parts that gave them a distinctly stilted quality. Jean MacDonald had a properly cultivated accent as the charwoman. Bob Sheriff and Ed. Taylor as Braby and Twemlow respectively were better trying to act drunk than self-consciously sober. Jean Scroggie and David Peddie directed.

Michael, by Trinity, was a religious drama in the form of a fairy tale in which the Archangel Michael comes down to earth to learn three truths from a Russian peasant cobbler's house. He discovers that there is love inherent in man, that man does not know his own needs and that men live by love for others. The method used to carry across the mystical effect demanded by the story was to have Michael sit with his back to the audience and explain himself and his philosophy. He is of course set off by the simple figures of the cobbler's family who provide reaction to the angel that the audience cannot see. Success of the play rests on the effect of the characters on the audience, and the cast tried ably to achieve this.

Michael Hamilton as the Archangel, though was far from forceful in his explanatory speech but carried well the mystical effect. As Matronya Meg McFadzen was an effective cobbler's wife as was Jim Armour who played her husband, despite the hair that was drooped over his face throughout.

St. Michael's play, Shekhov's Marriage Proposal, was by far the best of the three. The cast had ease and grasp of their material that was carried across. James Hamelin was consistently amusing as the palpitating, hypocondriac of a suitor, while Margaret Kearns was perfectly matched in her role as the prospective bride who leads her blubbering suitor into petty arguments over the ownership of some land. Gene Eckhart as the father knew his business but was cast as an effeminate character. The part was ridiculous to begin with but was discouragingly overdone. In any case the production showed the able directorial hands of Uudrie Lowrie and Barbara Billane.

"MY BANK" IS A MILLION CANADIANS B of M

That's good advice Egbert—most times. But Egbert knows, too, that there are times when borrowing—and lending—can be good business.

By operating his own savings account at the B of M during the past four years, Egbert has found out plenty about financial matters. He's got to know his B of M manager pretty well, too. He's talked over his future plans with him many times and knows that his B of M manager is a good friend—a wise financial counsellor.

That's why Egbert says, "A good banking connection is a 'must' for success."

Robin Godfrey Plays

Tuesday evening the UC Players' Guild presented the Robin Godfrey plays. The parents of the late Robin Godfrey, a former student at UC who was killed overseas, have awarded two prizes each year for the best plays written by students.

The first, It's No Trouble, a Vignette in one act by Kenneth Jarvis, is a day with the Baxters interrupted by a visit from the husband's father and mother. Add to this a squalling infant, and you will probably guess who proceeds to take full charge of the baby and to do a bit of necessary housework. The play suffers inasmuch as all the characters leave the room at the same time on two different occasions, and it is truly a "Vignette" since there is no satisfactory ending.

Donald Davis gave a polished performance as Len Baxter, Jenny Klats, as his wife Nell, was by contrast strictly inferior.

It was most apparent why Money For Jam, by Hugh A. C. Shaw, was awarded first prize. The first scene takes place in the London flat of Roy Guillerman (excellently portrayed by Ted Follows), on V-J Day. Present are his sister, Betty, played by Janet Webster; a friend, Bob Carlton, played by Alvin Shaw, whose lack of English accent and mannerisms was most disappointing; Derek Winters, effectively handled by Ronald Grant. As an amateur palm reader, Bob predicts that in five years Roy will be married and Mary divorced. Roy and Derek immediately wager £50 each that Bob will prove wrong.

Prof. Freeman presented an award to Alvin Shaw as the person who had contributed the most to the Players' Guild this year. Mr. Godfrey presented awards to actors Frances Halpenny and Ted Follows for the outstanding performances of the evening.

Moiseinitsch TSO

For his interpretive radicalism and his departure from conventional norms of tradition, British pianist Benno Moiseiwitsch has been something of a prophet on the concert stage. This week at Massey Hall, Benno Moiseiwitsch was more radical than ever in his performance of Beethoven's third Piano Concerto in C minor with the Toronto Symphony Orchestra directed by Sir Ernest Macmillan.

Possessed with a flawless impeccable technique, the pianist was in control throughout the entire work. But that same control achieved a cool nonchalance. Departure from conventionals leads often leads to freshness and uniqueness of approach, but more often to distortion, perversion and infidelity. Such was the case in the Moiseiwitsch rendition of the C minor work. In spite of a vivid eclectic touch, limpid leggero passages and phenomenal articulation, his performances of a spirited climatic composition was strangely anti-climatic and classic in restraint. Where there should have been abandon (first movement) there were supreme control.

The second movement fared worse. In the langorous tempo of the chord progressions, although flawlessly performed, he perverted the basic rhythm—the note-to-note linkage intrinsic to the theme which accordingly was lost. Add to this a too sudden transition from this Largo to the final movement, Rondo, and structural unity of the concerto fall apart.

Benno Moiseiwitsch was at his best in the cadenza as a virtuoso insofar as it is self-contained and bears only a thematic relation to the concerto. I doubt that the composer would have recognized his own concerto as interpreted by the pianist. He substitutes delicacy and fragility for strength and vitality. He plays Beethoven in the style of Mozart with fantastic results.

In the Overture Bacchanale (Venusberg Music) from Wagner's Tannhauser, the TSO achieved a performance of great magnitude. Sir Ernest welded all sections into an effective whole-set forth mood and melodrama of Wagner's opera. In Roy Harris' one-movement Symphony No. Three conductor and orchestra drew from this modern experiment music of intrinsic worth not only in development but in memory and form, culminating in the bizzare cymbal clash. The orchestra, in precision spirit and integration, rose to rare heights with Peter Warlock's four-part Capriol Suite, a modern treatment of the 18th century suite.

Health's A'Poppin '50

Health was popping all over Hart House theatre last night.

The larger schools and colleges in the happy position of being able to pick and choose the cast for their shows. Health's A'poppin distinguished itself by individual talent, but almost everyone of the 'fizz edders' had a hand in the show, and what man can do by sheer effort, they did.

What the skits and the entr'-acts out, the jokes were neither original nor particularly funny. Snappy dialogue is not the P & HE forte and parts of the first half of the show faltered and even limped a little.

What the skits and the entr-acts lost however, the dancing and choral work more than made up for. The choreography as directed by Margaret Hudson, was imaginative and very well executed. It was interesting to watch both for their variety and originality. One of the numbers deserves special mention, a toyland scene in which the toys come to life and dance for two little girls. Donnie Paff was the choreographer for this one. The singing chorus too did a yoeman's service. Under the direction of Pat Watson, it served as a fine musical background for many of the numbers.

Substituting canned music for Bob Cringan is not usually a good idea. It is doubly hard to pick up cues from recorded music. In a skit about an elephant that hatched an egg, however, not only the voices were recorded. The actors mouthed their words in almost perfect time as the sound track carried on. It was a neat trick.

Part of the longer production numbers consisted of a tumbling act by Harold Bee and George Nick. This was impressive; they manoeuvered themselves single handed into positions that looked impossible without a block and tackle. Bee appearing again in an entr'act nonchelantly walked about the stage on his hands hopping up and down stairs, all this without losing his balance. He even managed to support himself upside down on nothing more than one finger of his right hand.

Health's A'poppin is good as a P & HE show; it seems suitable somehow. I felt healthy just watching it.

Looking Backwards

Mid-Century Highlights

THERE'S NOTHING NEW UNDER THE SUN

This year The Varsity has been blessed with a clever sports editor and some very enthusiastic assistants. But it was not always so. The Varsity Files of 1905 indicate that one Ossip Orfendorf held the position that year. Now Ossip was a prince of a fellow but he was not quite up on his sports. Being a theology student he could rhyme off the batting average of the major and minor prophets with great ease but when it came to campus sports, Ossip did not know his athletics from a hole in the ground.

Ossip, the prince of a fellow he was, did his own leg work. He spent so much time in locker rooms it was unusual for Ossip to cover a jaina match, a mah jong tournament an interfaculty debate, an S.C.M. meeting, a junior ladies' Graeco-Romanno-holes-barred donnybrook and a Varmint derby at a campus lunch shop.

Ossip is best remembered for his vigorous campaign to have P.T. credits granted to students who travelled the Yonge Street car line. He based this recommendation on personal experience. It is interesting to note that Ossip after one particularly grueling trip, arrived at The Varsity in an inspired, although dishevelled condition and proceeded to write down the notes and lyrics to the now popular, "Cry of the Wild Goose."

Another innovation introduced by Ossip was the much favoured game of Drop the Handkerchief. Although it is not enjoying popularity today it still lingers. It is said that if one is on the back campus on a bright moonlit night before the spring equinox, one may glimpse spectre players still engaged in this lighthearted pastime, as in days of yore. One's nostrils are assailed by the delicate fragrance of the magnolia-scented handkerchief with which Ossip introduced the game. The thrill experienced on such an occasion is comparable to visiting an empty theatre or to falling down an open manhole.

Another conspicuous first introduced by Ossip was mobile bed pan units for six-day bicycle racers. He suggested the equipment be mounted on a side-car. Although this would impede the speed of the participants it would surely relieve a great deal of nervous pressure.

Ossip became so wrapt in athletic events that it finally proved his undoing. While sitting in the gallery of Convocation Hall attending a jecture Ossip's imagination got the better of him. He pictured himself on the upper deck of the Hart House pool and after several practice poses, executed a perfect full gainer into the third row.

He was buried early in April under the planking of the Zoo lab and to this day contributes his two scents worth.

mission. In this way the mother would not be directly responsible for the outcome.

Returns In June

Syl Dirk is not staying long at U. of T. however; as he is returning to Peru in June. He and his fellow linguists hope to build a school to educate the natives about the rest of the world. They find that the Indians are already interested in the Christian religion, and those who can speak Spanish are very capable and wish to help in the mission.

The students of U. of T. wish Syl every success in his work, and if any are interested in learning more about the natives of Peru, they might visit the museum and see the native custumes and other articles which Syl hopes to put on display before he goes.

H-Bomb Problem

Editor, The Varsity:

Re your editorial, "The Common Enemy", who is putting the cart before the horse on the H-Bomb problem; You implied it is those who are circulating the "Ban the Bomb" petition.

Many who are approached to sign this petition say, "Isn't our government doing all it can to have the bomb outlawed?" Our government is one of the supporters of the Baruch Plan for Atomic Control. If we examine this Plan carefully as Prof. Blackett does in his book, "Fear, War and the Bomb" we see that it offers immediate ownership and inspection of all atomic facilities and raw materials but postpones outlawing and destruction of the bomb indefinitely. As Blackett remarks, if the situation was reversed we would not accept the Baruch Plan with any more enthusiasm than the Russians do.

Walter Lipmann pointed out last week that the Baruch Plan was based on the assumption of the U.S. monopoly of the bomb and so it is out of date. Sulzburger of The New York Times said, Feb. 14, "The United States must abandon the Baruch conception of the atomic control and face with the Soviet Union the task of finding a new solution."

In view of all this and the fact that the Russians have made concessions (they no longer oppose inspection as long as it comes simultaneously with destroying the bomb), it seems to me that it is high time that our government, as an interested power, should press for a new agreement in the U.N., one which has in mind the outlawing and controlling of the bomb immediately. The fear created by both sides racing to make the most bombs is not conducive to peace, clear-thinking or passing exams!

As far as I know our government is making little or no attempt to settle the question on any basis except those put forward by Mr. Baruch. If Prof. Blackett's criticisms are correct, then it is time our government sat up and took notice. By signing the "Ban the Bomb" petition we notify our government that we want a new solution, that we want the Bomb outlawed and controlled now and not at some indefinite time in the future.

editor on the question of advertising, it would be a mistake to put such an unwritten law down on paper. Thomas stated "we are actually binding the editor so he can't possibly remove ads if he can't get in touch with the business manager."

Hetherington denied the motion was one of no-confidence. In terming the editor's "threat to resign" an adolescent attitude, he urged the Council to consider the "serious implications" of such an attitude. "My personal feeling," he said, "is one of strict censure to the people who have threatened to resign."

No "Threat" Before

Fillmore stated that Hetherington's criticism was unjustified. "We have been criticized before by the SAC," he said, "without threatening to resign." He called the question "a matter of principle important enough for us to make a stand on."

Women's Editor Joan Eddis denied the resignation of the editor was a threat to the council. "The resignation does not take effect for two weeks," she said, "and thus does not affect The Varsity this year."

Thomas' motion to have the motion in question rescinded was defeated 13-3 with Trinity, Physio, SPS, Meds men and women, Forestry, St. Mike's women, Nursing, St. Hilda's Institutional Management, Dents, UC men and Vic women voting against it.

Voting in favor of the motion were Vic men, UC women and Emmanuel. Those abstaining from voting were Wycliffe, Knox, Music, OT, Law, Architecture, OCE, Social Work and St. Mike's men.

faculty in organizing national activities.

USNSA Pays Five

When asked by Dick Seldon, III Vic, whether other national student unions pay similar sums to support a national secretariat, Seldon replied that he was not sure of the exact figures. However, he estimated the United States National Student Association must spend at least $50,000 to maintain its secretariat. He said the USNSA has five full-time officers, including its president, who is a student who stops his schooling for one year to handle his job.

The present six cent per capita fee is supplimented by a fixed fee of $70 paid by each member university. It is now called a travel pool levy and roughly covers the cost of the annual national conference.

Fees Have Varied

The per capita fee paid from the founding of NFCUS in 1926 to 1933 was ten cents per student. In the next two years it was reduced to first seven and then five cents, because of depression-caused difficulties. After the war the fee was set at five cents and then the present fee was established in 1947.

The motion moved by the committee last night is in line with a resolution adopted at the September, 1949, national conference of NFCUS, urging member universities to "work towards" an increased fee.

Local NFCUS Committee Chairman Tom Symons reported last night that University of Montreal students have urged the adoption of a $1.00 per capita fee. "This does seem a bit high," he added.

Blue Line Brawn

Here is the defense pair that's been burning up the league on the Varsity Blue-line patrol. Bun Hayes, left, knocks the onrushing forwards off their feet as they skate in on goal, while Porky McDougall has been the outstanding puck-carrier from the deep spot.

Queen's, Blues At Arena Tonight Ernie Fry Is Back On Left Wing

By MAL CRAWFORD

It's Senior Hockey night at Varsity Arena tonight, with the Blues at home again and Gene Chouinard's Golden Gaels kicking up the storm. The Queensmen were country cousins for the Blues in the first part of the season, but gave them the scare of the year in the last period at Queen's two weeks ago, when two third period goals by Murray and Hews cut Varsity's lead to one goal in the 4-3 win. Queen, like Detroit Red Wings, (hardly an apt illustration, we admit) appear to be a one line team. Then first line of Don Murray, Chuck Hews, and Ron Kemp carry about 90% of the load. When the Blues last went to Kingston, that line got all three of Queen's goals. Don Murray, one of the smoothest operating centres in the league, got two of them himself. Outside of this line, the tricolor has little to flap about, except Norm Urie's goaltending.

Ernie Frey will be back in uniform again for the first time since the McGill game at Montreal, the first game of the season, when he was skated off into the end boards and broke his leg. He has been switched to left wing, from right, where he played all last year. Bob Zazos will be at centre and Phil Arrowsmith on the right side.

Bun Hayes may not be playing tonight, due to a sprained ankle sustained in the practice Tuesday in a collision with Don "Wally" Campbell. Jim (that's "Bun" for short) is scheduled to line up in his usual spot alongside John McDougall, but in case he can't stand the gaff, Digby will be moved back to defence and Art Bell put on his wing. Campbell didn't get off quite so easily. The first part of his anatomy to hit the ice was his head, and falling from his height, that can be quite a blow. He has been with the club as an all-round utility player, and will probably be out for the rest of the season. The guys say they're going to win this one for "Wally."

Schuss-Boomers Head For McGill Winter Carnival

Twelve colleges will be represented at the McGill Winter Carnival this weekend. Varsity won the competition at Dartmouth earlier this year and chances for a repeat performance at the Carnival look promising, since lack of snow has prevented other teams from getting the jump on Varsity in practices.

Jumping is being run off at Cote de Neige in Montreal; downhill on the St. Sauveur Downhill; cross-country also at Sauveur; and slalom on Hill 70.

Representing Varsity on the downhill and slalom team are Arch Jones (captain of the ski team), Jim Wait, Bob Hutcheson, and Ian Rogers. For jumping and cross country, Pere Berg, Tom Anderson, Odd Michaelson, and Dave Hewson make up the team.

Rugged Contest As Skule Icemen Beat Forestry 3-1

On Wednesday, Junior Skule downed Forestry A's 3-1 in one of the roughest contests seen at the Arena this year. Tempers flared several times throughout the match and twice fist fights broke out. SPS broke into the lead in the first period when McFarland scored while Forestry was short-handed, and a few minutes later Zajicek was credited with the Skulemen's second goal when the puck bounded in off a defenseman.

In the second period both teams paid more attention to hockey and the game settled down to a close checking duel. About half way through the final stanza, Tovey made it 3-0 for Skule, and two minutes later Keenan tallied Forestry's only marker.

By virtue of this win, SPS Juniors now move into round two of the playoffs where they encounter St. Mikes A on Monday at 9 p.m.

Intermediate Blue Ice Aces Squeeze Past Western 4-2

London, Ont., Feb. 15—(Staff)—University of Toronto Intermediate Hockey Club have as good as cinched their fifth straight league title by virtue of a 4-2 win over Western Seniors on Wednesday at London. The Londoners managed to hit the twine first at 3:40 of the first canto but the Lifemen came back strong to notch two before the period ended. Little Al Conboy netted the first of his two goals at 7:12, followed at 15:55 by Long John Lickley. Black Jake Raftis collected the sole penalty of the period.

In the second period the play was close with neither team able to hit the net until 12 full minutes had elapsed and Bill "Captain Harry" Paterson dented the manila at 12:04. Both teams played it close to the vest in this period.

Third period play continued in the same vein as neither team wanted to take a chance. Gossage managed a score for Western at 15:13 and Coach Jack Life almost died of heart failure as the big Londoners continued to press hard and the issue seemed to be in doubt. Finally at 19:30 Al Conboy slipped the disk past goalie Hainsworth to put the game on ice. Two penalties were meted out to each side in this period; Bartlett and Gossage collecting them for Western while Lickley did it all by himself, twice, for Varsity. Wally "Axeman" London managed to avoid the sinbin for the first time in several tilts.

Line-ups and scoring:

Western—Goal, Hainsworth; defense, Fewster, Cork; centre, Phillips; wings Schiller, Carson; alternates, J. Avery, D. Avery, Gray, Gabor, Gossage, Black; Bartlett, Williams, Riggin (sub-goal).

Toronto—Goal, Carl; defense, Allen, London; centre, P. Gawinski; wings, McLoughlin, Conboy; alternates, Raftis, T. Gawinski, Wolf, Lickley, Paterson, Gauthier, Seltzer (sub-goal).

Officials — Harry Rockey and Clare Van Horne.

Femmes Display Form With Golden Gals

The women's all-Varsity hockey squad play their first game today, Friday, when they face-off against Queen's at 4:30 in the arena. Enthusiasts should arrive early, as chances for good seats for late-comers are slim. You need no money, no A. T. L., and no ticket, and rumours are that it's the best free show on the campus.

Ferne Watson, who sparked last year's team, by getting nine goals in one game against McGill has, graduated but Alison Jeffries, her able teammate, will be back to dazzle the crowd with her sparkling stick-handling. Irene Hain, a steady player on the last year's squad, and Barb Weatherhead, will be back to play their terrific game on the forward line. PHE's Jane Macklin starred on the defence last year and from the looks of the pro-type hockey she has been playing on the intramural line-up, has lost none of her skill on defence.

The line-up will be as follows: Forwards: Alison Jeffries, Vic; Di Rogers, Vic; Laura Fletcher, Trin; Irene Hain, Meds; Barb Weatherhead, Vic; Irma Bullock, PHE; Alice Jamieson, PHE; Betty Jane Fraser, St. Mike's; Jean Gillan, UC; Defence; Elva Rampton, PHE; Jane Macklin, PHE; Nancy Cannon, PHE; Donna Jaley, PHE. Mary Macpherson, PHE, will be wearing the pads.

This is the performance of the year. Don't miss it.

Intermed Cagers Down Agg's 57-29 Blues Edged 67-32

Barry Lowes Intermediates waxed red-hot at Hart House Saturday night as they virtually trampled Ontario Agricultural College 57-29 in a league game.

The Intermediates just couldn't do a thing wrong as they outdribbled, out-passed, out-checked, out-faked, out-shot and just about out-everything the unfortunate Aggies. The boys rolled up 35 points in the first half while holding the opposition to 7. In the second canto the Blues eased up a little and allowed the Aggies to score 22 points.

Al Cole racked up 13 for the Blues followed by Big John MacKenzie with 10, Al Brown with 9, Bruce Rogers with 8, Frank Denton and Ken Brown with 6 each and Al Stevenson with 5. Switzer was high for the Farmers with 6.

Taking their cue from the Intermediates, the University of Rochester hoopsters tossed in 67 points to 32 for the Senior Blues. The Yankees were wizards with the set shot, making almost sixty percent of their shots. They held Toronto to two field goals and six free throws in the first half. Judd Gibbs was high for Varsity with 8. Mohlar and Lennox hit for 18 and 16 for U. of R.

Sportswoman

PHE shared the intramural honours with Trinity in badminton. Pat Montgomery, PHE, took the individual championship by defeating Mary Matthews, Trin., in a close playoff, lasting three games of exceptionally fine badminton.

The intercollegiate team for the meet at Queen's consists of Pat Montgomery and Mary Matthews on the singles teams, Jane Matthews, Trin., and Ruth Nethercott, Vic., are on the doubles.

Jane Timmins, St. Mike's, looked a sure thing for the intercollegiate team, but she is playing on the all-Varsity basketball squad and an athletic ruling states that one girl may play on only one intercollegiate team at a time.

Hockey

Vic I gave St. Hilda's a 6-0 wallopping in the arena last Wednesday. Di Rogers led the scoring by performing the hat-trick; Alison Jeffries chalked up two goals, and Jan Martin one.

—ATHLETIC NIGHT ADVANCE—

This week Athletic Night features the Queen's Golden Gaels against the Blues while the intermediates take on West End Y. The intercollegiate gym meet will also be run off. As usual for the early birds 600 tickets will be on sale at the door. Queen's in their last outing with the Blues won a close 57-55 overtime decision.

"B" Buttery Boys Down Dents 3-0 In Ice Playoff

Yesterday Trinity B's defeated Dent's B's 3-0 in the replay of Monday's 4-4 draw. Led by Mike Creele and Doug Andison who figured in all three goals, the Trinity crew showed a great deal more drive than in their last game with the Dentsmen when they blew a three-goal lead. A great deal of credit for the shutout goes to the Buttery Boys defence, which, led by John Gray, played a standout game back of the blue line. Creel and Brooks scored for Trinity in the initial frame, while Andison did the honours in the last period. On the whole the game was fast and cleanly played, with neither team receiving a penalty.

Trinity now has the unenviable task of meeting Sr. Vic today at 12:30 p.m.

Vic Debating Team Makes Clean Sweep

Vic debaters won every prize offered at a Debating Tournament held at McMaster University last Thursday, Friday and Saturday. Six colleges from Ontario, Quebec and New York State competed in the debating and public speaking.

Each team debated four times on the resolution "That Canada should join the United States in an economic union." The Vic negative team of George Slater, III Sci, and Roy Neehall IV Hist. and Lang. were the winners of the tournament, while Harry Green, IV Pol Sci and Stan Kurisko, IV Pol. Sci. of the Vic affirmative team were the runners-up.

Talking on "Why I like crime comics," Green won the Impromptu Public Speaking contest and Neehall came second telling why he thought the women's place is in the home. The prizes were awarded to Bishop's College, however, since the judges didn't want to give two prizes to the same contestants.

The Vic team arrived at McMaster Thursday afternoon and after dinner went to a Mock Parliament which was discussing the influence of the U.S. on Canadian culture. It was decided by a vote of 22-13 that the influence was bad.

There were four rounds of debates on Friday, followed by a reception in the Women's residence given by Dean Bates. There were basketball games in the evening and an inter-year McMaster Drama Festival.

Final debates and public speaking were held Saturday morning, followed by a banquet given the visiting teams by the McMaster Debating Society. Prof. S. Simonson of State Teachers College, Fredonia, N.Y., spoke on "Words are dynamite".

The four Vic debaters were chosen from over 80 students who participated in the Thomson Impromptu Debates held last term at Vic. The four will debate at the "Senator's Debate" in March, and the two winners will be given the Thomson Cups.

Third War Inevitable Says Army Staff Chief

"I agree that the Third World War is inevitable, but I would like to be convinced otherwise," said Major-General Churchill C. Mann, guest speaker for the Hart House Debate, Wednesday night. The resolution facing the debaters is that the House is of the opinion that a third world war is inevitable.

Major-General Mann, well-known across Canada for his equestrian ability, was Chief-of-Staff, under General Crerar, of the First Canadian Division overseas. On his return from Europe he was appointed Vice-Chief of the Canadian Army General Staff in Ottawa, which position he held until his retirement in June, 1949.

General Mann received his secondary school education at the Royal Military College. After graduation he came to Toronto to work for Canada Life Assurance. While there he was a member of the Governor General's Horse Guards for four years. In 1939, with the rank of captain, Mann attended the staff college at Camberley, England.

At the outbreak of World War II he was appointed to the staff of the First Canadian Division and landed in Europe with General McNaughton. He remained overseas until 1945 when he returned to take his post in Ottawa.

Wednesday evening Major-General Mann will be the guest speaker at the Hart House Debate which has as its topic the opinion of the House on the inevitability of the outbreak of World War III. For the affirmative, H. M. Politsky, IV U.C. and G. J. Wetstein, IV U.C. will attempt to prove the inevitability of another world conflict. Opposing them will be Norm Endicott, IV Vic, and George Slater, IV Vic. The speaker of the house will be J. E. F. Hastings, III Meds.

In the affirmative position H. M. Politsky, IV U.C., said last night that the logical examination of the facts would appear to lead to the inevitability of a third world war; but, "if we let our attitudes and actions rule us we can prevent it (the war) by not antagonizing the opponents."

Norm Endicott, IV Vic, said war is man-made. "The possibility of peace rests in peoples' universal desire for peace which has been a necessity because of atomic or H-bomb warfare."

MAJOR-GENERAL MANN
". . . like to be convinced."

For Those Who Pass

Exams start soon (shocking to hear it, eh?) and after exams comes graduation. At least that's the way some students manage to work it. For those who do it that way, Torontonensis Editor Bill Raymond (third from left) and his staff are now busy putting the final touches to the 1949-50 edition of the yearbook. Shown helping Raymond are Joan Wilkinson, Diana Cook, Marg. Cole, Muriel Melville, and Betty Jean Freel.

Students Aghast At UWO's Gaming

Montreal, Feb. 20. — (CUP) — Gambling is being cracked down on at the U. of Western Ontario.

Many students have voiced complaints that common rooms are being used as card dens. A Gazette reporter found this to be the condition in one common room. He wrote, "Smoke from cigarettes filled the air." It is also rumoured that an evil game, by name, "Liar's Dice" is being played. Authorities are investigating.

There have been no such insances at the University of Toronto, although there was a little dowdiness around the time of the "Sunday Sports" Issue.

Messages Pour In Supporting Stand On Text Discounts

Reports are flowing in to the Students' Administrative Council indicating most other Canadian university student bodies are solidly behind the University of Toronto Book Store in its demand for the right to allow students discounts on texts. Several campuses have reported their support of this university to publishers who have refused to allow discounts on their books.

Vancouver, Feb. 20 — (CUP) — Students at UBC are being urged to buy no more books from three Canadian publishers because of the boycott of the U. of T. book store.

In a letter to the Macmillan Company of Canada Ltd. and Nelsons Ltd., Jim Sutherland, president of the student's council told the companies that "we will urge students, wherever possible to buy no books from your firm or from Oxford Press and Nelson's Ltd."

This letter was prompted by letters from the publishing houses stating that the Student Council of UBC did not have the complete story of the boycott of the University of Toronto Press.

Don't Nobody Laugh

It may come as a shock to many Toronto co-eds, but the engineers, at heart, are shy. However, they have the best hearts for marriage even if a little prodding is necessary, and those women interested should investigate the possibilities of the engineering profession. Such according to The Wall Street Journal, is the opinion of Dr. James Bender, director of the National Institute for Human Relations. Want to learn how to use a slide rule, girls?

Paris Reports

No Place Like It

Paris—(Special)—The University of Toronto in particular, and Canadian universities in general, are well represented this year in Paris.

Exact figures are unavailable, but twenty-five would be a good estimate of the number of undergraduates and recent graduates of Varsity, currently enrolled at the University of Paris.

The Canadians do not form a single group but are scattered throughout various faculties and institutions, just as their individual Parisian "homes" are scattered throughout the city. As a result, there is little social contact among them. Last fall, when they were arriving, there was a strong tendency among the Canadian students to seek out each other's company and to frequent the same restaurants. But, as their knowledge of French, of Paris and of Parisians broadened, they have drifted apart and their "colony", as such, no longer exists.

Now, with the academic year well advanced, they meet as a body only once a week. An organization called "Jeunes France - Canada," with meetings the first Thursday of every month, provides an opportunity for Canadians and young French people interested in Canada to become acquainted. Programs consist of discussions of Canadian life, and French and Canadian travel movies.

At these meetings, Torontonians and others from Ontario have a numerical edge over the rest of the Canadians. The provinces of Quebec and British Columbia come next, with the Prairies and the Maritimes having a few representatives. The Canadians, at these gatherings, are a friendly group—a contradiction of the reputation held by Torontonians, especially, for coldness.

A wide variety of reasons brought the Toronto students here. Some are doing advanced graduate study; some are doing the work of their third year in the U. of T. Faculty of Arts; and some—well there's no place quite like Paris.

The young "grand old man" of the Torontonians is Rudy Nicoletti. A set designer with the Navy Show during the war, he took his Navy discharge in Europe and is now finishing a four-year Paris course in stage design. He has created sets for three plays already seen in Paris, and is currently working on another.

A second Torontonian of long standing at the Maison Canadienne is John Flinn. Now in his third year here, he is preparing a doctorate thesis.

Many members of the 1949 graduating class of the University of Toronto decided to spend their first post-graduate year at the University of Paris. From University College have come Mary Innis, Mary Thompson, Joan Christie, Tom Sloan and Rowly Burray. The St. Michael's College graduates studying here include Nancy Cormack, Marianna Thompson, Theresa McDonagh, Mary Nowak and Pierre Falquet, a Parisian whose brother, Louis, also took his Bachelor of Arts degree at Toronto last year. Susan Burgess and Peter Boys, 1949 graduates of Trinity College, are acquiring valuable experience as assistant teachers in high schools, while keeping up their individual programs of study.

Among the undergraduates are Jack Weitzman, who has completed third year Modern Languages at University College, and will enter Fourth Year in the fall; James Peters, University College, who has been granted permission to take his Third Year in Modern Languages at the University of Paris; and others.

Travelling to other parts of Europe has been the Canadians' favourite method of spending university vacations. At Christmas, the ski resorts, particularly in Austria, were much favoured. One large group of students went on to Vienna. On their return to Paris, they were so loud in their praise of the Viennese cuisine and the city's low prices that many of their compatriots plan similar trips for the spring. But in this Holy Year, Rome will be the Easter-time goal of by far the largest number of the Canadians. With two weeks free, some intend visiting France's Cote d'Azur, on the Mediterranean, while others will head for southern Spain, to attend Seville's famous Holy Week ceremonies.

The Canadians' reactions to French university life vary. Some find it stimulating; others are frankly disappointed by it. The framework of the educational system here differs radically from that of most provinces of Canada, and few French students seem to be able to describe it with any degree of clarity. There being little or no coordination between French and foreign universities, the few degrees toward which a Canadian or American is allowed to work are, students say, not recognized in North America. Accordingly, most graduate arts students in Paris take courses in French civilization, or prepare theses for the "doctorate of the university"—roughly the equivalent of the Canadian degree of Master of Arts, according to those students.

There's Still A Chance

In the Western world politicians and statesmen have signified that they are deeply aware of their responsibility to humanity. To us this awareness seems to be a new quality in the A-bomb and H-bomb possessors.

Following Mr. Churchill's proposal for talks among heads of the Big Three on atomic and peace measures, Senator Tom Connolly, Chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee and member of the Joint Congressional Committee on Atomic Energy, has suggested a get-together with Russia. Harold E. Stassen suggested that President Truman take the initiative in the matter. In England there is, we think, no real opposition to talks with Russia.

But what about Russia herself? Harrison E. Salisbury, New York Times' Moscow Correspondent, writes that Russia would perhaps welcome an examination of the problem.

In Ottawa there seems to be little optimism. The feeling, apparently, is similar to that of U.S. Secretary of State Acheson's, that four years of experience have proved agreements with Russia worthless unless based on strength and backed by force.

We cannot accept Acheson's and Ottawa's opinion as valid. Hundreds of years of experience have proved that power politics do not effectively solve international differences.

We agree with Ottawa that Moscow is intent on spreading communism throughout the world and is convinced that sooner or later capitalist powers are going to resist the spread of communism by means of war.

We believe that the onus lies on the Western powers to prove to the Russians that they are wrong. Our politicians must show they are sufficiently convinced that the advisability of following our way of life will stand up by itself. It needs no H-bomb to defend it against communism. We, for our part, must show that they are right by making our democracy work.

One of the first steps that must be taken to show our unfaltering beliefs in our principles is to exhibit a willingness to at least discuss major problems such as atomic control with the Russians. One of the worst things we can do is to sell ourselves and our principles short by using and depending on means of war.

We know that even if talks are resumed, chances are at least 100 to 1 that they will be used by both sides to jockey for position in the game of power politics.

Though this is true, let us not pass up that one chance to end the cold war that may at any time become too hot to handle.

Big Minds Define Co-Sexual

I was browsing through the local rag looking at the pictures when my hazel-hued orbes (poetic — meaning eyes) fell on the heading: It's Complex but Sex is Rex. Having a mind that has been variously described as depraved, a sewer, trash can, and other more colorful things, I was immediately interested. The article consisted of statements by various personalities as to whether the term "co-sexual" was the proper term to cover the activities of the university today.

From the architectural abortion at Bay and Queen, Hirem McHell'em boomed, "Personally, I'm all against it, but if the students at our fair (and untaxed) institute of higher learning have voted for it, then I'll fight for it!"

Controller Backfire was his usual reticent self but when prevailed upon for 10 seconds, finally erupted like a keg of home-brew: "It's a d---d Communist plot to undermine the moral fibre of our youth. No it isn't, either! It's the result of too much emphasis on sex in schools. I'm putting a motion before the Silly Council to have the staff purged. The books, too — I haven't read them but I'll clean them out. Which reminds me, I haven't taken my Eno's today."

Jack Oo-la-la, president of the U.C. Flit in an unsolicited release, said, "Of course, I can't make any foolish statement without a full meeting of the Flit, but my own personal opinion is that while you can't do away with sex entirely, neither can you do without it altogether. On the other hand, if you're going to get a liberal education then you have to be fair to all."

Stan Fillament (the Bright Boy of the Farcity) commented that student apathy in this respect was apparently not very great. "However, the editorial staff is conducting intensive research on this phase, and we'll have a story soon on some of the more prominent developments around the campus.

From both Whammy Hall and Aimlessly Hall came a similar reaction: it is too harsh a term to apply to the University. There is a curfew in effect at residences,

ISS Objects Given In Talk By Director

"The promotion of international educational understanding and international research is the primary function of the International Student Service" stated Dr. Sigdart Wolontes, General Secretary of ISS, at a meeting held in the Women's Union yesterday.

The objects of ISS are firstly to promote contacts between students and professors, on a personal basis; secondly to provide material emergency relief to educational organizations; thirdly to develop an international information pool for Universities the world over to draw on, and finally, to dispel racial and religious prejudices within the Universities of the world.

An Example

Dr. Wolontes, stressed the situation in South East Africa as typical of disordered educational systems. In the Dutch areas of Indonesia the Universities had been adequately supplied for only three years after the war, leaving freshmen students unaccomodated. In the Republican pentaes there is a lack of laboratories and scientific equipment and practical, economical assistance is not available. University students in Indonesia have been teaching primary and secondard schools to the detriment of their own studies. Economical difficulties are predominant due to political differences, thus students are living under inferior conditions in order to pay their tuition. If ISS succeeds in rectifying this situation it will be recognized as a relief organization living up to its motto "Help to Self Help."

ISS was inaugurated in 1921 as a material emergency relief organization. It endeavored to develop quality, not quantity in the Universities of the World. A program to develop a spiritual as well as intellectual contact with the world outside of the University was begun. Lack of communalism during the last war cut off ISS activities and only recent years have seen ISS operating internationally.

What ISS Means

The meaning of the name International Student Service was defined by Dr. Wolontes. 'Service' is the most significant term of the three and implies practical assistance to those in need of it. 'Student' means University Organization more than Student Organization. 'International' has been considered inadequate and will be changed during the coming year to something more appropriate.

ISS is obviously the answer to the Universities' needs. If European as well as Latin American and Canadian Universities are united in an international network, they will feel a unity of interests and responsibilities.

Some Answers

Dr. Wolontes concluded his talk by asking and answering these four questions: Why should ISS help? Because students who help them-

Marion Walker, production assistant at Hart House Theatre, examines the costumes she has designed for the final production of the year OTHELLO. The play under the direction of Robert Gill opens a week's run on Saturday, Feb. 25th. With Miss Walker are Aila Filpula as Desdemona and Helen Armesto as Emilia.

New Costumes For Othello Hart House Research Result

The other day while we were interviewing Robert Gill about Othello, he told us that Miss Walker, his assistant, might have some interesting background concerning the costumes for the play that opens this Friday. "It's her job to help with rehearsals and to look after props and costumes," he said.

The story of the costumes began when the Keay's Costume Company were out of stock in period costumes for such a play as Othello. They agreed to make the costumes from original designs gratis if someone would do the research on them. In this way, Hart House Theatre only has to pay for the standard cost of rental. At the same time, Keay's add to their costume collection and Othello obtains some specially designed and original costumes.

Miss Walker accepted the challenge to create the costumes which required searching through costume books in the Art and Archaeology department and the University Library. She sorted out reproductions of paintings of Othello's contemporaries such as Mantega, Carpaccio and Belline. By giving herself leeway of a few generations of changes in costume styles, Miss Walker was able to achieve more attractive styles.

With the reproductions as background material, she then had to adapt the styles to suit the personality of the play and combine colours that would adapt themselves to the symmetry and design of the sets.

The hardest thing of all was to find the proper materials. The weighty satins and brocades that were used as clothes when Othello lived, are used as upholstery now.

"Colours were hard to get too, that were replicas of those I found in the reproductions. In some cases we even painted some designs on the material before they were made up," she said.

Miss Walker explained that flannelette didn't have a glossy finish

Urge Federal Aid For Able Students At PC Conference

A motion urging federal aid to "make university education available to those desirous of and capable of such education" was passed at the third annual conference of the Progressive Conservative Student Federation, held in London over the weekend.

First Time Asked

University of Toronto Progressive Club President Tom Symons says this is the first time a national student political organization has urged federal aid to education.

The motion was one of about 40 passed at the conference. There were about 60 others considered, and the University of Toronto delegation, led by Symons, succeeded in having passed the 12 motions it introduced.

Ask University Aid

Another resolution asked other federal aid to universities. Moved by the University of New Brunswick delegation, it requested direct federal subsidizing university medical research.

The conference was attended by student P.C.s from campuses in the main provinces west of the Manitoba border.

One resolution, after urging that students be always allowed the "Basic freedoms of true democracy", added: "Instead of discouraging and forbidding political activity, university authorities and leaders should encourage a realistic approach to public affairs, and not deny students the right to form political groups on their own campuses."

After attacking the federal government's "suppression" of the McGregor combines report, the student politicos resolved that their organization "favors passage of legislation to strengthen combines and monopoly laws to aid and encourage small business."

Want Senate Reform

Senate reform also came under consideration. Symons says the delegates generally felt the Senate is not fulfilling its function, but that an upper house is desirable. In order to set up a Senate that would better reflect the views of the people and take on more work than it does, the conference suggested the upper house be investigated by a joint committee of the Federal Parliament and the legislatures of the provinces.

"Such a joint committee would certainly be something new, but we feel it could work successfully," Symons said yesterday.

Symons chaired a regional meeting of Ontario university P.C. clubs' delegates. The regional

Summer Tour Tickets Here Need Deposit

Students who have registered for passage to Europe this summer at the SAC office may now take the final step on the road to getting their tickets.

These students must fill out application forms by Thursday at either of the two SAC offices on the campus. The steamship companies require a deposit of $50 on each ticket and so a cheque or cash for this amount must be paid.

A choice of return passage on either of two ships is available and all details can be learned at the SAC offices.

Warren Wilkings, III Trinity, who has arranged for the local NFCUS Committee acquiring of these tickets for University of Toronto and other Canadian students, said yesterday about 40 students on this campus have registered for tickets.

He added that he does not expect all of these will now come forward with the required deposit, so that he hopes to have some tickets for other universities. Wilkings organized the venture to get tickets with the idea of getting them for stu-

Moral Base First For World Order —Baha'i Speaker

"To build a new world order, it is first necessary to lay a moral foundation within the individual heart and mind," Mrs. Doris Richardson said at an open meeting of the Baha'i Student Group in Room 64 of University College at 1 p.m. yesterday. "This moral foundation has been given to us by the eternal spiritual truths uttered by all the prophets."

"To-day, however, these moral truths are buried beneath a human sea of dogma, ritual and superstition. It is the purpose of the revelations of Baha'u'llah to wipe

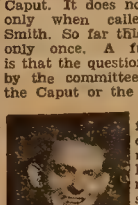
The SAC Story

The Caput Bends An Ear



By JOAN EDDIS

(This is the eighth and last article on the Students' Administrative Council and its many activities.)

The SAC looks after most campus wide student activities but until recently student discipline was entirely out of its hands. Last fall the Student-Caput Liaison Committee was formed in order that the student viewpoint on discipline might be ascertained by the Caput. There are ten people on the committee, five from the SAC and five from the Caput. The SAC representation is comprised of two students, the president and vice-president of the SAC, and three others, the permanent General Secretary and the Associate Secretary of the SAC and one of the two faculty members appointed to the SAC by the President of the University.

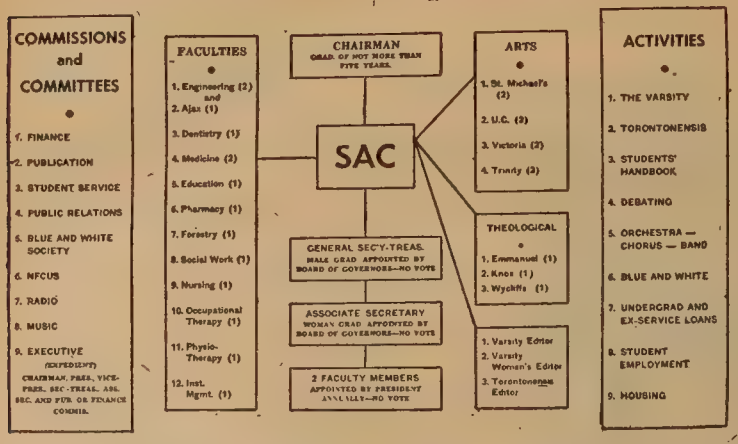
The scope of the liaison committee is limited, for several reasons. It is not an authoritative body but merely a sounding board for the student view point, although it can make recommendations to the Caput. It does not meet regularly, only when called by President Smith. So far this year it has met only once. A further limitation is that the questions to be discussed by the committee are decided by the Caput or the President.

Hetherington

The matters referred to this Student-Caput Committee are purely legislative and not judicial. Thus students have a voice in the drawing up of regulations governing such things as parking on the campus, the use of loudspeakers, and the times when meetings may be held in university buildings. However the enforcement of these rules and the judging of violators are the concern of the Caput alone.

Many students consider the formation of this committee as a step towards giving the students more say in the rules governing their own behaviour. However, the powers governing students are defined in the revised University Act of 1947 and before students could take over their own discipline, the Ontario Legislature would have to amend the University Act.

Until such time as the act is changed, students will have to be content to stick to their own sphere of activities. Elections for next year's SAC reps are almost upon us. In most colleges and faculties the reps are nominated and elected in the hubbub of the elections for their individual societies and councils. The University College women follow the unique practice of electing their SAC representative in the fall. They feel that this system lays due emphasis on the importance of the Council and assures that the woman who represents them will have a full knowledge of SAC activities before she takes over the following fall.



Several colleges and faculties, including Meds and St. Mike's, send the president of their undergraduate body to represent them in the campus student government. In this way a close tie-up is maintained between college and university interests.

The newly elected reps hold a joint meeting with the outgoing reps at the end of the school year. At this meeting the Council president and the commissioners are elected for the following year. Right now it's anybody's guess who will take over the SAC reins from this year's president Bob Hetherington.

See Page 4 for diagram showing SAC activities and functions.

but it drapes nicely and gives a rather rich effect. And besides, they're lighter (in weight), I found out, so the lesser characters won't be too badly after all.

"Although there are thirty-one costumes another difficulty arises when the three pairs of female characters wear the same costumes. It was quite a job to get both girls to fill the same gowns. But with some juggling and squeezing they finally managed to make it pretty well," said Miss Walker.

"But don't forget to emphasize that we have attempted to make the costumes as authentic to their period as possible," she said.

In short, all I learned about the costumes was that the men will wear short tunics while the women and older men will wear long flowing robes which were of a later era.

Watch for Miss Walker's touch in the costuming while you enjoy the production of Othello coming to Hart House soon.

away this sea that divides men so that the essential truth of these teachings may once again be manifest to men," she said.

"The Baha'i World Faith is not a new religion; it is the renewal of eternal religion. Baha'u'llah brings to us the teachings of Christ in their original pristine purity, and adds to them the social teachings for a world civilization. Baha'u'llah and Christ are like two separate lamps each manifesting the same light. Because mankind has evolved and his powers increased, Baha'u'llah has released a new intensity of this light."

"The recognition of the oneness of God, of the oneness of His Messengers, of the oneness of humanity and the need or a set of institutions capable of harnessing these teachings into the service of a world civilization is the foundation of the religion of Baha'u'llah," she concluded.

dents across the country. However, he found it was difficult to arrange things in time, and reports arrived that University of Montreal was working to make their own local arrangements.

At first, few other universities reported how many tickets they needed, but recently more requests have come in.

Wilkings has two other possible sources of tickets for other universities: U.S. student travel services and a possible cancellation of a large order for Cunard Lines tickets by another organization.

Atomic Control

Editor, The Varsity:

Much more is being written in the press about the U.N. deadlock over the control of atomic energy and the possible consequences than about the actual proposals which the U.S. and Russia have made to each other to date. Since talking without information which makes possible an intelligent evaluation of the plans tends to confuse matters, we offer the following information:

The American Plan calls for the control of all atomic raw materials, and all processing of these materials, by a U.N. commission whose work would not be subject to veto.

Not until this commission had surveyed all sources of atomic material in the world, and had established its authority over them, as well as over all atomic plants, would the present stock-piles of atomic bombs be destroyed.

The Soviet government claims that this plan will give the U.S. voting majority in the U.N. a free hand to take over control of all atomic energy BEFORE any steps are taken to destroy existing stocks of bombs. Further, the Soviet expresses the fear that this commission, dominated by the U.S., will obstruct the full use of atomic energy for peace time industrial development.

The Soviet Plan calls for an International Pact similar to the international conventions drawn up against the use of poison gas binding all countries never to use the atom bomb. At the same time all existing stock-piles of bombs should be destroyed.

Simultaneously, the Soviet Plan proposes that an international system of inspection of atomic facilities should be established. The Soviets agree that the day to day operation of this U.N. commission should not be subject to veto, once all existing atomic stock-piles have been destroyed.

The American government claims that this plan does not provide sufficient guarantees that atomic development will be controlled at every stage, and that the United States will not renounce the use of atomic weapons until such guarantees are given.

The U. of T. Peace Council believes that the Canadian Government should press for a solution to the present deadlock in the U.N. so that the Atom and Hydrogen bombs can be destroyed and atomic energy controlled. We do not accept the present U.S. policy of 'power' and no further negotiations with Russia. We are circulating a petition to 'ban the bomb'. An awakened public opinion to the facts of the present deadlock and the seriousness of the situation should the Hydrogen bomb race be allowed to continue any further is the best safeguard for Peace and this is the time when you, as a reasonable citizen, must do your part to achieve that end.

On behalf of the U. of T. Peace Council

Congratulations

Editor, The Varsity:

For what it is worth, may we offer our congratulations on the stand you and your editorial staff took in the policy controversy with the SAC? The position of the SAC was, and is, untenable, and can probably be ascribed to "newspaper know-how" on the part of the members who voted for the motion.

Any reasoning person realizes that the Editor of The Varsity would not unnecessarily make use of his power to "drop" advertisements from an issue. To lay down a hard-and-fast rule that advertisements must not be dropped is to tamper with the rights of the Editor.

The staff of Toike Oike, in common with all Skulemen, engages in the traditional internecine warfare with The Varsity and the Arts Colleges, and reserves the right to do so in the future. We realize that the '49-'50 Varsity has not been the best in history, but it certainly has been far from the worst. Our congratulations to you and your staff on a difficult job well done.

J. J. Brigham,
Editor, Toike Oike.

Speaking of Sport

Editor, The Varsity:

It is not often I am inspired to offer an opinion or criticism of the literary endeavours of The Varsity staff writers, but the time has come, I fear, to "sound off" on one in particular.

We have a column titled "Dnieper on Sport." Methinks his column could just as well bear the name "Dnieper on Everything But Sport," or perhaps "Dnieper Blows His Top on Injustices to University Students."

A sports column should be just that; if Mr. Dnieper has any desire to crusade for the betterment of student life, I'm sure another column situated elsewhere in the paper could be installed. Here the columnist could elucidate on the various evils rampant on the campus. But why must he continually clutter up his sports column with items that have as much to do with sports as a backward Co-ed. Maybe Bob considers crashing the door at Hart House during lunch hour a sport.

I find through the reading of various sports writers that even though they often bring pertinent facts to our attention from fields other than sports, the column itself is usually built around the sporting scene. On the other hand, Bob Dnieper builds his column around everything from Economics to guys named Yumpf.

I am sorry if I've caused any consternation in the sports department; please register this plea as representatvie of many similar opinions.

Morley Wolfe, II UC.

Hart-House Debates

Editor, The Varsity:

Does the H-Bomb discriminate between the sexes?

On Feb. 22nd, Hart House is holding its monthly debate. The question at issue is, "Is war inevitable?", a vital one you will admit. General Churchill Mann, head of civil defense, the guest speaker, will be upholding the affiamative side. We are fully aware that women are excluded from Hart House debates, but we feel that this is of such importance that everyone regardless of sex should have the opportunity of attending and voicing his or her opinion. We, at any rate, would like to cast our vote on this question. Many eminent speakers are brought to Hart House. Are women always to be deprived of hearing them?

We would like to go on record now as saying that we do not believe that war is inevitable, and that it is our responsibility to promote and support the forces and institutions that are working for a peaceful settlement.

Atomic energy control came under the consideration of the national meeting when the delegates asked the setting up of a permanent committee of Parliament to deal with atomic energy policy.

Looking Backwards

Mid-Century Highlights

Ever since the first group of students enrolled at Old King's College the Thespians have been with us. Their endeavours to enrich the cultural life of the University have always received considerable notice in The Varsity. The Varsity files provide a comprehensive history of dramatics on the campus.

The first significant era was inaugurated with a contest sponsored by the Fishwives Choral Society and Parcheesi Club, for the best student written play. The first prizes offered by the ladies was an all-expense trip to Centre Island or a hand-painted, left-handed sugar bowl.

To this contest Arkansas Roberts submitted his original script "A Steamroller Named Passion," the true-to-life story of Mildred Gluckenheimer, girl chimney sweep. Another noteworthy entry was Lemmuel Q. Hammerhead's tragedy "Withering Heights," a clear insight into the mental processes of a mud hen. The musical score for this effort was composed by Horace Voice and especially arranged for zither, glockenspeil and leaky faucet. The prize winning script however was Skeeter McSwat's compelling drama of a young doctor's downfall in the tse-tse infested African jungle entitled, "The Fly is My Undoing."

Another step forward occurred with the introduction of realism to the University stage by Director Robert Gull, in his September presentation of "Fanny by Gaslight." In this little smelleroo the third act calls for the death of the hero by gunplay. So realistically was the action portrayed that Mr. Gull found himself faced with a murder rap to say nothing of the anger of the University Bursar who bitterly complained that the deceased's second term installment was delinquent.

There are those among the alumni who claim that the greatest height ever achieved by campus dramatics occurred with the presentation of "John's Other Schimiel" wherein the heroine, Millicent Coppajaunt, dismisses her lover with the memorable lines, "Go, and never darken my bath mat again."

It is interesting to note that the Dramatic Society's activities often reached the social column of The Varsity. The April 2, 1932 edition of The Varsity carries an account of the back stage party held by the Gargoyle Players after the final night performance of Dostoievski's "Crime and Punishment. (It was their crime and the audience's punishment.) The party was held in the Brawl Room of the Broken Arms and the refreshments, to say the least, were unusual. The guests partook of marinated electric eel from which a big charge was received by all. The leading lady was

Riel

Fort Garry (now Winnipeg) seventy years ago saw a young French-Canadian half-breed upset the political apple-cart with a revolt. He set up a provisional government, himself in command, until tried for treason in 1885 and ingloriously hanged. His name was Louis Riel, his revolt the Red River Rebellion, and like that of William Lyon MacKenzie, his national reputation has been dubious ever since.

This week at the Museum Theatre, the New Play Society relives the half-breed's story, his rebellion and defeat in a cramped but spectacular production of veteran Canadian playwright John Coulter's new three-hour portrait play Riel.

Directed by Donald Harron, Mavor Moore in the rebel's role, Riel does for the half-breed what Bernard Shaw undoes for Joan of Arc. Joan heard the voices of angels. Riel communed with the voice of God. Not the headstrong firebrand of history, Coulter's Riel is drawn in heroic lines. Just as Shaw challenges traditional stereotype in humanizing the Inquisitor and Court, so Coulter confronts us with a man of vision, deep conviction and intelligence.

Mavor Moore caught the essence of these qualities in his portrayal of Riel. He struck the keynote from the first scene with the priest and Mme. Riel, where in refusing to obey the cleric he becomes the dominant character in the play. Mavor Moore endows Riel with a touch of sentiment and whimsy, sometimes indecisive and questionably calm, but at his best in action (Part I. Sc. I) or in delirium (Part II. Sc. 4).

Independent of setting and decor, Riel relies on episode (plot), struggle (action) and people (characterization) for its success. Conflict occurs between Protestant (Thomas Scott) and Catholic (Riel), between Mme. Riel and Marie, Riel and Ottawa (Sir John) and between Riel and the Church (Archbishop Tache). Characters that stood out in sharp relief were Margot Christie as the stinging vehement Mme. Riel, against Bea Lennard's exotic, primitive Marie, Don Harron's crude convulsive Thomas Scott, Ben Gan's canny, stately Sir John MacDonald and Leslie Rubie's crafty portrayal of Archbishop Tache.

Although three hours long and in two parts, Riel moves at a quick pace, enhanced by a continuous liaison de scenes, the episode technique of Shakespeare and Corneille. But Coulter abused it not only in a ceaseless parade of characters, but in using the offstage exit doors, which almost destroyed aesthetic distance, and thus the credibility of the play.

[illegible] direction were few. Riel's speech to the crowd aimed at a [illegible] procedure went astray in the court scene when the attorneys, between witnesses, went offstage.

The dialogue captured the spirit of the times, but like Shaw's, was too often pedantic and verbose. Recitation of dogma drew much from the impact of Riel the megalomaniac. Direct threats to the play's illusion were the Lord's Prayer and Riel's hanging at the end, both offensively real.

John Coulter might well have ended his play at the conclusion of Part I, for what followed was superfluous.

Diamond Lil

Breathing sin and sex from head to foot, fabulous, voluptuous Mae West stars at the Royal Alexandra this week in her own tailored-to-measure vehicle Diamond Lil which opened with a bang. Pushing sixty and looking thirty, the prima donna of seduction stalked and lunged through three acts of melodrama in scintillating gowns of indigo, jet black, beige, and scarlet red that hit the eye like a lightning bolt.

Based on a flimsy plot confined to Gus Jordan's saloon The Bowery where Gus, unknown to Lil, trades in white slavery, Diamond Lil is one continuous caricature from the Bowery waiters to Lil's own seductive role. Sentiment comes in with Dan Matthews, a Salvation Army captain who attempts to reform Lil, but melts before her pseudo-virginal charms. Nostalgia enters in the old-time vaudeville show of the third act. An old suitor, escaped from jail, provides suspense by entering Lil's boudoir and threatening her life. Following Mae's famous Come up 'n' see me sometime, things resolve at the end with the arrest of everyone but the Army captain (a policeman in disguise) and Diamond Lil who close the play in a lusty clinch.

But the plot is but a vehicle for the classic role created by Mae West. Not a mere queen of burlesque, Diamond Lil is a Gay Nineties Cleopatra with Mark Antonies all over the world. Seduction is her trade mark and diamonds her reward. With a platinum-blond pompadour, vulture brows, a flashing eye, and a rolling hip, Mae West snuffs one sparkling line after another as they are fed to her by the rest of the cast.

The tragic under-current, and crudity of the Bowery set off by types drifting across the stage, are glossed over by fast-paced punching dialogue as: "He thinks I am too bad, and I think he's too good"; "I never make the same mistake twice, unless it pays"; "You look like a million dollars"—"And just as hard to make."

Apart from appearances in Catharine Was Great, This Wicked Age, and The Constant Sinner, Mae West has made a career of Diamond Lil. In it she has mastered the technique of seduction, and created a role of skilful showmanship.

toasted with champagne from her own galosh. The more active guests danced to the orchestra of Sammy Schmek and his "Makes-You-Want-to-act-like-a - Schnook Music.

In recent years the most notably successful offering has been the Big City Player's revival of Mutiny in the County." Perhaps the most spirited scene occurs when Captain McCallous, faced the insubordination on the part of crew members, theratens to cut their water off.

Hillel Drama Festival

Three one-act plays were presented by the U. of T. Hillel Drama Society on February 15th at Holy Blossom Temple Auditorium.

Eros At Breakfast (Robertson Davies) embodies a novel concept yet leaves one but wryly amused The cast obviously amused itself but not the uncomprehending audience. I doubt that the cast really had an idea of the abstract, brittle sophistication of its material. Lillian Becker was, perhaps, most properly cast. Joyce Bocknek directed.

Suppressed Desires is a delightful satire on psychiatry and its attempt to dredge up unconscious desires for us to see. Lillian Shrager, who tries this misfortunately on her husband and sister, was properly calculating yet effective, confident and sincere compared to the tongue-in-cheek, condescending amateurism of the others. She also directed.

If the efforts above were little more than a poor average, Saroyan's Hello Out There was a gem. Here is a drama with body and battling dialogue that provides a world of dramatic emotion and sincere acting. Snooky Rosen and Selina Whyne, the superb principals, were amateurs but gave the vignette everything it demanded. They carried across the footlights the lingering, haunting feeling of contrast between the depth of man's emotion and his often hollow perversity. Rosen, Miss Whyne and director Pearl Parnes deserve special commendation.

VIC'S CORNER

It is apparent that activities at Vic have begun to suffer from the idea of coming exams. However, there are a few things of interest still on schedule.

The Music Club At-Home will be this Saturday, Feb. 25, in Burwash. Club members are to pick up their tickets in Alumni Hall, Thursday, Feb. 23, 12-2 p.m.

A Student Composers' Concert, sponsored by the Liberal Arts Club, will be held this Sunday, Feb. 26, 9 p.m., in Wymilwood. The ex says even the "short haired" types will enjoy it. There will be refreshments.

A series o fVocational Guidance is being sponsored by the Alumni Association this week. All male members of the graduating class are invited to attend, in R. 24, Vic. Tentative schedule as follows:

Feb. 20 Dean Lewis—teaching
21 G. Aldridge—social work
22 J. R. Wilson—accounting
23 R. Anglin—journalism
28 J. Grills—merchandizing

Watch the bulletin board for any changes.

The annual tea and dance, sponsored by the VCU Exec., will take place this Saturday, 3-5:30 p.m. in Wymilwood. Invitations aro in the mail to those many people who have assisted the Vic Executives during the year.

Dr. Leslie speaks today, 4 p.m., under SCM sponsorship on topic, "Is Christianity Just Morals?"—Alumni Hall. Don't miss it.

The VCU Elections are in the offing. The vote on March 2 is for: the offices of VCU Exec.; Social Committee; Senior Stick; NFCUS- reps, sect. of the Athletic directorates; Pres. of clubs and societies; and Year Reps for the Assembly.

The March 10 election deals with all other offices including Year Exec's; Treas; curators and year reps on Athletic Directorates; Athletic Sticks; Bob Committee; and Permanent Exec. of 5T0; candidate for Moss Scholarship; offices of clubs and societies.

Nominations for all offices will be accepted now in VCU Office. A list of those nominated for Sr. Stick are now on the bulletin board.

As nominations are placed in the office they will be posted on the Board in order to keep all informed.

The Debating Team from Vic to McMaster came back completely victorious. George Slater and Roy Neehal were named the best team of the whole tournament and also named the best on the negative side.

Stan Kurisko and Harry Greene were named the best team on the affirmative side and second best team in the whole debate.

Harry Greene won the top prize in the impromptu speaking contest.

Six universities and colleges were represented at the session. Main topic for debate was on economic union of Canada and U.S.A.

Mathletics: Sr. Vic hockey team advanced to the semi-finals by beating Trinity last Friday. Next game will be played Thursday, 23rd inst., at 12:30 or 4 p.m. Provable opponents? St. Mike's.

Jr. Vic eliminated Inst. Management last Tuesday and hence played Dent A last night. If they won that game they play in semi-finals on Thursday too.

A Vic squash tournament is now under way. Bob Reid hopes to have a good group lined up for the inter-faculty tournament coming up in near future. In B-Ball, the 4ths and 5ths are still in playoffs.

Gathletics: The Vic Gals' hockey team is slated for the semi-finals. Date to be announced this week. Meantime they go to Acton o nThursday night to play a benefit game against PHE. The game looks like a prevue to the finals in girls' hockey. The results will be interesting. There is no telling what may happen in the finals however, with such a spirited team as ye very old Vic.

Snoopography: The male SAC rep for Vic is Doug Thomas. Short, blond, with an infectious laugh, he's proven himself a capable man on VCU ex as well as on SAC Pub Relations and Blue and White Committees. He graduates in Pol Sc & Ec at 21, might possibly go to Osgoode, but not likely.

Don't forget to vote March 3!

Ballades By Villon

Across the centuries, from the days when a rogue's chief concerns were a pot of wine, a lusty wench, and a warm bed for the night, comes the inimitable voice of Francois Villon, poet, scholar, and scoundrel. A selection of Villon's Ballades, (Longmans, Green & Co.—$2.00) calls to mind this poet of fifteenth-century Paris, who at twenty-two had already killed a man, and who disappeared from history in his thirty-second year.

Mirrored in his verse we find all the turbulence, grossness, and piety of the late Middle Ages. Picturesqueness of detail and quick changes of thought are the salient characteristics in the poetry of this "povre peti escollier", as he calls himself in his epitaph.

But while this poetry is pulsating with life, high and low, sacred and secular, the insistent, underlying theme of death is what makes Villon so arresting a figure. Old age and death, these themes startlingly juxtaposed with the sensual delights of living, produce a distinct shock in the reader. For Villon was haunted by the paradoxical nature of life that turns youthful beauty into ugly senility. And it is a paradox which he never seems to have solved fully.

The present selection, compiled by Andre Deutsch and Mervyn Savill, supplies the French text with English translations on opposite pages. The translations are chosen from those made by Victorian and by contemporary poets, and a curious change in translator's technique is discernible. The Victorians were freer and more ornate in their reproductions, while the moderns follow the text more closely. As a result, the contemporary translations seem to approximate more closely the simplicity of the original.

Not intended for the scholar, this selection of Villon's Ballades, gracefully decorated by fifteenth-century woodcuts, admirably conveys something of the flavour of this lovable poet to the reader whose knowledge of French is limited.

the PHE staff who know at least a bit about the game, and the equipment could be scrounged from the Blue discards. From the number of beefs and inquiries we have received, the school will be well-populated. They could have the odd exhibition with an interfaculty team, and by the time the next season rolled around, some of them might have picked up enough experience to make the intermediates or even the Blues.

Varsity-trained or Varsity-instructed coaches could pay regular visits to the local high schools, and perhaps Bob Masterson might see his way clearly to giving his Blues a day off each week for the same job. It would boost Varsity's stock no end with the young kids and would help give them at least the fundamentals. Sure, it's a lot of work, but we think it is worth it. You can't get good players into Varsity if you don't build them and make friends with them. And by the way, Western does the same with the London schools, and Metras tells us the system has really produced some lasting benefits.

How about it Bob?

University Students Representative Council condemned the action of the Macmillan Company of Canada and its associates in refusing to supply the Toronto book shops with their texts at ten percent discount. A strong letter of condemnation has been sent to the publishing houses.

University of Toronto SAC President Bob Hetherington said yesterday he has received letters from the following universities, indicating their support of the University's stand regarding discounts: McGill; Manitoba; Western Ontario; Saskatchewan; Alberta; Mt. Allison (Sackville, N.S.); Macdonald (Montreal); and Bishops (Lennoxville, P.Q.).

After the SAC has received more letters they will probably use this evidence of support as a basis on which to open up further negotiations with the publishers who have refused to supply books to be sold at discount, Hetherington added.

He will report on response so far to the Council at its meeting tomorrow night.

Only three universities have declined to take any action regarding Toronto's text discount situation: McMaster, Dalhousie and Carleton.

The following universities have not yet replied to the SAC's request for support sent early in January to the various campuses: Ottawa, Montreal, Laval, Queen's and Acadia.

Hetherington sent out the requests after the SAC set up a committee to take action regarding the present impasse, in which the University of Toronto cannot buy Macmillan and Nelson texts at the campus bookstore. The committee consisted of Trinity and St. Mike's SAC reps Tom Symons and Dave Quigley and the editor of The Varsity, Stan Fillmore.

Vic Over Dents SPS Blows Two In Interfaculty

Junior Vic downed Dents A last night 6-4 to advance into the semi-finals. The Vicmen led 3-0 at the end of the first period on two goals by Walton and one by Dover. Dents fought back in the second period as Hurton, Locke, Clumpus and Rondeau scored.

Walton completed the hat-trick by adding another goal. Andrew, who played a steady game on the Vic defence scored two for the Scarlet and Gold.

St. Mike's A whipped Junior Skule 4-2 in a close game and had a hard time doing it. The first period ended in a scoreless tie, but in the second stanza Pat Duffy, McKillop, Kelley, and Baxter scored for St. Mike's while Howard and Cooke retaliated for Skule. The Double Blue now advance into the semi-finals against Senior Vic, who beat the Dents A team.

In the 1:30 game Trinity A upset Senior Skule when they beat the defending champions 3-1 in a very fast game. Trinity deserved the win as they outfought the engineers almost all the way.

The first period was scoreless as both teams missed a couple of sure ones and several good chances. Trinity failed to capitalize on penalties although they had the odd man four times in the period. Ernie Howard opened the scoring for Trinity by rapping home a pass from Leishma at the 4:36 mark. The latter made it 2-0 near the middle of the period and Howard got his second of the game in the last minute of the second stanza to complete Trinity's scoring.

Skule's only counter came off the stick of Cunningham when they were trailing 2-0. Brownell, the Buttery goalie, made a spectacular save on a shot by Don Sawyer of SPS in the hot second, and played a great game all the way. Crerar got two assists on Trinity's last two counters and, with Bowden, put on a good show.

VARSITY SPLITS WITH QUEEN'S

Gaels Take Blues In Last Game 46-34 Luck Sinks Seven

By BRUCE MACDONALD

The Senior Basketball Blues dropped their last scheduled Intercollegiate league game of the year by a 46-34 margin to a hard-fighting Queen's squad in the feature attraction of the Athletic Night at Hart House.

The Blue ship sank for good in the third quarter when McNiven scored 6 baskets in less than 4 minutes on breakaways after he broke up the Varsity passing offensive almost without help. McNiven's 13 points, and the 11 and 8 points hooped by teammates Griffin and Logan respectively were enough to provide the winning margin for the Gaels.

The game saw some ragged ball, with both clubs using the fast break extensively. Play in the first half was divided evenly, and even though the Blues were on the wrong end of a 20-15 score at half time, they seemed to be holding up their end of the battle. When the storm broke in the third quarter and the Blues fell behind by a 16 point margin, there was little they could do to save the day.

Luck Good

Captain Harry Lampman, of Gael football fame, played a good game in the bucket position. Gray and McManus turned in good performances for the Blues, while Ted Luck was high Varsity scorer with 7 points. Doug Kettle, brought up from the Intermediates a week ago, played a good defensive game, particularly in the rebound department, but seems to have trouble scoring as many as he should.

Lineups

Queen's — Soutter 4, Griffin 11, Lampman 2, Bahner 1, Walcot, Elford, McLaughlin 6, Logan 8,, McNiven 13, Weir 1.

Varsity — Gray 6, McManus 6, Braithwaite 1, Bell 2, Kettle 2, Barbour 3, Huycke 3, Henderson 4, Luck 7.

Trinity B's Bow To Senior Vic In Uneven Tilt

In the only game last Friday Senior Vic beat Trinity B's 6-2 in a game that saw the scrappy Trinity team surprise everyone by holding their own with the powerful Vicmen throughout half the match Don Crawford was the big gun for the Scarlet and Gold, bagging five goals while the fine play of Cleverly in the Trinity net kept the contest from turning into rout.

In the initial stanza the Crumpet machine broke into the lead at the three minute mark when Creole lifted a backhander past Prince. Although Vic had the edge in play the determined Trinity club held them at bay until Crawford scored with just two minutes left in the period.

Class Tells

However in the second period class began to tell as the Vic team swarmed all round the opposition goal and Cleverly was called on to make several fine saves. Crawford banged home three more counters. In the dying minutes of the game Red Andison scored Trinity's second goal.

It was a fast game with the first period being especially exciting.

VIC—Goal, Prince; defence, Summers, Strike; centre, Rhame; wings, Horward, Berkinshire; alts., Russel, Crawford, Linton, Farlinger, McKay, Parks.

TRINITY — Goal, Cleverly; defence, McCarter, Brooks; centre, Creole; wings, Bell, Andison; alts., Gray, White, Perry, Fleming, Thomson, Malcolm, Stevenson.

Interfaculty Sports

Trinity's basketball entry won their game with no questions asked from Architecture, downing the builders 50-19. The tall Trinity men had things all their own way practically scoring at will. Gord Montizambert waxed hot throughout swishing 14 with Buck Rogers adding 8. Tilbe with 7 topped the architects.

Line-ups:

Trinity "A": Gaunt 4, Montizambert 14, Hill 4, Brewer 2, Rogers 8, Keen 4, Scrivener 4, Gray, Fisk 4, Corbett 6. Total—50.

Architecture "A": Scott 5, Paterson 1, Delean, Overs, Frazer 2, Daskin 2, Shimoda 1, Koyanagi, Heinonen 2, Tilbe 7. Total—19.

On the minor league front Vic elevenths blew over the UC Hurricanes by a 32-17 count. Field of the Victers showed the way for the winners with 14. Brudner with 11 topped the Hurricane output with 11.

Engineering Business engineered a 34-9 win over Vic ninths with Phillips swishing 16 for the winners. Sheridan with a big three led the red and gold.

Blues Take Gaels In Senior Hockey Porky Gets Star

By MAL CRAWFORD

Opposing teams in general, and Queen's in particular, are pretty soon going to start assigning their whole forward line to cover Porky McDougall in the dying moments of the game. Pork seems to have a propensity for beating Queen's with a goal in the last few minutes of play. In the game with Queen's at Varsity Arena, Friday night, with just over two minutes to play, he caught the upper right hand corner of the net with a screened shot from about ten yards out, to break a tie and give Varsity a 3-2 victory.

Tricolor goalie Norm Urie had fallen in knocking down a drive from the right side by Phil Arrowsmith, and Bob Bazos got the rebound and passed it back to McDougall, who fired it in while Urie was still on the ice.

When the Blues were playing at Queen's two weeks ago, it was McDougall's third period goal that gave them the edge in that 4-3 win. He also got the last goal, with about three minutes to go, on Queen's other visit to Toronto this year. It wasn't his fault it wasn't the winning goal; Varsity was ahead 6-0 at the time.

Gaels Better

Friday's game was the fourth and last against Queen's. How much the Gaels have improved over the season is evident from the scores. The most improved phase of their play seems to be their checking. Though Varsity seems to have the faster skaters, the Queensmen, especially defencemenn Whitelaw and Battochio, were frustratingly efficient in keeping the Blues from scoring. They just lack the organization to score enough to mark up a win.

No Goal

Actually, both teams notched the twine three times. Chuck Hews deked Orr expertly with what might have been the tying shot less than a minute after McDougall had put Varsity ahead in the last period, but the goal was disallowed as Murray was in the crease. It was exactly the same type of play that produced Queen's second goal, also scored by Hews, from Murray — expert stickhandling in close pulling the goalie out of the net. Orr sure knew when this line was on. They were used for as much as ten minutes at a stretch some of the time, and carried the biggest part of the offence.

Fox Gets First

Norm Fox got the first goal of the game, with both his linemates getting assists. They were still on when Keenleyside of Queen's tied it up. Bazos put the Blues ahead again in the same period.

The refs called it very loosely at first. Not until late in the second period was the first penalty given, John Addison earning the distinction. Lawng Jawn must have set himself a league record in this department; all in all he garnered himself 18 minutes in penalties.

Orr Brilliant

Norm Urie deserved a Vezina Torphy plus on Friday's work, and Orr was also brilliant, though he had fewer shots to handle. Both turned back lone rushes successfully. Orr was one of the three stars picked by the Blue and White Society, McDougall and Hews getting the other two. Rich Howson was not picked for a star, but was the Blues' most consistently driving rusher.

Line-ups

Varsity—Goal, Orr; defence, Addison, Kane; centre, Turcott; wings, Moore, Fox; alternates, Bell, McDougall, Howson, Digby, Vernon, Bazos, Arrowsmith, Frey.

Queen's—Goal, Urie; defence, Battochio, McKelvey; centre, Murray; wings, Kemp, Hews; alternates, Montgomery, Wagar, Siy, Whitelaw, Roberton, Gordon, Harley, Keenleyside, Tichke.

First Period

1. Varsity, Fox (Moore, Turcott)
2. Queen's, Keenleyside (Harley) 2:27
3. Varsity, Bazos (Arrowsmith, Frey) 12:45

Second Period

No Scoring.

Penaltie—Addison, Moore.

Third Period

4. Queen's, Hews (Murray) 13.17
5. Varsity, McDougall (Bazos) 17:40

Penalties—Addison (3 minors and misconduct), Kane, Battochio, Harley (2), McKelvey (major), Bazos (major).

Speaking Of Sport

By BOB DNIEPER

Sorry, but we are forced to remove our picture from the top of the column, gentlemen. We are very busy these days, and can't afford the time the new head necessitates. You see, all the major motion picture studios have seen our picture, and are, of course clamoring for us to take a screen test. Naturally, with the annual exams so close, we can't take time to either take the test or discuss the matter with Mssrs. Warner, Mayer, DeMille et al.

It seems to us that right now is about the right time to start thinking and talking about next year's football team, and we're just the one to talk about it!

With the bleak outlook for the fifty season (as far as players are concerned) being what it is, we would like to say a word about the cultivation of whatever material we happen to have on hand. Out of nine or ten thousand young males at our University surely there ought to be four of five good players.

We have heard plenty of beefs this year about the lackadaisical way Varsity coaches look over the boys turning out for practice. In some ways this may be true; in fact, we know of several cases where a guy that has since shown himself a great player was cut in two or three practices. A running half who played great ball for SPS last year was cut from the intermediates when he first tried out; but that's not the tragedy . . . the sad case is that he didn't even run a step outside the regular conditioning exercises.

Some of the players on this year's Blue team had a tough time breaking in as well, and most of them feel that a better system of screening is necessary. We are not suggesting that coaches are expected to immediately recognize diamonds in the rough, but from what we have seen in the past two years, Varsity is awfully short of coaches.

There are many boys at Varsity who would really like to play football but can't make the teams because of no experience or because they have not had the proper coaching in high schools. It is no secret that the secondary school coaches are incompetent generally, especially when it comes to teaching tackling and blocking fundamentals. For instance, we played five years of high school football and it was not until we were in third form that we found out Canadian football was played with twelve men.

Varsity should have a football school all fall with several assistant coaches working out with everybody who'd like to learn football fundamentals. The coaches could be taken from

Junior Basketeers Start Play-offs

Varsity Junior Basketball entry will take on Central 'Y' juniors in the first game of the T & D finals tonight at Hart House. The junior Blues have been running neck and neck all year with the 'Y' men but have yet to take a decision from them. Game time 7:30 p.m.

Blue Bloomer Team Defeat Queen's 7-2

The golden gals went down to defeat on Friday afternoon when the Varsity pucksters rang up a 5 goal margin in the first of a two game hockey tilt between the two universities. The 7-2 score, however, was not indicative of a one-sided game, as the Queen's team battled all the way with Barb Watson and Helen McGrath sparking the visitors to many threatening plays.

Varsity, however, took a 4-0 lead in the first period and held on to it tenaciously for the rest of the game. Betty Jane Fraser tallied two of the first period goals while her line mate, Irene Hain chalked up another. Alison Jeffries assisted by Laura Fletcher gained the second goal of the game.

Queen's Score

Queen's broke into the score game in the early part of the second period to make the first point, on a goal by Helen McGrath, while Varsity was short-handed. Alison Jeffries had stemmed off the tide for nearly two minutes when Faye Stevenson broke away to make the four-goal lead again on a shot by tally possible. Varsity gained their Alice Jamieson a minute later, while two beautiful breakaways by Alison Jeffries all but hiked up the score some more with the brilliant playing of the Queen's goalie Mary Therrein the only stumbling block. Irma Bullock side-stepped the Queen's defence in the dying minutes of the period to make the sixth tally for Varsity. The last two goals came in the third.

Dartmouth Slide Into Top Place At Ski Carnival

In the ski meet at the McGill Winter Carnival held at St. Sauveur and Montreal last weekend, Dartmouth placed first, with Middlebury runners-up, and McGill third. Varsity placed sixth.

Varsity individuals in the jumping, held at Cote de Neige, placed as follows: Odd Michaelson, 12th; Tom Andreeson, 22nd; Dave Hewson, 26th; Pere Berg-Johannson, 28th.

Cross country at Shawbridge: Berg-Johannson, 10th; Hewson, 29th; Andreeson, 32nd; Archie Jones, 33rd.

Downhill, Slalom

Downhill and slalom combined, held on the Downhill and Hill 70 at St. Sauveur; Bob Hutcheson, 12th; Ian Rogers, 20th; Jim Walt, 24th; Jones, 25th.

The next meet will be the Canadian Intercollegiate Ski Union to be held within the next two weeks. Before this time, however, the Varsity team are getting instruction from top-placer in the downhill and slalom at the 1948 Olympics, Hector Sullivan. The Blues should be in red-hot condition for the CISU.

U.W.O. Entry To Box Here In Big Meet

Hart House, in Toronto, is the scene of the 1949-50 intercollegiate senior boxing competitions, with Varsity, Queen's, McGill and Western competing for the Gibson Cup.

Strong entries are expected from all four universities. For the first time in intercollegiate senior boxing competition, Western is entering a squad, and as a result the Purple and White crew is the dark-horse entry.

Queen's Gaels are the defending champions. The Tricolor and Varsity shared honors last year, with Queen's winning five and Varsity three of the eight divisions.

Toronto has only one of its three winners back this year. Henry Henshall, perennial winner of the 125 pound class, is expecting to repeat again this year. The rugged Henshall has won the division every year for the past three.

Other Varsity veterans of senior intercollegiate boxing include Carl Leprich, Tim Turner and Roberto Couceiro. Couceiro reached the finals last year.

Friday, February 24, the semi-finals get underway and on Saturday, February 25, 16 finalists in the eight divisions will go into action.

Macmillan's Texts Will Be Available

New Source Ready Soon For Books

Textbooks which are unobtainable at the U. of T. bookstore because of the publishers refusing to supply them, will be available at another source, according to SAC President, Bob Hetherington. The source, which may be operated by the bookstore, will have on hand second-hand texts which will be secured through the efforts of Mr. Rankin, bookstore manager.

Since last fall the publishing firms of Macmillan's, Oxford University Press and Nelsons have refused to supply the bookstore on the grounds that the books were being retailed to students at a 10 percent discount. The basis of the publishers' objections is that selling at such a discount is unfair to the other retailers of textbooks in the city.

"The publishers who question discounts to students offer discounts of twenty per cent to teachers. They also feel that the staff should be given a ten per cent discount. But they do not feel that students deserve a discount", said Hetherington.

"I feel we should approach members of the university staff whose books are published by these companies and ask for direct support on the part of the authors", Hetherington moved. The motion carried unanimously.

"Nothing definite has been settled in our minds at all", stated Mr. B. D. Sandwell, Manager of the College Medical Books Department, in reply to a question asking whether Macmillans intended to open a retail outlet near the campus. "Something will have to be done to make books available to students. Many professors find the most needed books are supplied by our firm. It is a nuisance for students to have to go off-campus to purchase needed texts," he said.

"We are not out to make trouble," Mr. Sandwell continued. "We have suggested to the University that a system similar to the one at Queen's be set up. This system permits rebates on purchase prices at the end of the year, with the selling price at par with off-campus retailers".

Not Only Morals Make Christianity Vic SCM Hears

"That there is more to Christianity than simply morals, but there can be no Christianity without them" was the conclusion reached by Professor Leslie of Emmanuel College in his talk before members of the Vic SCM Club on Tuesday afternoon.

He said that Christianity is more than just another philosophy in that with belief went the power to fulfil its ideals. The striking attribute of the early Christians was the power which they had manifested, which alone could explain the widespread growth of the Church.

There has been a recent trend, he continued, toward the idea that worship of, and belief in, God are not essential, so long as one practices the morals of Christianity. This is in a sense true, he admitted. Christ said: "Not everyone that saith unto me 'Lord, Lord,' shall enter into the Kingdom of Heaven, but he that doeth the will of My Father."

But something is lacking, he argued. "The motivation is not sufficiently strong," he continued, "though this idea—that everyone should do unto his fellow as he would that the latter should do unto him—is clearly reasonable, morals based on mere human arguments like this without the concept of divine inspiration, are unlikely to be widely observed for any length of time."

Christianity, he said, is not essentially obedience to a code of morals. Indeed, the formation of a set of rules, usually negative in form, might be harmful, for then people tend to consider themselves virtuous merely because they are obedient. He recalled how Christ condemned the Pharisees for their external conventional respectability.

No, Professor Leslie continued, Christianity entails much more. Beyond Works it must include Faith and Love; a belief in, and love for God and Man.

He stated that moral laws were however necessary to the early development of Christian character.

SAC REVERSES DECISION SAYS MISUNDERSTANDING

Council President Introduces Motion One Negative Vote

The Varsity is back in business again, Following a lengthy explanation of the misunderstanding which caused the resignation of the Editor and the Women's Editor of The Varsity last Thursday, the Students' Administrative Council last night struck from its books the offending motion and substituted a wording acceptable to both the Council and The Varsity.

Reinstate Editor

Following the move the Council voted unanimously to reinstate the Editor and Women's Editor of The Varsity. The entire move was adopted without discussion in the Council.

Reading from a prepared statement, SAC President Bob Hetherington outlined to the Council the steps which had led to the misunderstanding, and moved the motion to replace the wording adopted at the last regular SAC meeting of the Council last Thursday.

The new motion, adopted last night reads: "Before any scheduled advertising is removed from The Varsity there must be consultation between the Editor and the Business Manager. This motion is intended to reaffirm the pre-existing policy adhered to by the Editor and The Business Manager in the manner of deleting advertising."

Motion Replaced

It replaces a motion which read: "Before any scheduled advertising is removed from The Varsity it must first have the permission of the Business Manager.

"This referred to the removal of the Simpson's and Neilson's advertisements in the issue of Monday, Feb. 6 (the H-Bomb Issue,) and cutting down the paid Hart House Bulletin Board in which several important items were deleted."

A move by Trinity representative Tom Symons would have instructed The Varsity to print Hetherington's statement in full, was defeated by the Council. Editor Stan Fillmore pointed out to Council that lack of space made it impossible to carry the full statement.

Scientific Change Influences Artists Says Painter-Prof

Modern art as influenced by the vast changes in man's way of life during the last century was described yesterday to the School of Social Work by Professor Charles Comfort of the department of Art and Archaeology.

He expressed confidence in our present society but pointed to the confusion and restlessness resulting from the rapid changes brought about by scientific discoveries. The wide development in painting reflects these changes, he said.

The aesthetic revolution which began in the 19th century was caused, Comfort explained, by the re-assessment of the function of art. With the invention of photography and new pigments, and the theories of Sigmund Freud, art became more than just a representation of appearances. Modern realism in painting portrays the artist's experiences, Comfort said. "We must accept this as a new approach to pictorial imagery."

"The public of today is more informed and more interested in the arts," he said. "Canadian culture is developing in the fields of ballet, drama and literature as well as painting, and the individual has become the chief patron of the arts. The artist is now adjusting himself to this new patronage."

Makeup Lecture

The third and final lecture in the series on Copyreading and Rewritting given by the Makeup Editor of The Varsity will be held today in Room 66, University College, at 1 p.m. This is the lecture that was postponed last week.

Subject of the lecture will be More Remarks About Copyreading and Editing. There will be a discussion period.

Musician Quits

Hart House Mystery

By HERB WOOD

For those who enjoy music, and for those students who attend Hart House, a great loss has entered your life.

Remember those nostalgic stylings that floated around the East common room, pieces like Laura, Jealousy, and As Time Goes By? Well, you've heard your last. The guy simply refuses to play any more. That was back on February 2.

Wood Explains

We had never met the chap until recently, and as it turned out it was best that way. Mind you, he's a personable enough fellow, so let me explain.

A friend and I indulged in a little fantasy, regarding the individual whose style was so distinctive and his music so haunting.

We agreed that it was significant that the songs were popular during the war and didn't include any present-day song hits. We agreed that he must be a veteran, reminiscing about people and places like London, Paris, or Brussels.

Finds It Simple

The fact that no hit songs of today were included, simply meant that nowadays he was too busy studying or working to listen to the radio. It's as plain as the smile on your face, don't you think?

And another thing, the guy must be thinking of somebody over there. Why else would he play pieces like Laura and I Hear A Rhapsody? Ever notice a person in love? I haven't seen one for quite some time, but as I recall they go around humming or whistling some such song.

I remember a fellow in the Army who fell in love. When those telltale blue envelopes became a daily feature of his life, he went around humming Laura. Strange, but true.

Frankly, we didn't accuse our mystery pianist of being in love, but it was an idea in our conjecture about him.

Checks

At this stage in our game, we decided that it would be a good idea to check up on our imagination and see just how wrong, or right, we were.

The very next day, as we were enjoying the southern exposure in the debates room the guy started to play. You couldn't mistake that style. But what was the hurry, let's listen for a minute. Then the music stopped.

Both of us jumped up and ran down to the common room . . . No one was there; he had gone. Then followed a quick canvas of the fellows in the room. The last person we asked knew that his name was Frank and that he was from II St. Mike's. Fortunately, a friend of ours goes to St. Mike's, and after a bit of research the field narrowed down to one person.

Friend Amazed

Our friend at St. Mike's was amazed, when she discovered who we were talking about. She had gone to school with him, and did not even know he played the piano, and certainly she didn't recognize him from our hypothetical description.

A few days later, he dropped into The Varsity office. First of all he was not a veteran. Secondly, he didn't admit he was in love, and only played such songs because they had a unique quality that made them standard favourites. When we brought up the personal feelings in these songs, he said at the best, he looked out the window when playing. He even admitted that music was just a pastime and that he planned on going into Chemistry.

The reason why he isn't coming back to Hart House is a very good one. The last time he was there, somebody stole his stationwagon coat, that he had just received for Christmas.

The Fog Clears

Last night, at the regular meeting of the Students' Administrative Council, the disagreement between the Council and The Varsity which resulted in the resigning of the Editors last Thursday was adjusted.

This is an attempt to explain: (a) what the disagreement was about, (b) why the editors of The Varsity thought it necessary to resign, and (c) why there has been little attempt to clear up the situation to the student body until now.

On Wednesday, February 8, at a regular meeting of the Students' Administrative Council, the following motion was passed:

"That before any scheduled advertising is removed from The Varsity, it first must have the permission of the Business Manager."

The minutes of the meeting continued:

"This referred to the removal of the Simpson's and Neilson's advertisements on the issue of Monday, February 6, and cutting down the paid Hart House Bulletin in which several important items were deleted."

This motion was the bone of contention. The Editor of The Varsity, and his staff, felt that (a) student control of The Varsity was curbed by the motion, and (b) that the conditions under which the advertising was pulled justified the use of the Editor's discretion.

To take the second point first, the issue of The Varsity concerned was the special H-bomb Issue. One of the articles specially written for the Issue could not go in because of lack of space. This was discovered at 3 o'clock in the morning at the Oshawa plant where The Varsity is printed. The Editor, who was there to ensure that this special issue was treated carefully, took it upon himself to pull ads that were not of immediate urgency. In this way, the needed space was found.

The Business Manager was not consulted that morning because of the hour, and because the Editor felt his action was justified under the circumstances. This is the first time the Editor's discretion was exercised. It was not, in the Editor's opinion, an irresponsible action.

Two of the ads were printed in the following issue. Therefore, the total loss of revenue was $1.10 for the items deleted from the Hart House Bulletin.

An effort had been made earlier in the day to safeguard against this emergency. A member of the Business Manager's staff had been asked if she would be able to make the trip to Oshawa with the members of the staff doing the job. Since she was unable to go, when the occasion arose, the Editor used his own judgment.

Concerning the first point about the freedom of the Editor of The Varsity being jeopardized, the following facts are pertinent. The Varsity is a student paper, published by students for students. The Business Manager is in charge of the advertising policy of The Varsity. He is not a student but an official hired and fired by the administration.

Up to the time of this motion, the Editor of The Varsity and the Business Manager had co-operated on the question of ad space under an "unwritten" agreement. They had conferred as equals. Neither one was the final authority.

Under the motion passed at the SAC meeting on Wednesday, February 8, if the Editor "must have permission of the Business Manager," this makes the Business Manager the final authority. It seemed at the special SAC meeting held last Thursday to consider this matter, that most of the members of the Council thought the motion merely reiterated what had been the "unwritten" agreement.

If it had done so, the Editors of The Varsity would have been well content. But the motion went further.

At the special Thursday meeting, the matter was discussed but seemed to dissolve into misunderstanding. As a result, when the SAC voted down a motion to revoke the original motion, the Editor and the Women's Editor of The Varsity, both non-voting members of the Council, resigned.

Following this resignation, the majority of the Editors of The Varsity, many of whom were scheduled to be responsible for next year's paper, handed in their resignations to the Editor-in-Chief.

Their stand:

"The motion as it stands changes the present relationship between the Editor of The Varsity and the Business Manager. Now the Business Manager has the final say in how space in The Varsity is to be allocated.

"Inasmuch as The Varsity is a paper whose first purpose is to be of service to the students, we feel that student control should be maintained."

The attitude of the SAC is understandable. Recently, the Finance Commissioner disclosed that The Varsity is losing money: some $3000 plus over the budget. This is due to inadequate estimates being made last year. This loss is the reason why the number of issues was cut down from the usual 100.

Because The Varsity is losing money, it is natural that the Council should be quite sensitive about the pulling of ads that would bring in revenue. The motion was an attempt to put on record the policy followed until now. Our protest was that the motion went further.

Thi incident of the H-Bomb issue was a unique one. Before this, advertisements had been pulled to allow news space. But since he had been available, the Business Manager had been consulted in each instance.

So far as the Business Manager himself is concerned, he had stated that he would not want the contentious motion to stand if it would hamper the present harmonious relations between The Varsity and himself.

The reason why this situation has not been publicized before has been already suggested. The Varsity felt that this disagreement rose out of misunderstanding rather than conflict of principles. To put the case before the students and ask for support would mean a campaign against the SAC stand. We felt an attempt should be made to clear up the grounds of misunderstanding first. This attempt has been successful.

Last night, at the SAC meeting, it was moved the earlier motion with its reference to the H-Bomb issue be stricken from the minutes and the following words substituted:

"Before any scheduled advertising is removed from The Varsity, there must be consultation between the Editor and the Business Manager.

"This motion is intended to re-affirm the pre-existing policy adhered to by the Editor and Business Manager in the matter of deleting advertising."

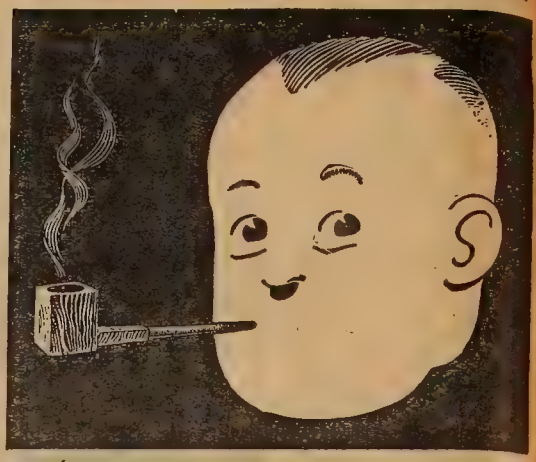
By this motion, passed almost unanimously, the Editor's equality with the Business Manager has been re-established. The Editor's discretion will be limited only by his sense of responsible judgment in the best interests of The Varsity and of the students for whom The Varsity is published.

There was no questioning of the validity of the principle on which the editors resigned. The SAC has shown, as it naturally would, that the interests of the students are its prime concern.

Our Readers Write

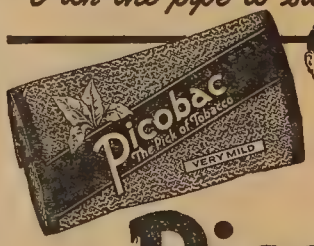
Morals and the Bomb

Editor, The Varsity:



We have followed your recent editorials on the H-Bomb with interest. Judging by the letter response it would seem that we students of the university are not prepared to let the big bomb blast us into the dark ages just yet — or at least not without trying to find a solution to avert such a catastrophe. But whereas your editorials and the letters show a great concern, the solutions offered in them are put forward without any real hope that they will work. It seems that all are pervaded with an overwhelming atmosphere of hopelessness. A few weeks ago Professor Paul Tillich spoke at Wycliffe College on "The Theology of Despair." Isn't our trouble today that we have the despair without the theology?

Now we are quite aware that when one begins to talk this way in the rarified air of a modern, sophisticated university, he is met with an indulgent smile. We have been told that the issue is practical and not theological — that is it involves world government, balance of power, armaments for defence and so on. Now we grant that action must be taken on this level, but is not the real problem within man himself? You seem to recognize this in your editorial of February 14th when you state: "We must try to change our attitudes," and again in the same editorial when you ask the question: "How can we alter conditions in the world today so that controlling . . . of the Bomb will never bring about the conditions necessary to the control of the Bomb until we accept a measure of personal guilt for the world muddle?" In a very real sense, is not the blood of Hiroshima and Nagasaki on MY hands? And if the H-Bomb is ever dropped will it not be MY fault? We talk very earnestly of remedies for our dilemmas but unless our self-interest "fall to the ground and die" all our talk will be in vain. Even as we work for peace we refuse to make any sacrifice of our own vested and personal interests — we want peace without sacrificing the gods we make for ourselves.



In other words the human pride within us so clings to the gods we make that we will not recognize the sovereignty of the God who has

Food, Shelter, India's Needs IRC Informed

The Indian people are beginning to realize they need the essential animal comforts — food, clothing, and shelter — to lead a good, healthy life was the main point of Indian High Commissioner, Hon. H. S. Kirpalani, in an address given to the International Relations Club last night. The political leaders of India will attempt to provide these animal comforts to the people and to give them the type of rule and leadership they want.

On August 15, 1947, said Mr. Kirpalani, an event unparalleled in history occurred. This was the successful partition of a country of 340 million people into two separate countries, India and Pakistan, without bloodshed or violence. These countries are eager to improve themselves in order to raise their standard of living.

India Has Had Democracy

From the beginning of Indian history, said Mr. Kirpalani, there has been a type of democracy in India. However, the invasion of the Moslems in 1000 A.D. split India into two parts, Hindu and Moslem. The Moslems became the businessmen of the country and the Hindus the agriculturalists and laborers. There are now, he said, 90 per cent of the Moslems that are converted Hindus and no distinction by clothing, features, or actions can be observed.

During the seventeenth century the fight settled down between the British and the French with the British winning out in the mid eighteenth century. Noting the extensive wealth of the country Queen Victoria took the new country under the rule of English kings. Hence followed a succession of governors-general.

Officials Secure Unity

These officials secured a unity in India and improved the communications system and law enforcement. The rulers, however, said Mr. Kirpalani, considered the Indians very inferior to them.

In 1855, The Indian National Congress was started by the British. To oppose this the Moslems set up the Moslem League which was built up on the Moslem religion. They attempted to gain more and more liberties, he stated.

In the twenties, Gandhi rose to power on his platform of passive resistance. He did more, said Mr. Kirpalani, to unify India than any man has done. He succeeded in swinging the country to a non-violence policy and destroying the untouchable caste system.

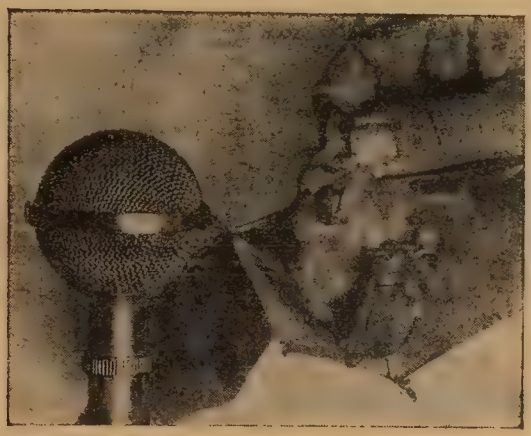
Country Electrifies

He predicted India would, in five or seven years, be the third most electrified country in the world. Only the United States and the U.S.S.R. would be ahead of her. He also predicted that in sixteen years the country would be completely literate — except "those under five, and those approaching senility".

Physios To Hold Dance For Scholarship Fund In Memory Of Heroine

The Physiotherapy Undergraduate Association is holding a dance tomorrow as part of a campaign to raise funds for the Connie Beattie Memory Fund, in memory of the heroine of last spring's Eskimo polio epidemic.

Miss Beattie offered her services to fight the epidemic when the call for volunteers went out. On the way home the plane in which she was flying crashed, and she was killed.



The Fund in her honor will provide scholarships for post-graduate work in Physiotherapy.

The dance will be held Friday afternoon at 4 o'clock. There will be games, entertainment, and girls.

With her young clinging to her side, this mother bat lets out a wild scream into the high-frequency microphone. Though the cries of a bat are inaudible to the human ear, they are the secret to the furry creature's uncanny ability to fly in the dark. How's it done? By radar! The bat story is one of the miracles of nature pictured in "Dust or Destiny," new scientific film to be shown in the Toronto General Hospital Lecture Room, Friday, February 23. at 1 p.m.

Seminar Deadline March 3 Six From Toronto To Go

March 3 is the deadline for turning in application forms to attend the ISS seminar to be held in France this summer, stated ISS Public Relations Director Jack Tinker, IV UC, yesterday.

Selection of representatives will be made by a board approved by the University, and composed of Dean Bissell, representing the President; Nicholas Ignatieff, Warden of Hart House; Alex Macdonald, Secretary of the SAC; Dr. Lynch, Professor of Philosophy at St. Mike's; Bob Hetherington, President of the SAC; and Bill McDougall, Chairman of ISS.

Fifty Go

Representatives of about 15 Western European countries will be at the seminar. Also present will be 50 students from Canada, of whom six will be from Toronto.

The seminar will last five or six weeks, in the months of July and August.

Fees and travelling costs will be borne by the Canadian Council for Reconstruction through UNESCO, and the provincial governments. The students are responsible only for their personal expenses, which include such things as trips after the seminar is concluded, films, and meals at cafes. Tinker said that he had managed last year for $200, and that it could be done for as little as $150.

Crisis is Theme

Theme of the seminar will be "Crisis of Western Civilization". This will be split up into four dis-

Varsity Days

Publication dates of The Varsity for the remainder of the year are as follows:

Friday, Feb. 24 (tomorrow); Wednesday, March 1; Friday, March 3; Monday, March 6; Wednesday, March 8; Friday, March 10; and Friday, March 17.

The issue of Friday, March 10, will be the final regular issue of The Varsity for the year. It will give a round-up of the year's activities in a 16-page issue.

The Friday, March 17 issue, is a special 4-page issue for results of faculty executive elections that take place after the end of regular publication.

Debaters Vote 2-1 War Not Inevitable Contradict General

"War will be inevitable as long as I am still of service age," guest speaker Major-General Churchill Mann insisted at the Hart House Debate last night. However the motion "In the opinion of this house a third world war is inevitable" was defeated in a 63 to 30 vote.

Outlines Three Points

Mann based his arguments on three points. The first was that the Western democracies will never submit voluntarily to the domination and the resultant loss of the liberties that are inherent in the way of life of Communism.

Second, that the paramount objective of the Western nations is to avoid domination. "The West will likely lose patience with Russia and try in the United Nations to end the continuous shillyshallying and remove the threat that Russia presents to all freedom loving people even at the expense of war," he said.

Third, we ought to proceed with this inevitable war while we still have the recent training behind us.

"There is a vital struggle of life and death in the world today," the speaker declared. "Unless we can put through a proposal in the UN to control weapons of mass destruction in the world, which I feel that the Russians will never agree to, war will also be bound to occur."

Noting that Canada's defence budget has increased from $15,000,000 to $400,000,000 since the early years of the depression without a comparative increase of population, the general aid said that although Canada cannot keep up this expense indefinitely but that we must keep up a strong military position for ourselves and our enemies. We must not sit back and expect that peace will come some way. Russia is certain to use this as an opportunity to attack us.

H. M. Politsky, speaking for the affirmative, argued that an answer has never been found to co-ordinating two opposing ideals as those between Russia and the Western nations. For this reason, he insisted, war is inevitable. G. I. Wetstein, also speaking for the motion, insisted that Eastern and Western policies can never be reconciled.

Speaking for the opposition, Norman Endicott, IV Vic, argued that capitalism breeds war while communism needs peace to carry through its programme.

G. Slater, III Vic, also speaking against the opposition, felt that "good old-fashioned horse-trading diplomacy was the best way to achieve peace. Compromise in this way can be achieved."

LATE BULLETIN

Supporting The Varsity's stand taken on a motion passed by the SAC regarding The Varsity ads policy, Hart House debaters last night passed (with only three contrary votes) the following motion:

"Resolved that this House affirms its confidence in the Editors and masthead of The Varsity, and respectfully suggest to the SAC that in defense of the principle of student democracy the student Editor continue to be independent of the graduate Advertising Manager."

(See page one for details of the SAC's action regarding this motion.)

Liquor Problems To Be Attacked By Liberal Club

The liquor policy of the Ontario government will come under attack by the Liberal Club at the Mock Parliament to be held in the U.C. Junior Common Room at eight o'clock tonight.

The bill will propose: 1. Liquor education in the high schools of the province. 2. Local option in all municipalities before any increase in number of outlets is permitted. 3. A more strict application of laws to cut down the number of existing outlets.

The CCF Club will form the opposition and present an amendment to nationalize the liquor industry. The Liberals will oppose this as a last resort, and will attack the Frost government instead for its sub-servience to big liquor industries.

An attack will also be directed against the present system of licencing, with emphasis on corruption in this department.

Old Stadium

From Hay-Field To Bowl

By DAVE BUTTERS

"The Athletic Association announces that the new stadium will be conducted in a strictly high-class manner. It is not the intention to license refreshment vendors of any kind. Nor will programmes be sold." Yesterday the "new" stadium referred to in The Varsity, Oct. 6, 1911, was nothing but a pile of lumber, various fires, and snow. This was the ignominious epitaph of the old wooden grandstand at Varsity Stadium which is to be replaced by a full concrete bowl.

The completion of the new stadium being built on the site of the now-extinct wooden grandstand will make the Bloor Bowl a concrete horseshoe extending from the north wall along Bloor Street around the field back to the street again. The work, expected to commence by the end of the month, will be completed by August 15. The erection of the new stands climaxes a period of growth of almost fifty years from the opening of the original Bloor Bowl.

'Lawn' Has Sports

Before the opening of the stadium the athletic activities of the University of Toronto were held on the "Front Lawn", now the Front Campus. Cricket, rugby, and track matches vied with hay, barley, and potatoes for the use of the "Lawn". The first gym used by the students was an old shed behind the steward's house, now Croft Chapter House, which was so ram-shackled in appearance that the steward built a lean-to against it to house pigs to be used for meals during the winter season.

In 1893, a new gym was built where the athletic wing of Hart House now stands. During the construction of Hart House which was begun in 1912 the gym was torn down to make way for the new men's social and recreational center.

Needed Space

Just at the turn of the century, the university decided it needed more space for the spectators at intercollegiate and intramural games. They moved to a vacant field near Bloor Street and constructed a small grandstand to seat 400 persons. The grandstand, situated at the mid-stripe of the original field, was the small structure at the south-west corner of the present stadium.

Due to lack of spectator space, the important games were played on Rosedale Playing Field, now one of the city's parks. The university officials drew up plans for the construction of a new, large grandstand on Devonshire Place(which was opened that year, 1911. The new stadium, built entirely of wood, and temporary bleachers on the east side of the field (these 'temporary' ones lasted until 1924) seated 4,000 people.

Hazy Remembrances

The grandstand was the biggest of its kind when it was built. The Varsity, Sept. 26, 1911, said, "The new athletic field has supplied a long-felt need of the university . . . The old red fence and the bleachers which were liable to collapse at any stage are now merely hazy remembrances and in their stead a splendid concrete wall graces the front of our new stadium and as bleachers have been built to accommodate 4,000 of the most enthusiastic spectators."

Since the completion of the stadium the Varsity Blues have taken nine Intercollegiate Rugby Championships. During this time additions have been made by the inclusions of temporary bleachers which raised the total of spectators to 19,500 in the '49-'50 season.

Build New Stadium

This fall, after the football season was over, the Athletic Association decided to tear the 40-year-old grandstand down and complete a concrete horseshoe, the east side of which was built in 1924. The new stadium will begin at Bloor St., curve to Devonshire Place and down to a point 12 or 15 feet from the south-west corner of the present concrete stands. The estimated cost of the undertaking is $500,000.

From vegetable garden to Bloor Bowl, from shed to Hart House, the University of Toronto's sports facilities have expanded. Soon the old wooden grandstand may be a "hazy remembrance" in the minds of students and graduates of the university. Next fall will see the inauguration of the new Bloor Bowl.

ART — MUSIC — DRAMA

Radio: Stage 50

Last Sunday Andrew Allan presented Ah Wilderness, a play by Eugene O'Neill.

Ah Wilderness was strangely reminiscent of some of the Lister Sinclair plays we have been hearing lately over the CBC. In the comparison, Ah Wilderness comes off second best. Where Sinclair uses a small town family in Ontario to illustrate a fundamental characteristic of the local society, developing a recognizable type and making him seem very real, O'Neill tends more to merely characterize individuals. The characters are certainly convincing, and the dialogue amusing and quite adequate. Somehow, however, the play impresses one as being rather trivial.

The plot pivots on the vagaries of Richard, the son of the family. Richard, a very intense, idealistic young man, must be played in a masterful fashion or the whole play falls apart. Don Herron who also played Richard in The New Play Society's Ah Wilderness last year, turned in a splendid performance. He quoted the Rubaiyat with just the right degree of abandon and made love to his childhood sweetheart with the requisite degree of shy diffidence.

As his father, Bud Knapp was effective in the almost classic situation of a father telling his son the facts of life, suggesting improper things in the most proper language.

The rest of the cast did an excellent job of creating the atmosphere of a middle class New England family of a few decades ago. Deserving special mention are Tommy Tweed as tipsy Uncle Sid who always manages to amuse his scandalized family, and Jean Cruchet as Nora the Irish maid.

Within the limitations of the play which provides no great dramatic moments, no climaxes, the performance was splendid; in fact, it is difficult to imagine how it could possibly be improved upon.

Trinity Concert

Betty Jean Hagen, tall dramatic violinist who played in Strachan Hall last Sunday evening, is an artist of confidence and precision. These two qualities were primary in her performance of the first half of her programme. Vitali's Ciaconna and Mozart's Sonata in A Major, both demanding compositions. In her command of her instrument and especially in the production of rich resonant tone Miss Hagen left little to be desired. Of the modern works performed the Berceuse from L'Oiseau de feu (Stravinsky) and La fille au cheveux de lin (Debussy) were the most effective lyrically. In the wild gypsy air Tzigane (Ravel), a showpiece for technical precision, Miss Hagen displayed a remarkable virtuosity. Accompanist Yvonne Guiguet assisted sensitively and ably.

Foreign Control Policy For Monetary Matters Blocks Free Enterprise

The fact that the United States, in "the strongest manufacturing and trading position in the world," is a protected market, is one of the main causes of monetary exchange difficulties said Douglas Gibson of the Bank of Nova Scotia at a Political Science Club Meeting last Thursday.

"The merits of Free Convertibility versus a Controlled Exchange Policy" was the topic of a panel discussion held at Cartwright Hall and sponsored by the club.

A dislike of "bureaucrats" and a concern for the plight of those individuals whose enterprise was restricted by a multiplicity of regulations was the basis of investment broker H. R. Jackman's opposition to exchange control. He urged the return to a free market.

A free market would not be an answer to the present exchange difficulties, maintained Mr. Highmoor of the Bank of Commerce Foreign Exchange Department, a participant in wartime exchanges. The absolute shortage of American funds necessitated the determination of some priority system. Mr. Gibson shared the view that it would be inadvisable to remove controls now.

PHE To Give Course For Camp Counsellors

This May the School of Physical and Health Education will offer a course to students preparing to be camp counsellors this summer. The course is open to men and women and will be held from May 8th to the 13th, inclusive. Instruction will be given by members of the staff of the School of Physical and Health Education, as well as by Dr. K. Bernhardt, Dr. J. H. Ebbs, Mr. Ron Perry and other specialists.

The activities taught will be tennis, archery, paddling, both intermediate and advanced, skits, stunts and recreational dancing. A course on the psychology and health of the camper, as well as camp education, will be included. Students interested in enrolling in this course, should contact the School of Physical and Health Education as soon as possible.

made us. The Church alone recognizes this divine sovereignty and so the Church is the only body that has an answer to the problem which is not motivated by self interest. Admittedly the Church of the living God is not a very vital body today. But if the answer to our Bomb Blues is not evident in the Church today, it should be; and even in her weakness, does she not point to Him who is the answer? — the God who has come and who comes in Jesus Christ, emptying us of self and creating in us those new attitudes you believe we must try to cultivate.

Perhaps the Church would start acting as if God had really shown us what self-giving Love is; perhaps if the Church had enough faith to cut the economic ties that bind her so closely to our culture and to our Western way-of-life, then she could begin to act like the Church of the contemporaneous God. She could then become the means whereby He could judge and save our society, yes and the governments whose responsibility is so great.

right and duty to take part in politics as a professional politician."

Finally, the writer insists that the scientist assume the responsibilities of the average citizen. Not content with voting, paying taxes and performing all the other obligatory functions required of a member of our society he must stand on the public platform and engage in political debate. The suggestion is naive and unrealistic. True, the political scene could stand the addition of men of vision and good will but the demand that a small minority of the population supply the candidates is asking too much. Albert Einstein running as a Congressman from New Jersey or Professor Leopold Infeld exchanging pleasantries with Controller Ball four are pictures which one would rather not contemplate: not that the situation hasn't a precedent.

Once upon a time there was a College professor full of moral responsibility and vision. He attempted to inaugurate a new era of peace and brotherly love. The rejection of his ideas by the very people who had put him in office left him a broken man and hastened his early death. His name was Wilson.

Sees Slater Slighted

Editor, The Varsity:

In your issue of Feb. 17, you printed a writeup of the three one act plays produced in Hart House on Tuesday, Feb. 14. I fail to understand why the director of the Trinity play was not mentioned in it. I have every reason to believe that Miss Clare Slater spent every bit as much time rehearsing with her cast as did the other directors, and therefore I think it only right that she should get some credit for all her work. Her name was, naturally, printed on the programme. Since your reporter obviously got all his information about the various casts from the printed sheet (otherwise he would have known that Miss Margaret Kearns was ill, and another member of St. Michael's College took her place), I feel that he has no excuse for not knowing Miss Slater's name, and mentioning it in his review, especially since he noted both the directors and the assistant directors of the other plays.

Vic Not Cliquish

Editor, The Varsity:

In your editorial of Friday, Feb. 17, you commented rather strongly upon the decision of the V.C.U. Assembly to carry on with a college show next year.

Either the Editors were thoroughly unfamiliar with the discussion as it proceeded in its entirety or else they purposely overlooked certain facts in order to put over a point . . . at our expense.

Might I mention some of the details of the discussion which you failed to mention in the course of your editorial?

(1) A motion was overwhelmingly approved that the Vic show "should in no way attempt to emulate the All-Varsity Revue in size, theme or appeal." It was pointed out that other college shows had made the mistake of operating on a campus-wide level in ticket sales appeal and theme and had destroyed their purpose in doing so. We felt that the All-Varsity Revue alone should meet the demand for a campus-wide production.

(2) With the disappearance of the Vic Bob as a college production we felt that the Scarlet and Gold, only in its infancy, should be given another chance.

(3) The Bob did not permit women in the college to perform on the stage.

(4) Those people without the experience or ability to take part in the All-Varsity Revue would be given experience in stage productions and an opportunity to present their talent.

(5) The Vic show would provide material and talent that might be utilized to the advantage of the All-Varsity Revue. (I believe that numerous members of the Scarlet and Gold took a prominent part in the acting, singing and production of this year's All-Varsity Revue. How was this detrimental to university interests?)

(6) The crowded social schedule was given deep consideration. However, in the past few years Vic has already done away with at least ten dances and class functions!

We, too, congratulated Mr. Finlay for the fine discussion which he led. (I find it difficult to see why his future should in any way have been jeopardized.) But to imply as you did, that the Assembly coldly turned down a motion in favour of All-Varsity co-operation is a blatant dirtortion of fact.

Just as a matter of "factual note," Mr. Editor, Mr. Finlay at no time during the course of the discussion made any motion for or against the show!

Accusations such as those made by the editorial are a very serious matter and cannot be taken lightly. I sincerely feel that you have taken great liberty to imply that Victoria's interests have been narrow or cliquish.

It has been the stated policy of the V.C.U. to promote All-Varsity activities and interests and to co-operate as far as possible in all such matters. We would sincerely appreciate any concrete and factual instances of non-co-operation by Victoria College with regard to All-Varsity functions, not only that we might be severely and justly criticized, but also that we might take steps to alleviate the situation.

President V.C.U.

No Amateur

Editor, The Varsity:

May we ..comment on the criticism of the Hillel Drama Festival which appeared in your Feb. 21 edition?

"Amateur" Snooky Rosen, "the superb principle that gave the vignette everything it demanded," is none other than Iriving Rosen, the Toronto performer who appeared at the Royal Alexandra Theatre last spring with such outstanding American productions as "Harvey," "High Button Shoes," and "Finian's Rainbow," each group a professional company.

Mr. Rosen is hardly an amateur.

Looking Backwards

Mid-Century Highlights

Another of the cultural institutions of the University which has been favored with considerable publicity by The Varsity is the University of Toronto Symphony Orchestra. The orchestra was founded by Hart House Dietician Prudence McSlopp who wished to utilize even the horses' tails which she could not use in her delicious Shepard's Pie. From those thrifty beginnings the orchestra has bloomed into a truly progressive musical organization.

The first conductor was formerly associated with the T.T.C. and came to the university under scholarship of the Salvation Army, with the intention of improving his tambourine technique. His first public performance was dedicated to General Booth and Chairman McBride.

Many amusing anecdotes are told about Maximalian Von Utter, who was imported from the NewVienna to act as concert master. On registering at the Royal Dork, Mr. Von Utter was questioned by the room clerk, "Do you wish a room with a bath?" He replied, "Who wants a bath? I'm only here for two seasons."

On being apprehended by the manager while eating the drapes, he was evicted from his lodgings but not without defending himself. "Drapes?" quoth he, "I thought you said grapes."

The stellar event of the Orchestra's 1930 season was the presentation of "The Battered Bride" or "When Should we Tell Our Children?" A particularly memorable highlight of this performance was Gloria Swandive's rendition of the aria "La Plume est sur la Table", translation—"Who Hit Nellie in the Belly With a Flounder?"

The orchestra was conspicuously augmented in 1932 through the bequest of Agatha Pewter of a musical saw, an electric Kazoo and two humatinas.

Perhaps the most striking personality ever associated with the orchestra was Hans Enfeet. He was the talented son of an itinerant piccolo player afflicted with St. Vitus dance and a Javanese Temple Dancer with a palsy. The young genius was fortunate to inherit some of his parents' attributes and was therefore especially brilliant in scherzo movements. Many of the alumni will remember his inspired second movement from the Cascara Suite. This was later popularized by arranger Scott Misue as "It's Too Late Now."

No review of the University Symphony Orchestra would be complete without some mention of The Varsity's star music critic, Syke O'Pathic. He adhered meticulously to traditional Art Music and Drama standards of The Varsity. On the night of a performance, he would arrive at the auditorium at the beginning of the intermission, phone in his review from the lobby and then stay to enjoy the performance. It was Syke who summarized the elements of the orchestra thusly, "We have many brilliant musicians in our orchestra and when they learn to play together who knows what may happen."

Science and Engineering

By JOE HARRISON

Society, whenever forced by the catastrophic results of its own thoughtlessness, invariably seeks to find a scapegoat. Made up of millions of rationalizing individuals its collective rationalization when directed into one channel is a force to be reckoned with. Today it is the men of science who appear to be the scapegoats and there exists in many minds a firm belief that the chaotic state of the world is due primarily to the irresponsible activities of the scientist and engineer. The mind that subscribes to this belief is probably the same one which condemns the machine age and its labor saving devices and finds vindication for its condemnation in unemployment, want among plenty and all the current economic evils.

This attitude is a common one but hardly the sort of thing one would expect to find in a University, where the questioning of "popular" dogmas occupies a considerable portion of the students' time. Last Tuesday's (Feb. 14) issue of The Varsity contained a letter wherein the writer presented an excellent example of the rationalistic viewpoint referred to.

Will Defend

More than a week has gone by and no one has felt it necessary to rise to the defence of the scientists' position and therefore the onus rests on this column to take up the cudgel on his behalf.

Perhaps the best way of dealing with the accusations levelled is to consider them one at a time and trust that by removing them from their context we are not being unfair to the writer.

These men go about their business of creating weapons of destruction without a thought of the ultimate moral good of their creations" and "For them to adopt a negative attitude towards the moral implications of their work is nothing more than a shirking of their duty to their fellow man."

"To this indictment," the writer says, "ths scientist has two stock replies." The word stock is well used although slightly misplaced, for "To this stock indictment," would have been closer to the truth.

As Shakespeare so aptly put it "the time is out of joint" and man because of his inability to utilize the products of science for a useful and constructive purpose has begun to question and malign the source and value of his knowledge. To blame the scientist alone for the existence of the weapons of destruction is an intolerable oversimplification, for it is not on scientists more than on others that the blame must rest but on scientists as much as on others.

Southwell States Views

Sir Richard Southwell speaking in a pre-atomic era (1939) had this to say: "The popular concept of science itself stands in need of a drastic revision. The product of science is knowledge and knowledge is of good and evil. You cannot have one without the danger of the other; you cannot say to the scientist, 'Search on, but let your discoveries be only the kind that benefit and do not hurt us,' for to say that shows a complete lack of understanding of the spirit of science."

The scientist seeks for knowledge and truth because he must, but this search is motivated by the nature of his work rather than by a deliberate blindness to its implications.

To make the scientist the moral arbiter of the products of science sets upon him a responsibility both unfair and dangerous. A conscientious application of this principle would have eleminated every scientific development known to man, for nothing which man's genius has adapted for a useful purpose, fails to find its corresponding application in war.

Scientists See Implications

Indeed there is ample evidence that the scientist today is fully aware of the moral implication of his work.

Dr. Ernst Oppenheimer of the Atomic Energy Commission, writing on this subject said that when the atom bomb dropped on Hiroshima many of the scientists involved in its production had the experience of "original sin". "And so they should" might be the answer. But to treat the A bomb and the H bomb as a moral problem is putting the cart before the horse. Both are a product of political policy and expediency and their use is directed by those that control these policies. The H bomb was ordered manufactured by the president of the United States after full warning of the possible implications of his act from every scientist in the country. The seeds of moral decadence are there but they find expression in the political situation which makes the H bomb necessary rather than in the creation of the bomb itself.

The second stock reply of the scientist to the charge that science has beenunconcerned with higher human values is that science as such is normally neutral. . . . it can only tell what is true, not what is right or good or wise or beautiful or holy. . . . The scientist is quite convinced that scientific knowledge alone is entitled to respect, and emerging from his laboratory he thrusts aside the work of the philosopher as worthless. He immediately proceeds to formulate a view of human life and destiny in harmony with his own professional bias.

Reasoning Far Fetched

I don't know what realm of fantasy resulted in this analysis but there is ample evidence that the reasoning is far fetched. Science and philosophy today are nearly indistinguishable and cannot be divorced one from the other. It might baffle an expert in semantics to classify the work of Einstein under either heading alone, for today the advances of science are so rapid and revolutionary that the scientist himself must be both a research worker and a philosopher. And it is these same advances that engender in the scientist an awe of, and a humility in, the universe about him. Many of our foremost scientists are men of religion and their writings are full of attempts to correlate their moral beliefs with their scientific discoveries. I hesitate to cite the writings and lives of Einstein and Albert Schweitzer as examples of the scientists under discussion. The examples offer too shattering a proof for further discussion. However, there are others, perhaps not so well known who may serve as adequate examples. Lecomte de Nouy, the French scientist in his book "Human Destiny" presents a brilliant vindication for belief in moral values using scientific evidence for his arguments.

Choice Unfortunate

The writer in his letter cites Alfred Nobel as an example of a man with a social conscience. His choice of an emample is rather unfortunate for Nobel, conscience stricken at his production of dynamite has left the world only money as an inducement for the propagation of peace.

. . . "he must take a great share in the life about him; he must raise his voice in the meetings and councils of his community . . . He has as much

Hetherington Statement

Part of the statement follows:

"I feel that at the extraordinary meeting of the SAC (last) Thursday, wherein an item pertaining to the management of The Varsity was discussed, mutual misunderstanding arose between the Varsity and the SAC) and that such misunderstanding requires enlightenment.

"In announcing that he would resign if the . . . motion was not rescinded the Editor . . . did not intend to threaten . . . . He felt that the wording of the motion (implied) non-confidence in himself and his staff. . . . The Editor and his staff also interpreted that reference to the H-Bomb issue as one of censure. . . .

"(The Editor) repeatedly affirmed the previous close co-operation that has existed between editorial and business staff and strongly supported its continuance and advisability, as did the Business Manager. . . . .

Non-Confidence Not Intended

"In passing the (motion) the SAC did not intend to imply non-confidence in the Editor, nor did the Council wish to challenge the discretion of the Editor or his judgment. . . . It was not intended that the motion imply censure of the Editor. . . .

"It was realized that there must be constant consultation between the Editor and the Business Manager of a news publication when matters relating to their combined spheres of interest are being considered . . . the Council felt (notwithstanding that this condition had existed before) that a definite motion shold . . . be adopted into the minutes (to guide the Editor and the Business Manager in the matter of removing scheduled advertising). . . .

"(This move) was a business-like manoeuvre, justified as such. . . .

"No conflict of a personal nature between individuals or groups of individuals has been responsible for any of the ideas or opinions that have been expressed in the discussion of the motion in question. There is no indication that personal conflict will arise in the future."

In view of these facts, Hetherington felt that the motion should be changed.

ISS Arranging Tours In Europe

Study tours are being arranged for all students in Canadian universities in Europe this summer through International Student Services. The purpose of the tours is to provide students with an opportunity to travel and study the economic, political and cultural trends in the countries visited. Informal groups, informed leadership and serious study themes will be characteristic of the tours besides studying with students of other lands.

Countries to be visited include Scandinavia, Great Britain, France, Holland, Germany, Italy and Austria. The cost will be approximately $350 for transportation and the daily cost averages about $4.50. Applications must be in the ISS office before March 15th and selection will be made on a basis of academic and personal qualifications, interests, and ability to make the summer's experience available to the student's campus.

Liquor Problems

Act will also be presented. Both of these topics were banned by Speaker Davies of the Ontario Legislature at the last Mock Parliament held in the parliament buildings. As a result, the Liberal Club resigned as government for that session. This will be the first time that these topics have been presented to a student parliament at Varsity.

VOX VARSITY

Notes from your radio columnist about to meet his last deadline (I hope). Only three more programs and this will end your programming for the year. Taken as a whole the year has been very successful. The co-operation from C.J.R.T. absolutely without comparison, (note to other bigger radio stations, why couldn't you take the same attitude?). The winners of our radio Script Writing Contest to be announced next week. Plans for your Radio Workshop will be submitted to the SAC at the next meeting. They include a system whereby we are able to broadcast to all the residences at the campus without the actual station facilities, proposed coverage of hockey, basketball and other sports events here, possibly through a local station, estimates of what your Workshop needs and the price of same.

The Remaining Broadcasting Schedule

To-night: With the exclusive issue of The Varsity devoted to the Hydrogen Bomb creating such comments, we are broadcasting over C.J.R.T.F.M. a discussion of this weapon. It will be a panel discussion made up of two Philosophy Professors, Professor Marcus Long from U.C. and Professor Northrop Frye of Vic; representing the Department of Physics is Professor Barnes recently returned from England. Professor Barnes while in England was employed in Atomic Research and Development. This program promises to be one of outstanding interest giving the listener inside information of the pro's and con's of the offspring of the Atom Bomb.

March 9th. The Robin Godfrey prize winner, Money for Jam by Hugh A. C. Shaw.

March 16th. The Loon's Necklace.

Movie Review

Sullivan's Travels

A 1941 hit, Sullivan's Travels has been revived by request at the Towne. Anyone who saw writer-director Preston Sturges' The Lady Eve or Miracle of Morgan's Creek will know that he is the ruthless champion of all cinematic tongue-in-cheek spoofers. A Sturges film is an organized melange of social consciousness, juicy dialogue, violent slapstick, realism and refreshing plot. The viewer finds himself laughing at his own ideas, intrigued by seemingly careless rehashes of the most ancient film wheezes, eating up scenes of unabashed schmaltz, and generally having a great time.

This one is all about an idealistic young Hollywood director (Sullivan) who eagerly sets out from his Beverly Hills mansion to ride the rails as a bum. This is in preparation for a social drama called "Oh, Brother, Where Art Thou?"—"a picture about garbage cans!" The studio execs, anxious to make a drama that "will put Shakespeare back with the Shipping News," follow their white-haired boy in a landyacht "complete with hot shower and a secretary." En route the dauntless innocent picks up a discouraged film extra (Veronica Lake), has his shoes stolen, inherits lice, is beat up and shanghaied in a railroad car and ends up doing six years in a chain gang. Meanwhile he gets a good look at real poverty—a breeder of filth, crime and despair. "The only people interested in it are theorists and the rich. The poor know all about it." But to lighten their burden, at least, he decides to make nothing but comedies. This seems to be Sturges' own philosophy. In fact, the picture is dedicated "To the memory of those who made us laugh."

Joel McCrea, like Henry Fonda and Eddie Bracken, is a favorite and typical hero of Sturges, who must have had him in mind when he wrote this. Miss Lake proves herself a surprisingly good comedienne. They make a good team. Also present and accounted for are such hilarious Sturges stand-bys as Wm. Demarest, Franklin Pangborn, Jimmy Conlin, Alan Bridges, Eric Blore and Almira Sessions. John (Lost Weekend) Seitz's photography is excellent and the movie is cleverly edited a la Lubitsch.

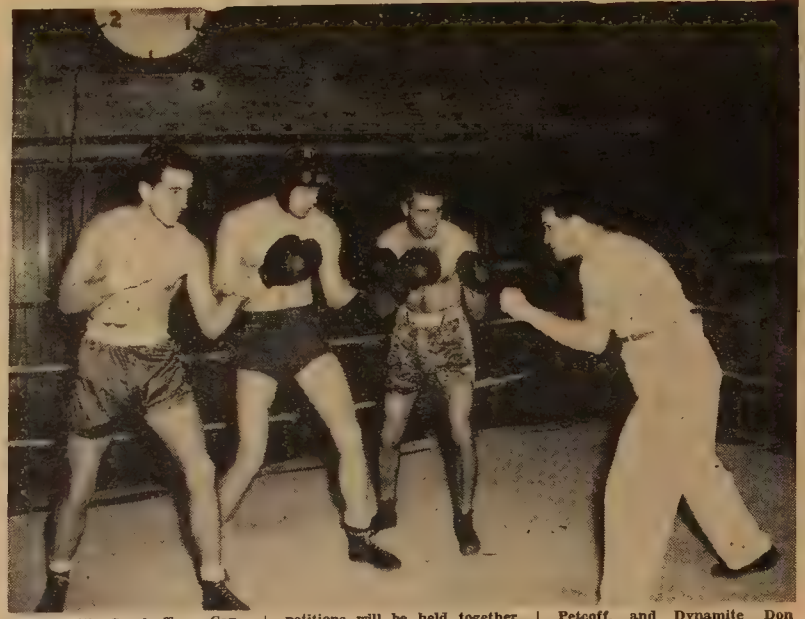
Blue Gals Stop Macs In B-Ball

Hamilton, Feb. 22—(Staff)—The All-Varsity female basketeers downed the McMaster squad 33-26 in their last exhibition tilt before the Intercollegiate tournament.

McMaster showed a decided improvement in style over their last encounter with the Varsity girls at Athletic Night a few weeks ago. The game was surprisingly close with the half-time score reading 12-12.

Alma Hatch took the Varsity scoring honours for the night with 10 points to her credit. Kay Schenck and Rosanna Kelly were close behind with seven and six respectively. Jane Timmins, Thelma Henderson and Mary Lewis were outstanding on the guard line for Varsity.



Stella Johnston was high-scorer for McMaster with a 10 point credit. Her team-mate, Donna Wallace was right on her heels with eight points.

Line-Ups

Varsity: Rosanna Kelly 6; Eleanor Lever 2; Margaret Doyle 4; Thelma Henderson, Alma Hatch 10; Beverly Morrison, Jane Timmins, Catherine Schenck 7; Ann Oakes, Mary Lewis, Denise Crowe, Karlyn Hollis.

McMaster: Lois Pond, Jean Price, Erica Thorne, Pat Collins, Esther Bingeman, Helen Trapnell, Donna Wallace 8; Dorothy Barton 5; Stella Johnston 10; Mary K. Joy 3; Evelyn McKinney, Elva Carrol.

Teacher And Pupils

Above with Coach Tony Canzano are from left to right, John Folinsbee, Tim Turner and Roberto Couceiro who will take part in the Senior and Intermediate Intercollegiate boxing tournaments held this year at Hart House — the eliminations tomorrow, and the finals Saturday. This is the first time the Senior and Intermediate competitions will be held together All the boys participating are either Interfaculty, or Intercollegiate champions, or former team members, and will furnish a good half dollar's worth of fistic entertainment. Toronto's teams will have such crowd pleasers as: Hammering Hank Henshall, three-time Intercollegiate champ, Punching Pete Petcoff, and Dynamite Don Armstrong, only to mention a few.

Last year, Toronto was second to Queen's in the Senior, held at Kingston, and tied with Western in the Intermediate, held at Guelph. This year, Toronto should win both championships.

Hoopsters Split In Doubleheader At McMaster U.

By JOHN DUGAN

Hamilton, Feb. 22—(Staff)—The Varsity Intermediates lost a fast, high-scoring cage contest to McMaster by a score of 74-51 in a doubleheader at Hamilton last night. The Juniors avenged the defeat in the second game, beating the Ram Juniors 48-39.

The McMaster Intermediates, league leaders, played a very fast, sharp game; their fast-breaking style outclassed the Blues sadly. They scored most of their points in close with expert manoeuvring under the hoop. Don Foreman was highest scorer with 18 points.

The Juniors capitalized on foul shots. They got 14 of twenty tries in this department. Binnington was Varsity's top man with 13 points, though Macoluso of Mac outdid him for individual scoring honors with 16.

Varsity Ints.—MacKenzie 17, Al Brown 8, Kettle 5, Rogers 4, Stevenson 3, Barbour 2, Cole 4, K. Brown 5, Denton 1.

McMaster—Harper 6, Dickenson 2, Link 11, Shelby 6, Mann 8, Fitzgibbons 3, Wrigglesworth 7, Violin 8, Mackam 1, Foreman 18.

Varsity Juniors — Binnington 13, Dancy 4, Glover 7, Elmer 6, Coopersmith 8, Wilson 3, MacDonald 4, Iwanicki 1, Dalgleish, Benton, Jackson.

McMaster Juniors — Macoluso 16, Mozewsli 10, Stevenson, Foster 5, McLay 1, Koluza 5, Glass 2, Elliot, Salmon.

SKI BUS

It looks like the ski enthusiasts will finally get a chance to make use of the university property at Newmarket. With all this snow around, and it looks as if it might stay, the Athletic Office has chartered a bus to leave for the grounds on Sunday. (See ad elsewhere on these pages.) All you frustrated skiers better get the wax out and get your reservations in.

Interfaculty Sport

St. Mike's "A" team sewed up one of the three basketball playoff positions in group one yesterday afternoon when they scraped by the much-improved senior Vic squad by a 28-26 count. The well-coached Mikemen were led by Bill Murphy with eight and Flynn with 5. Jumpin' Jack Milne topped the Vic list with seven, Elson and Reid following with six and five.

St. Mike's—McKeown 4, Carr 1, B. Murphy 8, D. Murphy, Warne 3, Vojtisek 4, Furhman 1, Kane 2, Farrell, O'Heany, Flynn 5, Murnane. Total: 28.

Senior Vic—Milne 7, Andrassy 4, Harris 3, Elson 6, Mackay, Ralph, Mackenzie 1, Reid 5. Total: 26.

Vic fifths latched on to their eighth win yesterday noon when they creamed Law "A" by a 34-25 score. Buck Huckle and Wallace led the Vic scoring parade with eight apiece with team-mate Pearce adding five. Big James Torrance was the largest calibre gun for the mouth-pieces, hurling in 13.

Vic V—Huckle 8, Murray 3, Wallace 8, Colbert 2, Pearce 5, Capel 5, Little 3, Turell, Goodfellow. Total: 34.

Law "A"—Bernstien 5, Arnold 2, Gorra 3, Rotstein 2, Torrance 13, Jenner, Burns. Total: 25.

On the minor league front Vic tenths squeezed past UC Einsteins 35-33 with Kelly, McGuire and Schatz swishing 10, 11 and 12. Jolly Joe Shapiro fired 12 for the quiz kids.

Meds fifths with Zuberman hitting the strings for eight rolled to a 31-21 victory over second Mechanicals. Nagata hooped 12 for the losers.

John Hryshko and Paul Forestell of St. Mike's showed the way Tuesday in the 440 yard indoor track meet posting times only a tenth of a second apart, Hryshko edging out Forestell in 53.9 to 54 even. John Dashwood of Trinity grabbed the show position in 54.2.

In the other event Bob Adare of SPS won the 50 yard hurdles in 6.4. He was followed to the wire by Bill Farlinger of Vic and Murray Gaziuk of UC in 6.5 and 6.6.

Trinity A's Win Over Skule 6-3 Howard Scores 3

By BARRY THOMAS

Trinity "A" duplicated their victory over senior SPS yesterday when they beat the Skulemen 6-3 in overtime. The game was a thrilling contest all the way with the Crumpetmen notching three goals in overtime. The game was a re-play of Monday's game. The re-play was caused by Trinity using an ineligible player in Monday's game.

Trinity took the lead in the first period on the strength of two goals by defenceman Ernie Howard. The skulemen missed many fine scoring chances and out-shot their rivals 9-5 in a fast moving 20 minutes of play. SPS drove back in the second to tie up the game on goals by Patterson and Crandell. McKay gave Skule a short lived 3-2 lead when he rapped in a pass from Sinclair and Coates at the 12:05 mark.

Howard then evened the score when he made a sensational end to end rush to complete his hat-trick.

In the overtime Trinity took advantage of Skule's penalties to rap in two quick goals and sew up the game. Wright and Whitehead were the marksmen. Tom Crera completed the scoring near the end of the five minute overtime period. The whole Trinity team played well with Brownell turning in a stand-out game in the nets. Sawyer and Sinclair were tops for Skule. Today Trinity meet Jr. Vic in the semi-finals while senior Vic take on St. Mike's "A".

Line-ups

Trinity—Goal, Brownell; defence, Pringle, Howard; centre, Cowan; wings, Leishman, Crerar; alternates, Bowden, Hall, Whitehead, Stewart, Wright, Lawson.

Sr. SPS—Goal, McKnight; defence, Hookings, Grant; centre, Mollenhauer; wings, Sawyer, Cunningham; alternates, Patterson, Crandell, Coates, McKay, Sinclair, Crema, Hiley, McColm.

Hockey

St. Mike's edged out Physio 3-2 in the quarter-final hockey encounter on Tuesday. The game was fast and showed promise of a better calibre of hockey in th ecoming final games.

Liz Little, Physio, made the first count early in the game. Theresa Bauer, St. Mike's, evened up the score towards the end of the canto.

Theresa Bauer came through again in the second period to give St. Mike's the lead. Betty Coo locked the score again in the last stanza. Things were tight but B. J. Fraser, St. Mike's, skated the length of the ice, drawing the Physio goalie out, to make the final count of the game. bating team from the University of finals playing PHE I tomorrow at 12:30.

More Hockey

The first semi-final game yesterday between Vic I and Meds went into overtime with Vic coming out on top of a 2-1 tally.

The first two stanzas were scoreless with Vic making several drives and the Meds goalie making a terrific stand.

Alison Jeffries from Di Rogers tallied in the first minute of the last period to give Vic the lead. Irene Hain tied the count in the last seconds of play, forcing an overtime session.

In the five minutes overtime Alison Jeffries went through the whole Meds team, drew out the goalie and made the final count of the game.

Vic will now go into the finals, playing the winners of Friday's game.

Exhibition Game

Vic I and PHE I have been invited to stage an exhibition tilt tonight at the annual carnival at Acton, Ontario.

Blues Meet McGill Here Friday Night Second Last Game

Wally Halder's ice men are all in fine fettle waiting for their important game with the McGill Redmen tomorrow night. The Blues have only two games remaining, the one tomorrow and one the following week with the loop leading Montreal Carabins. If the Blues win tomorrow and take the Carabins next Friday they will end up tied for the top position with U. of Montreal, who will undoubtedly be able to beat Queen's twice more. If the league ends up in a tie a play-off will be forced, otherwise there will be no post season games.

Bun Hayes was out of last week's game with a sprained ankle but may see action tomorrow. The rest of the team are injury-free and should be able to give McGill a real battle. In previous games with the Redmen the Blues have come out on top three times, but with diminishing margins, the last one being 3-1 for Toronto.

SAC Remains In Text Mart Sell All Fall

The Students' Administrative Council will operate the Used Book Exchange, as it did last year, the Council decided Wednesday night.

Operations this year will begin in the fall, and no books will be taken in this spring as was done last year. Student Service Committee Chairman Jane Hill reported to the Council that over 6,000 books had passed through the Exchange last year, and sales had gone over $8,000. Almost 1,100 people took advantage of the service.

The Book Exchange will operate at 119 St. George Street, behind the Drill Hall again next fall. The Exchange will open on Sept. 12th, and will remain open for at least six weeks, and possibly eight weeks if sales make it necessary.

Council approved the appointment of Alan Burns, IV Commerce and Finance student as Manager of the Exchange next fall. Burns ran the service last year. He will be paid $30 a week for six weeks, and for a period over that of two weeks if necessary. In addition Burns will receive a $70 bonus if the Exchange is run satisfactorily.

The manager is responsible for the running of the exchange, for all money received and paid out to students selling books. He will be provided with two senior assistants who will be paid 75 cents an hour. Any other assistants needed will be paid 65 cents an hour.

Voting last Wednesday night to support an increase in the present National Federation of Canadian University Students fee, the University of Toronto Students' Administrative Council put itself on record as the first student council in Canada to approve the necessary fees raise. The present fee is six cents per student. The proposed increase would bring the fee to 25 cents per student and would enable NFCUS to employ full time help.

Library Evening Features Discussion Of Rare Books

"Printing is a fine art", said Professor Bagnani, of the U.C. Classics Department, speaking at the Library Evening at Hart House last night. After defining a rare book as a book that is not common he went on to outline the factors which make a book valuable.

The fact that there are only a few copies of any single book extant does not automatically make it rare, he said. Some books gain their value from the author or from their academic interest, such as the early folios of Shakespeare or the works of Dunne, or there may be some factor in the production. Other books may obtain their value from the fact that they reflect their times and the mental attitude of the population at that time, he said.

He also outlined the best procedure for the avarage collector who desires to build up a worthwhile library. He warned that such a collector should stay away from the fields in which more wealthy interests were active, and advised specialization upon less well known but nevertheless significant authors, such as Peacock. He added that a reasonable idea of current prices

Call President Before Senate Re Agnostics

Kingston—(CUP)—G. De Re president of the Alma Mater Society has been requested to appear before the Senate to-day to explain the A.M.S.'s action in recognizing the agnostic club on the campus. This recognition came after Principal Wallace had issued a statement banning the club from the campus.

Historic Machine

One Bushel B.C.

By ED RASKY

With all the hokem pokem, harem scarem, of the H-Bomb—a new machine has moved on the campus and it almost goes by unnoticed. It has a screen large enough for television but it presents a much different and static picture. It resembles a slot machine (slightly) but it doesn't take slugs. (We tried.) It could be a Juke Box but there are no doloured lights and no music. When you insert a coin the only things that lights up are your eyes and the music you hear is the whirring hum of your "heart's desire."

The operation of the machine is very simple. First place a nickel in the slot, turn the knob to the right and nothing happens. After a minute elapses you start kicking the machine a few times with fuming words to match your emotions.

Then you decide to read the directions once more. It says to turn the knob to the left. This is followed by a noise similar to a cement mixer, at the same time the machine's legs dance to the tune of the Hop Scotch Polka and an object falls in dive-bomber like fashion with a resounding thud and there is a delicious rosy British Columbia apple.

The machine has a history far more interesting than the apple itself. It all began on the Shanty Bay Farms where the late Professor J. G. Hume of the University of Toronto, Philosophy Department, taught by day and watched his apples grow at night. His son Allan became fond of these apple orchards, watching over them like a proud father. But Allan wanted an education. He attended S.P.S., graduating in Mechanical Engineering in 1922, finishing with the Ontario College of Education and the teaching profession.

Mr. Hume began teaching in suburban high schools but his love for apples was not forgotten. He invested in the Apple-a-Day-Company but they didn't do well financially and Mr. Hume took over the business to run it in a small way. He had someone running the machines for him but strangely enough, he began losing money. He, as a result, operated the machines by himself.

A Plain Man

Mr. Hume taught for 15 years but he explained that the running around of refilling machines and filling the students' minds with knowledge wore him down. Now he spends all his time filling the machines.

Mr. Allan Hume is a man who dresses simply and insisted that he receives very little publicity. He offered me one of his delicious apples and between chews I listened as he explained what a tricky mechanism the machine has.

There are 30 things that can go wrong but this does not worry him since he has become an expert in repairing the machines. It has been in Hart House for two months now and if the demand is large enough—there it shall remain. The profits are shared by the Hart House Tuck Shop. The consumption is approximately a bushel a day.

Just a Service

Hart House isn't the only establishment with an Apple Machine for he has 15 altogether. He has them at Eaton's, the Star Building, Margaret Eaton School (P.H.E.) just to mention a few.

Mr. Hume who doesn't advertise said, "I run the business in a small way more as a service—for it promotes goodwill and at the same time distributes a healthy eatable product to the student body."

Incidentally, as an ex-school teacher, Mr. Hume affirmed that an apple placed on his desk didn't influence him one jot.

SAC Meeting

Up NFCUS Fees AVR To Be Pro

The All Varsity Revue will have a professional director next year, the Students' Administrative Council decided at its meeting Wednesday night.

Risk Too Great

"I am not convinced that the All Varsity Revue is a good idea unless it either makes money or is a much better show than any other on the campus," said AVR Chairman Nipper Benson, introducing the motion to bring a professional director in to run the show next year. "Having a professional director will mean a better, and a cheaper, show."

Miss Benson explained that the AVR had not made money this year, even though it had been a complete sell-out. Future AVR's might not get as good houses, and the Council had to make sure that it did not go into the red on the venture. In addition, there were very few students, probably not one in ten years, who could produce a professional show. For that reason, she felt that next years AVR director should be a professional showman.

Strongly Opposed

Opposition on the Council came from several members who felt that it is better to have a show that is not quite as professional but a completely student production. The motion was carried by a narrow margin.

Miss Benson's motion also provided that the AVR Committee of the SAC next year have two members instead of three, one to be the Chairman and the other the treasurer of the All Varsity campus show.

At Wednesday's meeting the Council also:

——Passed a motion authorising the Radio Committee to proceed with plans to co-operate with NFCUS to produce a radio show to be carried on the CBC. If the plan goes into operation Toronto will be expected to produce one show every six weeks.

——Accepted from the Medical Society $128 to establish a fund to be used to furnish the proposed Students' Memorial Union. The $128 was profit from the Medical Society sponsored All Varsity dance, Panacea.

——Decided to investigate the possibility of getting a workshop to be used by all faculties for building stage sets, painting, etc.

——Heard a report from the committee which investigated a proposed health insurance plan, and rejected the idea on the committee's

A raise in the fee for the National Federation of Canadian University Students from six cents per student to twenty-five cents per student was approved in principle by the Students' Administrative Council at its regular meeting Wednesday night.

The move came following a complete report of NFCUS activities both locally and nationally by Toronto NFCUS Chairman Tom Symons. Symons outlined the program being followed by the local committee of NFCUS and by the national executive.

Improvements Sought

The Toronto NFCUS Committee, Symons said, is at present carrying on an investigation to find ways to improve the federation nationally. One of the great troubles that NFCUS has, he explained, is a lack of continuity. Officers of the federation are elected annually, and are always students who have a great deal of local responsibility on their home campus. He pointed out the example of last year's NFCUS's President, Gordon Gwynne-Timothy, who was President of the Toronto SAC, Head of Arts at Trinity College.

"I never understood how he had time to be engaged too," said Symons. NFCUS at the moment has a "permanent" secretary treasurer, who is being paid for one and a half days work a week, but actually has about three days work a week to do. Don Seldon, the present secretary-treasurer is paid an $800-honorarium a year.

"If the executive of NFCUS is to be effective it must take on promotional activities," Symons said. To do this is needed a permanent office. For that reason the NFCUS Conference held in Ottawa last September recommended that the delegates return to their universities and seek a raise in the NFCUS fee from six to twenty-five cents.

Need National Support

By voting in favor of the increase Toronto became the first Canadian university to approve the move. Council discussed carefully whether the suggested amount was a good one, and were informed by Symons that it had been arrived at after careful study of the problem. If all

No Room For Amateurs

We are quite concerned about an undesirable precedent which may have been established as a result of a motion passed at last Wednesday's SAC meeting. The motion to replace a student director of the All-Varsity Revue with a professional director may well be the beginning of inter-SAC rivalry and in the end may lead to bad feeling among members of the most authoritative student body in the University.

Think of what could happen. The All-Varsity Revue hires a professional director; as a result the calibre of the show increases until it is rated in Variety as "better than 'South Pacific'". Naturally the chairman of the Music committee will begin to feel piqued that the University of Toronto Symphony is not mentioned just as favorably in Etude. Why, what will the students say when the Blue and White Band is not compared with the band of the Coldstream Guards?

Taking into account what could develop from such a beginning, we submit to the SAC list of motions that would scotch this almost inevitable trend and suggest that these motions be considered seriously at the Council's earliest convenience!

1. That the director of the University of Toronto Symphony and Chorus be appointed on the basis of professional experience.
2. That the Blue and White Band be composed of professional musicians only.
3. That Torontonensis and Varsity Editors be newsmen with considerable professional experience.
4. That the director of the Blue and White Society and all its activities be a professional publicity man.

We feel sure these motions, rough and unpolished as they may be, will do a great deal to smooth over possible, indeed probable, trouble in future SAC meetings.

A Wise Move....

The Students' Administrative Council has approved a move to raise the fee for the National Federation of Canadian University Students from six cents per student to twenty-five cents per student. This is a long overdue move and will be welcomed by those who are seeking some way to increase the value of NFCUS to Canadian students.

The Council is to be congratulated on this move, for once again it has taken the lead among Canadian Universities to provide leadership in national student affairs. NFCUS officials for some years have recognized the wisdom of increasing the fee to make it possible for NFCUS to establish a permanent national office.

Since the Federation was reorganized following the war it has been plagued with organizational difficulties on the national scale. In spite of yeoman service by the "part-time" Secretary-Treasurer, Don Seldon, it has been difficult to properly co-ordinate national activities. Seldon has another full-time job, and with insufficient funds for secretarial help it has not been possible for the national office to expand its services with the growing Federation.

NFCUS is now at the point where it is possible for it to take on greater and more important activities—IF—it has the organization. A large majority of Canadian students who do not at present really understand what the organization is or what it is doing need information on NFCUS. More promotion work and a greater emphasis on speed in getting out reports and communications is advisable.

While the jump in fee may seem large to many students, we feel sure that they will support NFCUS in this venture. Having proved itself, the Federation is ready to grow. The increased fee will make it possible to put the NFCUS on a strong basis. The national office will provide the necessary continuity necessary for any healthy, vigorous organization.

In the country papers when some one gets engaged, or married or has a child, a note appears at the bottom of the item, "So and so papers, please copy." To our fellow members of the Canadian University Press, and to the students they represent we say: "Toronto approves of the increase in the NFCUS fee to twenty-five cents. CUP papers please copy."

Good news deserves publicity.

Varsity Fills Requirements Says Debaters

The Resolution "That The Varsity does not fulfill its function as an organ of undergraduate opinion" was defeated yesterday by the second year finalists in the Portia Debates. The winning team, and winners of second year, were Pearl Parnes and Joan Easser, and the defeated affirmative were Carol Hopton and Inika Janechek.

Carol Hopton, first speaker for the affirmative, asserted that the opinion of The Varsity was biased. She was refuted by Pearl Parnes on the negative, who stated that the staff of The Varsity was made up completely of undergraduates, with the editor chosen from the staff, and final choice made by the undergraduate student government, the SAC. Furthermore, she stated, any dissenting opinions among the student body at large were given full opportunity to be expressed in the Letters to the Editor column.

Ad Space Condemned

The second speaker for the affirmative, Inika Janechek, condemned the large amount of space given to ads, and cited the example of the French Club, whose announcement of a meeting had been excluded from The Varsity for this reason.

Joan Easser concluded the remarks of the negative by showing that editorials and news stories discussed events relating to university life, and thus gave full coverage of student news, with opinion polls and Letters to the Editor giving full vent to the opinions of the students on all topics.

Archbishop Roy To Give Lecture On Canada Unity

The Most Reverend Maurice Roy, Archbishop of Quebec, will deliver this year's Duncan and John Grav memorial lecture at the University of Toronto. Archbishop Roy's address, entitled Parish Life and Democracy in French Canada, will be given in Convocation Hall, Tuesday, February 28.

"The lectureship," said Dr. Sidney Smith, "was established by George L. Gray, Ontario school inspector, as a memorial to his two sons who gave their lives with the R.C.A.F. Both young men were keenly interested in helping to promote Canadian unity and one bequeathed his estate for that purpose.

"When he established the fund for the lectures, Mr. Gray said that they should be designed to foster a clearer understanding of the contribution that the French Canadian element of our population has made and is making to Canada. Through wider knowledge we may hope that a sounder Canadian citizenship will develop.

"Previous lectures in this series, given by Rt. Hon. Louis St. Laurent, l'Abbe Arthur Maheux, and Madame Pierre F. Casgrain, aroused much public interest. We are fortunate that the Archbishop of Quebec has agreed to take part in this worthy enterprise."

Duncan and John Gray developed their interest in improving French-English relations in Canada when they visited Quebec on a summer student exchange plan. They were so impressed by French Canadian culture and life that they came back to Toronto and infused their father with some of their enthusiasm. In fact they convinced him he should visit Quebec later with them.

Fought For Truth, Liberty Goya Subject Of Lecture

Goya as an artist, moralist, and fighter for truth, liberty and justice, was described yesterday in a lecture by Dr. Martin Soria of Michigan State University. To an overflow crowd, Dr. Soria stressed the importance of Goya as a forerunner of imagery in modern art.

As a man who became stone deaf at the turning point in his artistic life, Goya found his inspiration in "visions" common to Spaniards of the 18th and 19th centuries. Some of his pictures are not only grotesque and horrible, but fill the spectator with fear.

Depicts Horrors

Although in personal life Goya's morals were questionable he was a great fighter for truth, tolerance and justice and a crusader against vice, lust, and stupidity, said Dr. Soria. In his pictures of the inquisition and the Civil War, Goya vividly depicts the horrors and realism of war and death. His scope was not limited, however, to the more gruesome sides of life; he was capable of painting intimate, dignified, and human portraits, much on the style of Gainsborough, he said.

Dr. Soria, with the aid of slides of the artist's work, demonstrated Goya's great power, especially in scenes of prisons and asylums. This man, born in the middle of the 18th century, anticipated eroticism as the main theme of literature and art. "Much of Goya's imagery revolves around sex — vile, heartless and cruel sex," said Dr. Soria.

First Great Modern

Goya, who was concerned not so much with realism, but with the impact of an image upon the mind, died in 1882, but his paintings cover the scope of the last hundred and fifty years in art. Dr. Soria said that some of our greatest modern artists have fallen back on the technique and imagery of the first great modern painter.

He concluded his interesting and amusing lecture by stating that "Goya conjured images with a sense of vitality — the type of vitality projected into dreams and the subconscious. He concentrated on the essentials, as does Picasso. Goya's greatness lies in his universal depth, breadth, and warmth because of human kindness, and the universal message he had to deliver."

Fourteen Students Going To Quebec NFCUS Seminar

Fourteen University of Toronto students will be able to go to the NFCUS-sponsored summer seminar in Quebec this summer, the local NFCUS committee has just been informed. Although there was great doubt for some time whether girls could be accommodated at the Richelieu River fort that is to be the site of the seminar, information has also been received that it will be coeducational.

12 Professors To Help

The 14 from Varsity will be among about 100 that will spend three weeks at Fort Lennox, on a Richelieu River island, under the direction of a dozen professors from across the Dominion, from Aug. 14 to Sept. 4. Topic of the seminar will be "A general view of Canada."

All expenses except railway fares will be paid for the students. Most of the subsidy will be paid by the Quebec Government.

Each student will buy his own round-trip ticket to the conference. But when he arrives in Fort Lennox he will pay $40 into a common pool and from this fund will be reimbursed the amount of his individual fare. Thus each student will pay $40 for transportation, whether he comes from Montreal or from British Columbia.

Want Leaders

Selection of Varsity candidates for the seminar will be made by a joint student and staff committee, to be chosen soon. The general qualifications will be as follows: "Eligibility will be limited to students of high academic standing who are to return to university the following year and have demonstrated leadership ability in student affairs."

The membership of the selection committee will be announced next Wednesday. On the same day application forms will be available at both SAC offices. Three reference letters must contribute information regarding applicants' adaptability, maturity, stability and participation in student activities.

Applicants are also expected to have a "working knowledge" of French.

Has Good Transportation

At Fort Lennox there are facilities for swimming and canoeing, and Montreal is within easy travelling distance by bus and train. Special transportation has been arranged for the duration of the seminar, and there will be sight-seeing tours.

The seminar was arranged this year only after many years of hoping and planning by NFCUS. The University of Montreal NFCUS Committee organized the successful effort this year, under the leadership of Jean Provost and Gilles Bergeron.

The general study of Canada will come under three heads: economic, history and geography and humanities.

Joint Course With Diploma For Therapies

Occupational and Physical Therapy have amalgamated to form a diploma course under the direction of the Medical Faculty, said Dr. Sidney Smith, President of the University, in a news release yesterday. The new course will take effect in the fall of 1950, the report stated.

Graduates of this three year course will not be granted degrees. If they wish to specialize in one therapy they will be required to intern in a hospital. The faculty of Medicine has recognized the value of the combined courses and a wide field is open to the young women who have trained in this course. The demand is exceeding the supply now and it is believed that it will be even greater with the girls being trained in both techniques. Hospital, mental institutions, and rehabilitation centers are able to finance one centre for therapy facilities but not two and the University of Toronto has accommodated them by combining the two.

Separate For 20 Years

For twenty years the courses have remained seperate under the Department of University Extension. Freshmen students who entered either course last term will complete their training in the next two years, but by 1952 only the combined course will exist.

The new course will be a three year course with no compulsory interning during summer months. Entrance requirements and fees will remain the same as they were under the old system. Chemistry and Physics will not be obligatory subjects and the students will have a choice of four sciences.

The University of Toronto is the only university in Canada to have an Occupational Therapy course, and Toronto and McGill are the only ones with a Physical Therapy course.

55,000 Students

High Registration In Paris

Paris—(Special) — European, and particularly French, students have a reputation for being intellectually and socially more mature than students of the New World. Present-day facts do not, in the writer's opinion, support this reputation. True, French students are hard workers, even drudges. They take lecture notes feverishly and read copiously. The shadow of a drastic examination failure rate—as high as 85 per cent in some courses — hangs over them. But if their hard work produces any of the results expected from a Canadian education—maturity, for example — the evidences of it are few. Student behavior in such places as university reading rooms and Latin quarter cinemas would probably be considered childish even in Canadian high school circles.

Student enrollment is high. During 1948-49, there were slightly more than 55,000 registrations at the University of Paris. Of those, some 4,000 were foreign students, and another thousand were from the French colonies. The Faculty of Law is, by far, the most popular. Its enrollment was almost 25,000, twice as large as that of the Faculty of Letters.

Apart from the Cite Universitaire, the University of Paris offers its students no amenities such as those to which Hart House members are accustomed. The "Cite", as it is called, is too far away from the university to be frequented by students other than those living there. To reach it from the Latin Quarter, it is necessary to take one of the city's slowest and most heavily-travelled subway lines. The Cite itself consists of some twenty residences for the students of various countries, as well as of France. The Maison Canadienne has the distinction of having been the first foreign students' residence constructed after the Cite was founded a quarter of a century ago.

In addition to the residences, there is a Maison Internationale. It is a sort of co-educational "student Union," such as many North American universities have, although its distance from the university tends to restrict its use. Its operation is entirely out of student hands, and there is nothing resembling the Hart House committee system. Built twenty years ago as a result of Rockfeller donations, the Maison Internationale contains a gymnasium, swimming pools, a library, a theatre, a snack bar and two cafeterias. The snack bar serves not only snacks but also beer, wine, and a newly-introduced drink — poisonous, according to the left-wing Paris newspapers — called soft drink Coca-Cola.

Cases of Coca-Cola poisoning, as well as other maladies, can be treated at the Cite's little hospital, which is government - supported. Each University of Paris student receives a thorough examination annually at the hands of the University's medical service, which concerns itself principally with tuberculosis detection. To Canadians, the most striking and admirable aspect of this effective fight against tuberculosis among students seems to be the governmental policy of founding and helping to support, by subsidies, student dining halls. This scheme has almost wiped out the malnutrition which was formerly a major cause of tuberculosis among French students.

Including the two cafeterias at the Cite Universitaire, there are about ten other such eating places for students. Each has a fixed price, which ranges from sixty francs (twenty cents) to ninety francs. The actual cost of providing the meal is thirty francs more than the price paid by the student, the difference being contributed by the government. As with all restaurants, student restaurants vary from good to bad. At some, students stand in line, cafeteria-style, for thirty minutes or more, only to receive un-appetizing food. At others, meals comparable to those of the average Paris restaurant are served to the students seated at tables.

The dining hall of the College St. Barbe, where several Canadians eat, is typical of the latter group. Its chefs perform the minor miracle of maintaining the high standards of the French cuisines. Although some eight hundred meals are served at noon, and five hundred more at seven o'clock in the evening, the results almost always avoid the appearance of institutional cooking. For the equivalent of twenty-five cents, the student receives soup or hors d'oeuvres; an entree, two vegetables (the second as a separate course, in the French tradition), dessert, beer at noon, wine in the evening.

Egbert says "Now I have to make sure my kid brother passes, too!"

"MY BANK" B of M

With that kid brother of his in tow, Egbert finds things are tough all over.

But — at the risk of being repetitious — there is one problem he learned to solve long ago. That's the problem of how to make sure he always has money for every emergency. He operates a "fatality fund" at "MY BANK", never runs out of cash any more, since he started dropping his spare cash into his B of M account. Now he's got the saving habit.

Movie Review

Intruder In The Dust

Intruder In the Dust, at the Uptown, is a beautifully made film combining Hollywood's admittedly superior technical prowess with the intelligent and realistic dramatic sense of top director Clarence Brown. To shoot this film version of William Faulkner's novel, Brown, whose work includes The Yearling and The Human Comedy, took his cast and crew to Faulkner's home town of Oxford, Miss., and used the townspeople as extras. The result is an extremely tense and gripping motion picture, which should be seen from the beginning to be fully appreciated.

If this reviewer may be allowed to express a personal opinion: Pooey to people who say Hollywood doesn't make mature movies. The recent series dealing with racial prejudices have proved otherwise. This is the fourth chronologically, but certainly not in order of merit. It approaches the subject of racial prejudices in a different way. Actually it is a murder-mystery, with biting sociological reflections. A "white" man has been shot in the back. An old Negro is wrongly accused and thrown unceremoniously into jail, where he is too proud to talk, although, and perhaps because, he knows the mob coming to burn him aren't interested in the truth. A young boy and and old lady are interested—enough to open a grave at midnight with surprising results. It's not hard to figure out who the murderer is, but you'll be squirming nervously before you see what happens.

For not gumming up the picture with a love story, our hearty thanks to Mr. Brown. This master of atmosphere has administered some lovely touches, including an effective flat tire and siren combination as the prisoner is brought into town. In fact, both the sound effects and photography are excellent throughout.

Claude Jarman, Jr., and David Brian are good as the boy and his lawyer uncle, with fine support from Porter Hall and Charles Kemper in lesser roles. Stealing the picture, however, are screen newcomer Juano Hernandez as the proud old man and veteran Elizabeth Patterson as the old lady.

Intruder In the Dust is one of five pictures included on both the New York Critics' and the National Board of Reviews' "10 Best" list.

In buying current works, with regard to future value, he suggested certain private press books. He outlined the criteria for a well-made book, especially accenting the importance of well-set type. He said that the font is important but not the only factor, adding that the arrangement of the word on the page was important. The proportion of text to margin and the avoidance of "rivers" of blank space running through the page are also important. But the main requirement is that the lines of type read horizontally, avoiding short words at the ends of subsequent lines which draw attention downwards.

He later contrasted American with English contemporary typography, and noted that the English avoid the hyphenation of words and produce a better-looking page, while the Americans don't seem to care. He stated finally that he considered that Canadian printing is currently easily holding its own in comparison with all foreign work.

Varsity Reps In Force For SCM Meet

Last weekend some 500 university students met in Detroit for a Regional Missionary Conference of the Inter-Varsity Christian Fellowship. Of the 46 universities and colleges representing 12 states, University of Toronto had the largest delegation, 62 in all.

The weekend conference was the culmination of a series of meetings throughout the preceeding week in which missionaries from all over the world reported on the needs and conditions of their particular areas.

These reports were summed up on Saturday night by Dr. Robert Smith, Professor of Philosophy and Religion, Dubuque University, Iowa. His subject: "The Challenge of the Unreached," emphasized the duty of Christians from all walks of life to make Christ known to that half of the world which has never heard His name.

Debate Vote Urges Strict Liquor Policy

A Liberal bill aimed at tightening up the government's liquor policy was backed up by a UTDU Mock Parliament vote of 22-12 last night in the JCR. The CCF amendment asking that the liquor industry be publicly owned was defeated 20-14.

The Liberal bill, supported by the LPP and the majority of the CCF, proposed that liquor education be included in the curriculum of secondary schools, that all municipalities be granted local option before any increase in outlets be permitted, and that there be a more stringent application of the law to reduce the number of existing outlets.

The speaker of the house, Campbell Caulder, Liberal M.P. from London, answered an objection to aside remarks by saying he would tolerate them as long as they were good humor, for they added to the spirit of the debate.

ART MUSIC DRAMA

Missa Solemnis

On Wednesday the Mendelssohn oir performed Beethoven's Missa olemnis, opus 123, better known the Mass In D. This mass is eculiarly interesting not only in ture, but also in its context and ting; perhaps this is the greatest ample of a secular mass. Instantly jections will be raised that this rk was composed especially for a urgical occasion of some magni- de, i.e., the installation in 1820 the Archduke Rudolph to the chbishopric of Olmutz and, fur- rmore, that, in the words of ogram notes: "The music is so mpletely an illumination of the ner meaning of the text for the mposer."

Nevertheless, we repeat that just Palestrina wrote his liturgical usic firmly imbedded in the atholic Substance, so did J. S. ach write his from the point of iew of the Lutheran Chorale, the esangenbuch, in fact, from the rotestant Principles. But Beethoven as not of either of these types. eethoven was a product of the Age f the Enlightenment and Reason; e stood outside ecclesiastical hier- rchy and systemization. He watched nd he wondered, and his love, his assion, was man-centred. Now this what we see in the Mass In D; r this reason its finest moment robably is the intermezzo between he Sanctus and the Benedictus, and ow very unreligious (in the strict ense) this is.

The program had one inter- ission, after the "Quoniam tu olas," and what happened back- tage during that time we shall ever know, but at all events the onduct of the performance changed erceptibly. No longer did the horus slur its way through the ords like some tired dog in the now; even its shrillness was less ainful to our ear, and, joy of joys! he quartet at last showed signs of fe, even of brilliance. Unhappily he imported bass was manifestly ore accustomed to Italian Opera nd seemed blissfully unaware from first to last that this was not an- other Aida; indeed by the time the Benedictus was reached even your reviewer was experiencing "doubts."

However, if we were, from time to time, troubled within us, to be sure the Amens of the Credo and the Benedictus quartets were so sublime that we forgave all, or almost all. Of such is the eternal moment.

Mihail Dumbelluk.

CBC Wed. Night

On Wednesday night this week the CBC very ambitiously adapted a French comedy and presented it in English. Produced by Rupert Kaplan of the Montreal studio, Le Bourgeois Gentilhomme by Moliere still managed to amuse in spite of its foreign medium.

Gallic humour never lends itself too well to translation. English idioms are generally inadequate to the task of expressing the French 'phrase d'esprit'. Ronald Hambleton's translation almost overcomes these language difficulties but even where he accomplishes the near impossible and captures the exact nuance of meaning of the author he is doomed to frustration, for English people by and large do not think along quite the same lines as do the French, and 'la situation tres amusante' doesn't seem particularly funny to them.

Moliere has been called "the greatest of comic dramatists" and while this may be a little overenthusiastic his characters certainly have an agelessness that manages to bridge the gap of 300 years and a strange language and culture. They bring to the Canadian audience of today the same caricature of human vanity that captivated the court of Louis XIV.

Monsieur Jourdain, the wealthy bourgeois who fancies that wealth confers gentility (he was born just 300 years too soon) was played with restraint and fine understanding by Albert Miller. Eleanor Stuart as Madame Jourdain, provided a perfect foil for her husband; as sensible as Jourdain was vain, her caustic ridicule shattered the self proclaimed Gentilhomme's pretensions in all eyes but his own.

The musical portion of the evening was very much in keeping with the mood of play. The highlight was an orchestra suite, Le Bougeois Gentilhomme, by Richard Strauss, conducted by Jean Beaudet.

Cesare Borre conducted a program of 19th century French composers Gabriel Pierne and Guillaume Lekeu. Included was Pierne's 'Ballet de Cour', a suite of six dances which were very popular in the court of Louis XVII, and which have lost none of their charm.

Jean Baptiste Luly, chief musician of the court of Louis XIV composed the excellent ballet music for the play itself.

ATHLETIC DIRECTORATE ELECTIONS

1950-51

The Electoral Meeting of the University of Toronto Athletic Association to elect representatives to the Directorate for 1950-51, will be held on Thursday, March 9th, at 4 p.m. sharp, in the Debates Room, Hart House (south side, upstairs).

Under the Constitution of the Athletic Association (Article IX, section 4), all Athletic Club Executives are entitled to send representatives to this meeting. These representatives must be male undergraduates of the University of Toronto or one of the affiliated colleges, who are proceeding to a degree, are in actual attendance upon lectures, and who have paid the annual fee required (By-law 1). The Club Executives are being notified to meet at an early date, appoint their representatives and give them their credentials, for the electorial meeting. On presentation of these credentials at the Athletic Office on the morning of March 9th representatives will will be given voting tickets.

A student to be elected to the Directorate must, at the time of his nomination, be in the second or higher year of his course, at the University, but not in his final year. The nominations must be in writing on the form provided for the purpose, signed by two male undergraduate members of the Athletic Association, in good standing, and filed with Secretary of the Athletic Association not later than 6 p.m. Monday, March 6th. The nomination form may be obtained at the Athletic Office.

Secretary, University of Toronto Athletic Ass'n

Trinity And Mikemen Enter Hockey Finals

Red And Gold Puckmen Lose Both Chances

Saint Michael's College and Trinity A's moved into the finals of the interfaculty hockey championships by virtue of wins in yesterday's action. The Mikemen came from behind a two goal deficit to cop the honors from Senior Vic 5-2. In the night encounter the buttery boys edged past Junior Vic 9-8 after a thrilling comeback from behind a 7-0 count by the Vic club. Crerar of Trinity was top man in the contest with three goals and two assists while Stuart picked up two counters and an assist. The St. Mike's scoring was divided evenly between Robertson, Prendergast, Milne, McKillop and Kelly.

Fistic Hopeful Tees Off

Pictured above is Frank Corner of the Senior boxing team who will perform in the intercollegiate fistic tourney which takes place this afternoon, tonight and tomorrow night. He fights in the 140 pound class and the way in which he tees off at that heavy bag is a sure indication of the power he packs in each mitt. The night show will go on at eight p.m. and seats can be obtained by calling MI. 8775 or by purchasing at the door. Western, a new entry, Queen's, McGill and OAC will vie with their hosts for the title won last year by Queen's in the senior division. Toronto tied Western in the intermediate last year.

Speaking Of Sport

By BOB DNIEPER

The Intercollegiate boxing finals are being held here this year, and as a special attraction, Western will have a team entered. On paper they haven't got a heck of a lot, but in a game like box-fighting, where a lucky punch could ring down the curtain, paper charts don't mean very much.

Anyhow, knowing the way our boys fight (especially in the middle weights) we feel we will enjoy the evening. We fully expect Varsity to extract revenge for the football season.

Tony Canzano, the Varsity coach, certainly has the right idea in training his boys, though. He teaches them to fight cute and to stay away from punches. He figures that a guy at school shouldn't get his brains scrambled for the sake of a boxing championship, which is just the way we see it. It's okay to take credit for being able to dish it out, but the credit you get for taking it just isn't worth all that taking.

The Boxing Blues may not have the polish and ability of professionals, but they have something that very few pro's have. And that is desire and enthusiasm; they fight for the fun of it, they only get one or two bouts a year, and they fight for only three years at the most, so as far as they're concerned, each bout is the big one. We have watched many Intercollegiate bouts, and we find that there is

Replacements Dot Blues, Redmen At Varsity Tonite

Trouble always seems to come in bunches for the Blues. Besides the fact that both wingmen on the first line are out with arm injuries, that Wilf Digby is suffering from the flu, that Pete Vernon has open-end another gash in his forehead, that Bun Hayes' ankle is still doubtful, and that John Addison has gone south to hibernate, the Blues are in pretty good shape for the match with McGill here tonight.

The one good dream in Wally Halder's nightmares is Paul Kavanaugh's return to the blue line patrol. Paul played for the Blues last year, but decided not to play this year because he wanted to get good marks this year in order to qualify for post-grad work. He is filling Addison's spot beside Joe Kane, and opposing puck-carriers are finding him a tough customer in practices. His arrival appears to have had a good effect on Joe's play, too.

Wes Moore has developed a bad infection on his elbow due to constant bashing throughout the season, and will likely be out for the season. Norm Fox was skating around yesterday in practice, but his wrist will not be better till next week. He will play in a cast against the Carabins. Cece Turcott is the only man on the line to survive.

Skiing

The Athletic Office has chartered a bus to leave for the university property at Newmarket on Sunday. All undergrads are automatically members of the University Ski Club. By paying twenty-five cents for a badge, the members are entitled to the use of the university ski grounds.

Return fare on the bus will be only one dollar per. The bus leaves Hart House at 9:00 a.m. and starts the return trip at 4:30 p.m.

John Rankin, V Architecture, will be on hand to take charge of the buses and to act as instructor for all those interested in getting some pointers.

All you ski enthusiasts better get the wax out and your reservations in early.

Hockey

The game between St. Mike's and PHE I previously scheduled for today has been postponed until 4:00 p.m. Tuesday.

The winners of this game will play off for the championship with Vic I next Wednesday and Friday. All these games should be well worth seeing.

Six Free Bouts On Prelim Card This Afternoon

Six intermediate intercollegiate boxing bouts will be held in the Hart House gym this afternoon as part of the Intercollegiate Boxing Championships which are being held here tonight and tomorrow night. This sextet of top-notch slugfests has a special charm near and dear to the hearts of most of the student fight fans. The afternoon session will be admission free to all and sundry.

Five Varsity boxers will participate in the afternoon card as the U. of T. men gained only one bye into the finals of the intermediate tourney. These bouts (quality guaranteed by Mac McCutcheon) will determine six entries for the night bouts promise to be hot, heavy and well contested affairs. They will get under way at two thirty in the big gym.

Editorial

Only last year the first All-Varsity Revue was born. It was to unite all faculties and colleges into a Varsity-conscious whole.

The Revue was conceived as a medium which would perennially bear fruitful benefits to a host of students. That the aspirations of the founders were abundantly fulfilled is made evident by this quote from the 1949-50 U. of T. Students' handbook:

"With the support of the Council the first new All-Varsity Revue appeared in 1949 and its unquestionable success confirmed its position as a permanent institution in the undergraduate life of the U. of T. It offers perhaps more than any other campus show, opportunities for talent, actors, singers, dancers, set designers, costumes, muscians, writers, directors, etc., and due to its great scope is successful, in no small measure in promoting an All-Varsity Spirit!"

One big thing that makes the Revue so appealing to so many is its freedom from commercialism. Uninhibited by mercenary demands, students reach high levels of achievement through letting their energies flow unhampered towards goals they have set themselves. Their efforts are not channelled into a pattern set by an overseer who is motivated by the desire to produce his own bread and butter. The behind-the-scene workers, the performers, and the audience identify themselves with the production. Some work hard; all have FUN.

But now the SAC has defeated the purpose of the All-Varsity Revue by deciding to hire a paid professional director.

Another beautiful bubble is broken.

ISS Study Tours Deadline Coming Cost To Be Low

Study tours in France for Canadian university students are planned by ISS this year. Deadline for applications is March 15, and the boat leaves from Quebec City on June 26th.

The object of the tours is to acquaint the Canadian students with the economic, social, and cultural life of their European counterparts, and simultaneously to allow their hosts to gain an unbiased and first-hand account of students' life in Canada.

The tours will cost between $650 and $750, far less than most comparable offerings, since the ISS guarantees ship passage for $325, even though such is at present difficult to obtain at any price.

Hope For Understanding

It is hoped that the students who go on the tours will trade ideas freely with those people they meet, and bring back to their own campi their impressions of Europe, so increasing international understanding.

The tours will be small, composed of about twenty students each, of whom six will be Europeans. There will be eight such tours, all in different parts of Europe, and ranging in length from two to eight weeks. The first series begins July tenth in order to coincide with the docking of the ship in Rotterdam, and the second shorter series commences August tenth.

PLAY BANNED AT HART HOUSE

THE VARSITY

VOL. LXIX, NO. 90 THE UNIVERSITY OF TORONTO Wednesday, March 1, 1950

UC Players' Entry Scuttled By UTDC Without Reading

On the basis of a few lines read out of context, Jean-Paul Sartre's existentialist one-act play, "No Exit", was banned from the stage of the Hart House Theatre stage in the recent Drama Week-end, the play's director, John Howe, III UC charged yesterday.

Play Not Read

"None of the members of the University of Toronto Drama Committee (UTDC) had read the play," Howe continued, "but after hearing a few lines read to them by Hart House Theatre Director, Robert Gill, the UTDC decided the play was not suitable for presentation at Hart House."

The charge against the play was one of immorality. Of the three characters in the one-acter, one is a lesbian and one a nymphomaniac.

"'No Exit' is a morality play and as such must mention some of life's seamier side," Howe added. "Reading a few selected lines out of their context is a most unfair way of judging the general tone of any play. 'No Exit' is a work of Art.

"This whole affair is just another indication of the way students are allowing themselves to be led and told instead of leading and telling."

Howe said he had refrained from bringing charges earlier because he feared he would be accused of "seeking publicity and raising a stink for the stink's sake. Now, I can say this without being accused of trying to swing some weight to get Hart House Theatre for the play," he continued. The play is being staged tonight at the Women's Union Theatre by the UC Players' Guild.

Almost two weeks after the meeting of the UTDC which banned the play, a special meeting was to have been called to allow Howe to state his case and read the play to the members, the student director said. "That meeting was never held because Robert Gill called a rehearsal for 'Othello' on the same night and almost all the members of the Drama Committee are 'Othello' cast members," Howe said. "This move effectively scuttled any plan to leave the final decision in student hands."

The University of Toronto Drama Committee which banned the play is composed of representatives from various college and faculty drama societies.

Mr. Gill and members of the UTDC were not available for comment last night.

Archbishop Roy Sees

Democratic Basis In French Parish

One hundred and fifty years before the British introduced parliamentary institutions in Canada the French Canadian parish had the "essential features" of democracy, Archbishop Roy of Quebec pointed out last night in Convocation Hall.

Describes Co-operatives

Speaking on "Parish Life and Democracy in French Canada", the Archbishop described democratic features of the parish organization and of various economic organizations, such as cooperatives, that have grown out of the parish.

The strong support of democratic economic endeavors by the clergy is based on the encyclical "Quadrageimo Anno" of Pope Pius XI, Archbishop Roy said. Quoting from the encyclical, he showed the way the State in modern society has been swamped by the effort to supply the need of individuals. Therefore, the encyclical had concluded, "The supreme authority of the State ought to let subordinate groups handle matters and concerns of lesser importance, which would otherwise dissipate its efforts greatly."

Long Democratic

The parish has long been democratic, the Archbishop said. "As early as 1645, the parishioners of Notre Dame de Quebec elected the first three churchwardens mentioned in our history," he stated. These wardens have strong control over administration of the parish, especially in financial affairs, he continued. No major expense could be incurred by the parish without the consent of the wardens.

Among the democratic economic organizations described by the Archbishop were the 1,078 Quebec credit unions, with 600,000 members.

The clergy had also helped develop the Canadian Catholic Confederation of Labor, with nearly 100,000 members. Chaplains attached to the unions could give advice but "It does not not belong to the bishop nor to the chaplain to give the laborers an order to strike; neither can the bishop or chaplain tell them to resume work."

Quebec Seminar Forms Ready

Application forms for the Quebec summer seminar sponsored by NFCUS are available today in both SAC offices. With the application forms there can also be got an outline description of the seminar.

The application committee has been chosen to select successful applicants.

Literary Issue

The annual Literary Issue of The Varsity will be published this Friday. The prize winning entries will be carried in a special eight page supplement and judges' comments on the entries will be published also.

All those who have submitted material for the Issue will be able to pick up their entries on Friday and all days following.

The Literary Issue is usually published in the fall term but scarcity of material at that time necessitated the extension of final date of entry.

Staff Vote

All staff members are reminded of the election for the 1950-51 Editor-In-Chief of The Varsity to be held this coming Friday in West Hall, UC, at 5 p.m.

Bookstore Asks Used Textbooks To Hold Discount

An appeal to the students to boycott the Macmillan Company of Canada, the Oxford University Press, and Thomas Nelson and Sons, publishers, was issued yesterday by Alex Rankin, manager of the University Press. He also asked that students round up all second-hand texts for resale by the bookstore. He said this represented an attempt by the Press to keep the discount policy despite the refusal of sales by these companies.

Soapbox Season

Campus Politicking Capers

The campus has been rocking with elections and campaigning for the last week, and will be for another three weeks until the returns are in from the various faculties for their new executives for the year 1950-51.

Last Friday fifty per cent of the engineers voted in John Folinsbee for the presidency of the Engineering Society, and "Scotty" Mairs is the 1st vice-president, while Dave Armour will be the new manager of the Engineering Stores as 2nd vice-president.

Bill Turner will be 4th year SAC Rep, his third year in a row on the University council. Miss Lois Hutchings has been successful again in her campaign for 3rd year SAC Representative.

Across the Front Campus University College is in the midst of preparations for their annual voting. The final meeting of the UC Lit will be held tomorrow night in the JCR, and the main issue will be the nominations of the next year's executive.

Also on the program for the Lit meeting are the reports from the retiring body of executives, election of the winner of the Maurice Cody Prize for contribution to college undergrad life and nomination of UC's male candidate for the Moss Scholarship.

The offices for nominations will include President, four Directors, Secretary, Treasurer, SAC rep. three Year Presidents, and other Year executives. The UC elections will take place on Thursday, March 9.

At the North end of the caimpus the VCU announces three acclamations in their forthcoming elections. The remaining nine positions are to be contested March tenth.

The new Treasurer, Social Director, and Athletic Director will be Bill Farlinger, Rich Howson, and John Rhane respectively. All these are in by acclamation.

Contesting the presidency are Don Dowson and Bruce Bone, from 5T1, and the candidates for vice-president are John Devereux, and Lorne Lodge from 5T2.

The Medical Faculty will hold their elections on Monday March 6th. The campaign speeches, the main part of the Meds election, will take place Friday in Hart House theatre. This is the time when all the various candidates tell their dirty jokes, and make their promises to the electorate. Gord Cameron is the only nominee for the Medical Society presidency to date, and Syd Wax and John Evans will fight it out for the vice-presidency.

The Hart House elections will take place March 8th, and all the students not too lazy or uninterested will have a chance to exercise their franchise.

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 1, 1950

No See, No Hear, No Play

The members of the University of Toronto Drama Committee should look for the nearest exit.

On January 27th the students on this committee banned the Jean-Paul Sartre play "No Exit". These students have a keen sense of drama values. They banned "No Exit" for reason of objectionable content. Moreover, they banned the play without seeing or reading the Horrid Thing.

Yesterday we saw "No Exit". We found it deeply moving, thoughtful—in short, an excellent piece.

We would take our mother to see "No Exit."

The UTDC is a committee elected by students, organized for the purpose of correlating drama engagements on this campus. There is also a secondary aim of improving drama generally.

But underneath any written aim of the Committee runs the common ideal on which all student committees function—to represent the students in a responsible fashion.

The students of this Committee, in banning the play, took the word of a professional director, Mr. Robert Gill, that the play was objectionable. We have always enjoyed a Gill production, and appreciate his efforts. He is a fine artist. He is entitled to hold opinions.

Possibly there has been some self-recrimination by the committee in the realization that it acted in a lazy, unthinking fashion. But the students on that committee, or any committee, must realize that they are there to speak for the students—and no excuse is acceptable when they shirk this duty. We don't believe students would condemn an unseen, unread play.

ART MUSIC DRAMA

Othello

As the curtains closed on Saturday's opening performance of William Shakespeare's Othello, this year's final Hart House Theatre production, I knew why director Robert Gill had cut the Clown from the third act.

Iago played the fool throughout the play.

Radical and near-ludicrous, Ted Follows' misconception of Iago almost destroyed the play. As protagonist of the action, Iago sets the tone and mood from which his evil springs. Far from diabolic or malignant, Follows achieved only an athletic adolescent whose buffoonery drew from every scene he played. The soliloquies, which ought to simmer with intensity were mere informal chats set off in blatant light.

Nobility and honour are the two qualities essential to the role of the Moor. Enhanced by magnificent costuming and natural build, David Gardner did justice to the part in al. but speech and stance. Too calculated and indefinite, his entry fell flat with his first line. Only in rare moments: demoting Cassio and denouncing Desdemona did he approach the magnitude required by the role. His lines lacked emphasis and intensity, were so many words in blank verse, culminating in a questionable death scene at the end.

Just as Iago was pervertedly strong, so Alla Filppula's Desdemona was offensively weak. Apart from her singing of the Willow Song, Miss Filppula overacted for the most part—her gestures artificial, her posture strained and taut.

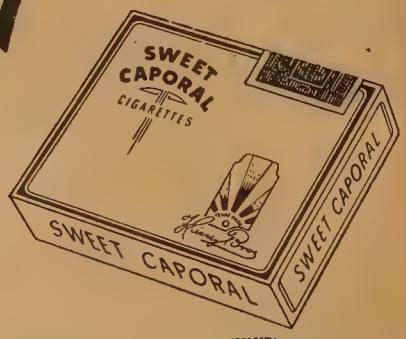
Best scene in Othello was the drinking scene — where Iago ensnares Cassio into a brawl to bring about his ruin. On a built-up set of three planes, Robert Gill has grouped the cast so skilfully as to present a minimum of characters in a scene panoramic and spectacular in effect.

Avoiding vitality and strength in his portrayal, John Finlay managed the part. Generally too loose in movement, Cassio emerged honorable, frank and free, due largely to the actor's own personal temperament as much as to his acting skill.

Quite effective as the love-sick Roderigo was James Dickinson, but his projection failed in faulty diction and too fast delivery of his speech. Roderigo ought to mirror Iago in their dialogues, but in this production he is just a listening post.

Clarine Jackman as Emilia did real justice to the part. Her stinging-speeches were the only sparks of life in the last scene. Helen Armesto enfused the role with more colour and passion, less majesty than Miss Jackman, but both gave a performance convincing, and full of impact that enhanced each scene they played. Phoebe Templeton captured the innocence and purity of Desdemona to draw the audience to her tragic plight. Eric House saw Iago in a vastly different light to that of his predecessor on opening night. He sensed the intrinsic evil in the character, and though somewhat nervously inhibited, had a depth of craft that did much to transform Saturday's comedy to the tingling tragedy Monday night.

In the supporting cast were Alvin Shaw as the weak Brabintio, and Hugh Hood's stilted, mechanical Lodovico whose closing lines let the climax down with a thud at the play's end. Adequate as the Duke was Donald Davis, as Gratiano—David Peddie, as Montano—John Rutherford, as the Gentlemen—Bruce Evoy, Thurston Smith and John Hampson, Beth Robinson and Lillian Becker were both sparkling strumpets, made much of Bianca in the play.



Whether direction is responsible for the appalling flaws in characterization, the incongruous lighting of the soliloquies, the incomprehensible pace of the Roderigo-Iago opening scene, the dragged staging of the Strangling, the obvious miscasting of the two principal roles, I do not know. But the complete absence of emotive conflict between characters suppressed the tragedy in Othello and left the watcher weak with expectation of a catastrophe that never came. For this director Robert Gill is very much at fault. But apart from these few discrepancies, his production of Othello went rather well.

Protests Professionalism

Editor, The Varsity:

On Wednesday last, the SAC passed a motion of Miss Nipper Benson's that the All Varsity revue hire a professional director next year. For the following reasons, we suggest that this motion be very seriously reconsidered.

1. It is said that the AVR have a professional director to raise its financial and cultural levels, and to reduce its expenses. The last thing expected of a college show is that it be slickly professional. Moreover, the cast do not enter the show to earn a profit for the SAC. Rather than expecting any returns, they give up months of time, and a good deal of money in order to be in the show.

2. It is difficult to understand how a paid director, who would not sell his name to a show unless he were sure of getting the best of productions, could substantially show a profit while the show remains within the limits of Hart House theatre. If the show is to be run professionally, then it would only be fair to pay the people who write the show, who act and dance and sing in it, who paint the sets and make the costumes.

3. It is insufficient to compare the director to Robert Gill, who works for the university much as an extra-curricular lecturer. The former could be expected to work only to the extent of his wages.

4. How can a professional director handle a college show in which many of the jokes would have to be explained to him first?

5. The hiring of a professional director effectively shut out the greatest source of experience a college student-director can get — experience which is as important as any lecture course to him. One of the very few people in Toronto who could possibly handle this type of show, Henry Kaplan, got his experience to a great extent in just this fashion.

6. Finally. This motion was at no time discussed by the AVR executive, or any committee of the SAC. The directors of the AVR were just as surprised as the other students. They and the others of the AVR executive have opinions on this subject which deserve to be heard and considered.

Yours truly,

Members of the cast of the AVR, 1950.

Paul Breck, Mary Kerr, Jack Hulme, Bob Osborne, Jack Robson, Bill Kennedy, and others too numerous to mention.

Varsity Wrestlers, Boxers, Both Win

Not to be outdone by the boxers the Varsity grapplers took both intermediate and senior rassling championships at the intercollegiate meet held at Guelph Friday and Saturday last week, to give Varsity a clean sweep in the annual Assaults.

Senior

125 pounds—Harry Lubrock, Varsity, scored fall over E. Mark, Western in 15 seconds of second round.

135 pounds—Ed Theriault, McGill, scored fall over Don McLean, O.A.C.-O.V.C., in 55 seconds of the third round.

145 pounds—Jack Kirkup, Varsity, scored fall over Bob Armstrong, Queen's, in 1:10 of the second round.

155 pounds—Bernie Shayer, Varsity, pinned Bill Gray, O.A.C.-O.V.C. at 1.15 of the second round.

165 pounds—Kirk Wipper, Varsity, won decision from eGorge Flanagan, Queen's 10-2.

175 pounds—Vic Jensen, O.A.C.-O.V.C., took fall over Mark Hatt, McGill, in 55 seconds of the third round.

190 pounds—Fred Bennett, O.A.C.-O.V.C. scored fall over Ed Fisher, Varsity in 2:45 of the first round.

Heavyweight—Bob Steckle, O.A.C.-O.V.C., defeated Dave Tomlinson, McGill, with a fall after 1:25 of the first round.

Intermediate

125 pounds—Dick Killinger, Western, scored fall over Leo Goodman, Varsity, in 1:40 of the third round.

135 pounds—Glen Peister, O.A.C.-O.V.C., took fall from Fred Mitchell, Western, after 1:12 of the first round.

145 pounds—Al Herbert, Varsity, scored fall over Pete Moote, O.A.C.-O.V.C., in 1:12 of the third round.

155 pounds—George Wright, Varsity, scored fall over Al Bennett, O.A.C.-O.V.C., at 1:54 of the second round. Bennett unable to continue.

165 pounds—Pete Hopkins, Varsity, defeated Bob Pierce, Western with a fall after 1:35 of the third round.

175 pounds—George Davies, Varsity, won decision from Doug Pierce, Western, 11-2.

190 pounds—Bill Dingwall, Varsity, won decision from Larry Burt, O.A.C.-O.V.C., 10-5.

Heavyweight—Paul Lobraico, Varsity, scored fall over Ed Escaf, Western, at 2:30 of the third round.

Varsity boxers dominated the senior and intermediate boxing tournament held in Hart House last Friday and Saturday, winning the intermediate 17-13 over Ontario Agricultural College with Western coming third with four. Toronto walked away with the senior division winning six out of eight bouts for a total of 26 points. McGill was next with seven and Queen's and Western followed with five and two. Last year Queen's won the senior championship and the Gibson Cup and the year before McGill took the senior division.

Hank Henshall won the 125 pound class for the fourth straight year when he knocked out Garry Smith of Queen's at 1:35 of the first round. Henshall faded away from the long right lead of the novice Smith until he felt he had the fight going just the way he wanted it. He then moved in and hit Smith with everything but the ring-posts, finally knocking him to the deck with a hard right uppercut.

Tim Turner gained a close decision over Joe Miller of McGill in the heavyweight class. Miller confused Turner in the first and Turner was never able to tag his man with his long right hand. He continually overshot the mark. Glen Williams, displaying excellent conditioning kept up a fast pace throughout his 133 pound affair with Pete McMullen of McGill and won quite handily.

Intermediate

125 pounds—No entries.

133 pounds—W. Tom, OAC, won a technical knockout over C. J. Eagan, Western at 1:13 of the fourth round.

140 pounds—B. S. Berting, Varsity, out pointed F. Archdekin, Western.

147 pounds—G. Bowers, OAC, outpointed F. Corner, Varsity.

155 pounds—P. Petcoff, Varsity, outpointed E. Roger, OAC.

165 pounds—M. James, OAC, won by a technical knockout over T. E. Hodgins, Western, at 1:26 of the third.

175 pounds—G. Else, Varsity, won by a technical knockout over W. Yost, Western, at 1:00 of the third.

Heavyweight—R. S. Maclennan, Varsity, uncontested.

Senior

125 pounds—H. H. Henshall, Varsity, won by a technical knockout over G. Smith, Queen's, at 1:35 of the first round.

133 pounds—G. Williams, Varsity, outpointed P. McMullen, McGill.

140 pounds—C. Plerich, Varsity, outpointed R. W. Carlyle, Western.

147 pounds—R. Couceiro, Varsity, won by a technical knockout over T. Rogers, McGill, at 1:22 of the fourth.

155 pounds—W. Thompson, Queen's, outpointed N. E. Green, Varsity.

165 pounds—W. D. Armstrong, Varsity, won by a technical knockout over C. Hutchison, Western, in the second round.

175 pounds—E. Kovak, McGill, outpointed J. C. Folinsbee, Varsity.

Heavyweight—T. C. Turner, Varsity, outpointed J. Miller, McGill.

Intermediate Hockey

The intermediate hockey game tomorrow at the arena between Varsity and Waterloo College has been moved ahead to 4 p.m. instead of 4:30 p.m. as scheduled. The change was made in order to give the Blues a longer practice session after the game in preparation for the all-important game Friday night with the University of Montreal Carabins. The intermediates are current holders of the Shaw Trophy and indeed have held it for so long that it is rumored that the name of the trophy may be changed to the Jack Life Memorial Cup. The game to-morrow, if won, will give the intermediates the championship for the fifth straight year. It is hoped that a slightly larger crowd than usual will be on hand for this final game.

The Little Blues however, acknowledged their first defeat of the year last Friday when O.A.C. took the game 10-9 in a ten minute overtime period. John Lickley was the powerhouse, scoring four goals, but penalties weakened the team in the last few minutes of play.

Redmen Subdue Blue Swimmers Gibson Wins 100

Although McGill University won the intercollegiate swimming championships at Montreal last week-end the individual star of the meet was Toronto's sensational speed swimmer Doug Gibson who set new marks in the 220 and 440 free style and took the top spot in the 100 yarrd. Toronto provided the only opposition for the hosts who racked up 45 points as against 30 for Varsity. McGill held the crown last year also but before that Toronto had an unbroken record of 15 straight years.

RESULTS

220 yard free style—Gibson, Toronto; Smith, McGill; Titus, McGill. Time, 2:23.7.

50 yard free style—Mingie, McGill; Quayle, McGill; Crang, Toronto. Time, :25.4.

100 yard free style—Gibson, Toronto; Issenman, McGill; Trusler, Toronto. Time, :56.7.

100 yard backstroke—Mingie, McGill; Merrow, McGill; Wigle, Toronto. Time, 1:02.

220 yard breast stroke—Kopin, McGill; Rosen, Toronto; Smith, Toronto. Time, 2:31.6.

440 yard free style—Gibson, Toronto; Merrow, McGill; Titus, McGill. Time, 5:18.7.

220 yard sprint relay—McGill (Christie, Ashton, Mingie, Quayle); Toronto (Anderson, Trussler, Crang, Arnold). Time, 1:41.5.

300 yard medley relay—McGill (Merrow, Kopin, Ashton); Toronto (Wigle, Rosen, Shepherd). Time, 3:06.6.

Diving—Tulley, Toronto, 297.5 points; Wortley, Toronto, 216.3; Titus, McGill, 168.7.

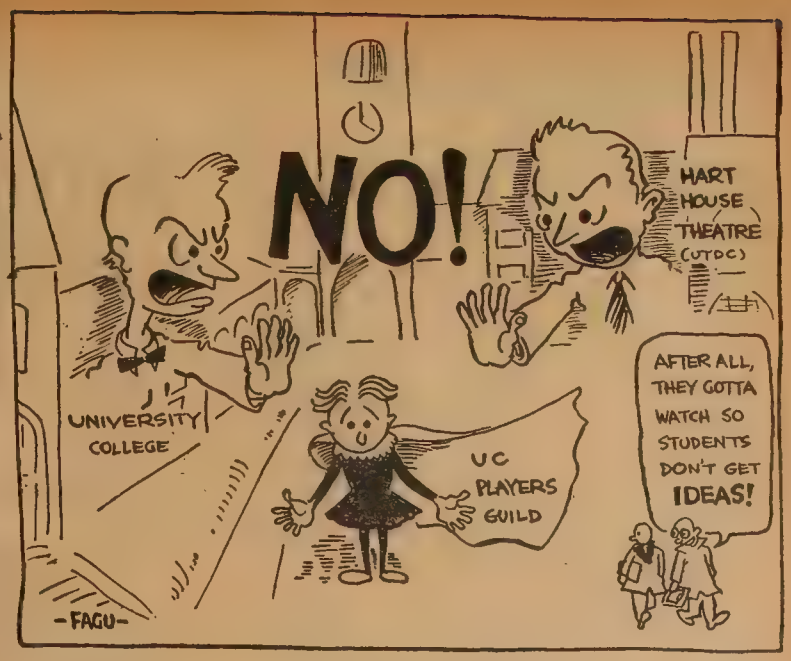
No Exit..

Thus spake Principal Taylor:

"One of the leaders in the councils of the United Nations said recently, '. . . . . There is no doubt in my mind but that moral authority—moral force—is the only force that can accomplish great things in the world.' Need I say that society can rightly expect in these times that a major portion of this indispensable moral authority will be supplied by university trained men and women."



Thus spake Principal Taylor in his message to the Class of '49, printed in the latest annual University College Bulletin.

This emphasis of the Principal's on university trained men and women as dispensers of moral authority is especially interesting at this time. The Principal has given no reason for his cancellation of "No Exit." In view of recent events the most valid assumption open to us is that the cancellation is on "moral grounds."

If the assumption is correct, then obviously Principal Taylor cannot rightly expect what he claims society can rightly expect. If one believes that University students are possessors of high ideals and considerable moral force, one would not expect students to waste time producing an immoral play. Further, such a person would not expect other students to go to see an immoral play.

To cancel the play on moral grounds is to express a disbelief in the moral strength of students. For Principal Taylor to express this disbelief is for him to exhibit a lack of moral conviction, and so to stand as a poor example of moral authority to undergraduates.

We hope the Principal cancelled the play for reasons other than moral ones, and we wish he would state what his reasons are.

VOL. LXIX, NO. 91 THE UNIVERSITY OF TORONTO Thursday, March 2, 1950

No Reason Given, Ban To Remain On UC Guild Play

UC's Principal Taylor gave no reason yesterday for cancelling the scheduled production of "No Exit," to have been presented last night at the Women's Union Theatre by the UC Players' Guild. Hart House Theatre director Robert Gill was charged with being instrumental in having the play banned by the University of Toronto Drama Committee.

"No Exit's" director John Howe, III UC, said Tuesday that the UTDC had banned the play on a basis of immorality after the committee had heard excerpts read from the play. None of the committee members had read it, he said.

No Warning

The play had been scheduled to run at the Women's Union Theatre last night, and the cast had been prepared to present it until Principal Taylor's order was issued yesterday morning. Howe stated last night, "We stand as a play, cast and rehearsed, but without a home."

Sheila Craig, III UC, a member of the cast, said the cast hoped to be able to present the play off the campus at a later date.

> That a play so searching and real as "No Exit" should be banned from a university is disappointing. What Sartre writes about may be immoral . . . but it is not the immorality so much as the truth of it which causes embarrassment. But, if truth cannot be faced at our universities, where can it be?
> Langdon Dixon, Drama Critic, "Here and Now".

No Reasons Given

When contacted yesterday, Principal Taylor said, "I cancelled the play, and that is all. I am not going to say anything. The first people I would give reasons to would be the Players' Guild, and I have refused to see them." He also stated, "I can't see them this week as I'm tied up Wednesday, Thursday and Friday." Principal Taylor refused to comment further.

At noon yesterday, Robert Gill stated he would have to call a meeting of the Board of Syndics. "Until I have conferred with them," he said, "I have nothing to say." When contacted again at 3:00 p.m., Mr.

Staff Vote

All staff members are reminded of the election for the 1950-51 Editor-in-Chief of The Varsity to be held this coming Friday in West Hall, UC, at 5 p.m. All reporters, feature writers, make-up personnel, photographers and reviewers who have worked consistently for The Varsity this year are eligible to vote. The results of this election will be considered by the Publications Committee and the SAC when the incoming editor is appointed.

Varsity Symphony University Choir Join In 'Creation'

This year's full-scale production of the University Symphony Orchestra, under the direction of Lee Hepner, with the All-Varsity Choir, will be Haydn's masterpiece, The Creation. Tickets for the only performance, to be given Tuesday, March 7, will cost 50 cents and will be available at the SAC offices in Hart House and UC.

Modelled on Milton's Paradise Lost, Haydn wrote The Creation after having heard Handel's famous Oratorio which affected him deeply.

The lead, Grabriel, will be sung by Donna Gale Richards, while Joseph Ward and James Beer will sing the parts of Uriel and Raphael respectively.

Two Estimates

Of A 'Soul-Searching' Play

By B. K. SANDWELL
Editor, Saturday Night

As I am unacquainted with the special considerations which may govern the selection of plays which university students as such may be permitted to perform and to listen to on university property and in student organizations, I cannot express an opinion as to whether the "No Exit" of Jean-Paul Sartre should or should not be allowed at the University of Toronto. But having read this and several other plays by this author, who almost certainly ranks as the leading serious playwright of present-day France, I can only say that I regard them as profoundly and essentially moral. I should enthusiastically welcome any serious public performance of "No Exit" outside of the university property, and should regard any attempt to suppress it in the name of morality or decency as a grevous misuse of the power of censorship.

> Far from being objectionable on moral grounds "No Exit" is one of the most soul-searching and moral of recent plays. I personally saw it in the vestry of a Roman Catholic Church in Montreal. No further comment is needed.
> Prof. E. L. Fackenheim, University College.

By JACK FERGUSON

In his play "No Exit" (No Exit and The Flies—Knopf—$2.75), Jean-Paul Sartre attempts to show the tragic loneliness and the waste of three human lives. The entire action takes place in a hideous room from which they cannot escape: a room which never has its lights turned off, and in which these people must forever conflict because of what they are ". . . each of us will act as torturer of the two others." Out of their minds is created a personal hell.

> Sartre is one of the greatest living dramatists and "No Exit" is his finest play. Any attempt to ban it on moral grounds is completely without justification.
> Prof. H. N. Frye, Victoria College.

The room symbolizes the world, the three people everyone in the world. Sartre says that every man is truly an island unto himself yet he can only discover himself through others. This is impossible because no man can ever understand another.

Beautifully written, this play could be criticized for its philosophy of defeatism but I hesitate to score anyone for trying to be profound.

Robert Gill

"No Comment!"

> The evening "No Exit" affords is not designed for those whose only demand of the theatre is that it take over where the soap operas leave off . . . or that it function as a public nursery where adult kiddies can be left untroubled for an hour or so to play with toys that cannot hurt them.
> "Saturday Review of Literature", Dec., 1946.

> It is one of those plays that only the script or performance can convey to any extent. . . . It should be seen whether you like it or not.

Check His Ideas

"Depend upon it, Sir," said Dr. Johnson, "when a man is to be hanged in a fortnight it concentrates his mind wonderfully . . ."

Few students are ever hanged.

So it follows there is little reason to "concentrate his mind wonderfully." That's too bad, because with elections coming up next week it might be advisable to have a little concentration on matters which affect the student.

Maybe we could concentrate on how students have handled their affairs, through their elected representatives, during the last year.

After the candidate has cracked his best joke, ask him if he thinks the present scheme for text-book price reduction is a good thing. Then check with him how he feels about having a professional director for the All-Varsity Revue.

Don't forget to see what he thinks of The Varsity policy, because The Varsity is published by the SAC, you know.

Something else you might find out, between one of his vote-getting jokes, is how he stands on NFCUS.

The check up on his ideas about school spirit, increased fees, student unions, student seats at football games, Blue and White activities and opening the second door at Hart House.

In short make your candidate be a candidate, and not a vaudeville entertainer. Make your student elections mean something more than a grand chance for popular students to sit on committees.

We say this because The Varsity believes that students CAN run their own affairs, SHOULD run their own affairs and WILL run their own affairs.

Yes, it's true . . . few students are ever hangnged . . . physically . . . Mentally they are hanged every day.

ART ∞ MUSIC ∞ DRAMA

The Ballet de Paris

There is an old saying that all good Americans go to Paris when they die. The Ballet de Paris is probably the reason.

While not comparable to the classical discipline of a larger company like Sadler's Wells, the small (15 dancers) vivacious French company is head and shoulders above any of the other modern ballets I have seen.

Roland Petit has captured all the gaiety and charm of Paris in his choreography. His ideas are expressed with great skill and integrity both in their conception and their execution. Among Petit's more engaging innovations was the inclusion of a song or a chant in two of his ballets.

Renee "Zizi" Jeanmaire makes a magnificent Carmen. With her roguish smile and exuberant impassioned dancing she made Carmen live so intensively that I am sure Bizet must have written a ballet suite rather than an opera. Her use of her hands is unusually effective — a graceful inflection of the wrist and a delicate curving of the fingers tell a complete story of their own.

A very promising newcomer to the troupe, British Belinda Wright appeared as an enchantingly wicked child in Le Rendez-Vous and again as a bandit in Carmen. Her buoyant performance was highly refreshing.

Comic ballet is rarely hilarious to say the least, L'Oeuf a la Coque however is a notable exception. As four charming chickens are popped into a capacious oven by a cortage of enthusiastic chefs, one of them produces a large egg. The egg is boiled and as the fire is stoked up, pouf — it hatches. Out prances Colette "Les Legs" Marchand and while her dancing is rather acrobatic for ballet it is superbly effective.

Her dance (and indeed this could be said of the entire program) is scarcely recognizable as ballet in the orthodox sense. Rather it is interpretive dancing in which as in ballet a story is told but in which there is little established form.

If the dancers and the accompanying musicians are successful a mood is created and sustained, an illusion is produced in the minds of the audience. One false step, one mistake, and the illusion is shattered. Not once during the entire performance did the Ballet de Paris strike a jarring note.

For the young (3 years) ballet and its equally young (26 years) director Roland Petit this is a formidable achievement.

Reconsider Ban

Editor, The Varsity:

Engineers are not noted for their knowledge of culture. Crowded time-tables and numerous laboratory reports leave little time for the study of the art of living. However, engineers are, in the most part, tolerant and willing to give others a chance for expression.

To ban the showing of a play on the basis of immorality, without having read or seen it, would appear to be a childish action.

The persons in authority who banned "No Exit" should reconsider, and, at least, state reasons for this action.

Ban To Remain

Gill still had no comment to make. He refused to say whether or not he had held the meeting, or if he intended to do so.

UTDC Secretary Robin Taylor, III St. Hilda's, who voted in favor of presenting the play, said she believed Robert Gill didn't want it put on because of the possible repercussions from outside. "He said if we voted for approval of the play, he would still have to take it to the Board of Syndics," she said.

Guild President Mum

Don Davis, IV UC, president of the UC Players' Guild and a member of the UTDC, said last night he was in no position to make any statement. "I have not yet got sufficient information at my disposal," he said.

An official at the Toronto Board of Education, approached to determine if any of the Toronto school auditoriums would be available for the play's presentation, refused to be quoted personally, but stated that any play banned by the University of Toronto would be refused by the Board. "We won't touch it," he said, "and unless the Board of Syndics releases it first, none of our auditoriums will be available."

This is not the first time "No Exit" has run into trouble. When the play was first published in England in 1946, it was banned by the Lord Chamberlain. This restriction, however, was soon relaxed, and the play, then called "Vicious Circle" was presented at the Art's Theatre in London in November of that year.

Movie Review

The Heiress

Henry James is currently enjoying the modest vogue of a good thing overlooked. Recently three of his novels have been dramatized; still, I doubt if he would find the results entirely gratifying. "The Aspern Papers" suffered a weird and wonderful screen transformation as "The Lost Moment", and "The Innocents", now on Broadway, is evidently a wrong "Turn of the Screw". "The Heiress" (Victoria, Eglinton) is a second cousin to "Washington Square". Ruth and Augustus Goetz have turned the final portion of their adaptations into a drama of revenge, I suppose because they thought the novel lacked theatre, or oomph or something.

However, much of "The Heiress" is remarkably true to the spirit of the book. The conflicts have been presented with a necessary bluntness that would have amused the master of circumlocution but the characters are perfect and the same foundation is laid for a cautious tragedy — the terrible tenacity of the unclever. The story: Would a drab heiress do better to buy a handsome fortune-hunter or respectable spinsterhood?

Olivia de Havilland is splendid as the heiress and her jilting is a tear-jerker of no mean force, but she is much too spirited in the last part. An adroit piece of casting has Montgomery Clift as the fortune hunter. The script doesn't allow the deliberate cruelty of the father and the fumbling cruelty of the aunt (Miriam Hopkins) but Ralph Richardson's brilliant sardonic interpretation suggests what the script doesn't — that the jilting of his daughter is a pleasing justification of his contempt for her.

This conflict of the trusting and the unscrupulous is a recurring theme in James, and one-sided though it seems, the victory is always oddly divided. The movie has numbed the subtlety of the tragedy considerably by turning the whole thing over to the heiress, and while the closing scene is striking, it doesn't deal the casual wallop of the Jamesian ending, wherein the heiress, preferring the original illusion, dismisses her belated, aging suitor and resumes her fancy-work — "for life as it were."

I suggest you see this sporadically excellent movie from the middle.

ELECT COMMITTEES MARCH 8

By DOUG. BROOK

Outside, the wind fretted at the windows, then raced up the high-pitched roofs scattering the granulated snow in a whirl.

Inside, in the common room men reclined comfortably in easy chairs enjoying a cigarette or an aromatic pipe tobacco. Upstairs, in the library, the quiet was profound. One slumped deep in a book, another, with foot tucked under him, sat looking out the window at something that wasn't there.

Hart House, or the house, as it is generally called, is a happy house, offering every kind of relaxation for the undergrad and graduate. It is a club that everyone aspires to be a member of, not excepting the co-eds. Students from other universities are loud in their praise of Hart House. For nowhere in Canada or for that matter in North America is there a building for undergrads to compare with it.

Hart House, named after Hart Massey, is reputed to be one of the best examples of Neo-Gothic architecture in Canada. The cars in the picture were the student (hot-rods) of those days.

Many Activities

What do you want to do? Well, how about chess or a good game of bridge, or a fast game of squash. On the other hand, do you hanker to take pictures, or do you enjoy fine music or fine art? These are only a few suggestions, and there are lots more things to do and to be a member of. These activities by and large are handled by five standing committees.

The nominations closed last Wednesday for undergrad positions on these standing committees. Now the nominees are campaigning.

In the past, various colleges put forth a slate of candidates. This proved very effective last year at Ajax, when nearly everyone voted, electing all their school candidates. Usually the vote on the campus amounts to 19 percent.

House Committee Busy

To ensure undergraduate ideas getting fullest attention at Hart House, 8 students are elected by their number each year to the House Committee. Two others, carried over from each preceeding year, and elected by the Committee of that year, swell the total membership on this most important Committee to ten. Amongst the functions under their jurisdiction are such things as All-varsity dances; the annual University settlement party at the House for underprivileged children; the handling of all complaints and suggestions for improvements; the checking of membership cards at house events; and the handling of suggested repairs and renovations. In general also, the House Committee carries out a general supervision policy of the House.

Stage Concerts

The Music Committee's main work is sponsoring the Hart House Concerts. They were responsible for bringing to the Sunday evening concerts such well known artists as the Parlow string quartet, Sir Ernest MacMillan, Dr. Robert Graham and many others. The attendance at these concerts is usually over 500.

Another series is the five o'clock recitals, usually of professional artists. Albert Marston, tenor and the Sumberg trio have been guests on this series. Every Tuesday at one o'clock there is an undergrad concert. The record room, also comes under the jurisdiction of the Music Committee. It possesses new equipment considered to be the best recording equipment in Toronto.

Some members of Hart House have felt that the students of the Record Room are not friendly, and dislike any interference on the part of outsiders. The fact is, that a member must first receive instruction in the operation of the turntable, after which he receives a card that entitles him to use the equipment. The machine uses the new long playing records.

Art Gallery Famous

The Art Committee is another of the standing committees who are responsible for the selection of pictures that hang throughout Hart House. This permanent collection is considered one of the best collections of Canadiana in existence. In the purchasing of these pictures, it has been the policy of the committee to obtain pictures representative of Canadian artists. The Pointers by Tom Thompson, considered one of his best, and the Isles of Spruce, by Art Lismer are two of the more important acquisitions of this committee. Lorne Harris's abstractions that hang in the map room are a new idea in Hart House pictures.

Every two weeks the pictures in the Art Gallery are changed. The artists are selected from those who ordinarily would not have the opportunity to put on a show. The present show is by Charles Playfair, a young proising artist from Hamilton. In true Bohemian fashion, Playfair saved some money then shut himself up in a room above a cut-up-chicken ship, to turn out his work.

Art Classes Too

Art classes are held every Tuesday and Thursday, under the directorship of Carl Schaefer, a teacher at the college of Art. Instruction is given in ink, charcoal, and watercolour.

The murals in the chapel were done by Will Ogilvie of Toronto. These murals have been pointed out as "representing some biblical scripture, or mystical conception of the ascent of man." One day, Mr. Ogilvie was in Hart House when Mat McLachlan, assistant to the Warden, cornered him and got Will's idea of the murals. They are just a general sort of thing and are not terrifically symbolic, he said.

Cultural Cinema

Movies appear twice weekly and are selected for their cultural value. Art Committee works with the National Film Board to present such pictures as Primitive Painting in Quebec and Art in Belgium and France.

Hart House library is considered strictly a browsing library. The idea of not allowing text books in the room is to get people to read and not just come in to study. The books are selected by the library committee on the recommendations of the committee members. The library has approximately 5000 books and subscribes to over a hundred periodicals.

Library Social Evenings

The Library evenings are social evenings where authors and and publishers and those people who are authorities on books and manuscripts, deliver talks. After the meeting coffee and cookies are served and an informal discussion follows. The library also possesses records of readings of T. S. Eliot and Shakespeare and other famous artists.

The Debates Committee organize the debates that are based on the Parliamentary System. This puts the emphasis on the person's ability to think on his feet. The debates invariably have been of a political nature. This gives the student political parties the opportunity to express their views in public.

These opinions do carry some weight, since the Federal Government is interested in student opinion that represents 12,000 students.

St. Laurent May Visit

All Federal prime ministers and provincial premiers have spoken in the Debates Room including the Duke of Windsor. It is hoped to have the present prime minister, Mr. Louis St. Laurent visit Hart House in the near future.

The good work that the standing committees have done in the past requires the election of competent men to positions in the six standing committees. The work these committees do is to further the policy of Mr. Massey in stressing the cultural side as well as the sports. The Hart House activities are designed to attract the average student instead of letting him spend his money on down town entertainment.

Dedicated to leisure, Hart House Library does not allow text books to be taken into the room. The deep easy chairs and cushions are an added incentive to spend a restful hour or two.

New Plans Bring Union Closer

With the completion of a three-day design problem in Architecture, the Student Union has come one step nearer completion. The sketch plans shown left and above are by Ian Rutherford V Architecture, and give an indication of facilities to be included in the main floor of a three-floor building. The Union, as now conceived, will be connected, at its north end, with the kitchen of Hart House, which will serve as kitchen for the Union as well, thus avoiding an expensive duplication of existing services. The Union, together with Hart House, will create a focal point on the campus for co-ordinated extra-curricular activities for all university students. Expected to cost almost $1,000.00, the union was designed to harmonize with Hart House and will include lounge areas, a 400-seat cafeteria, club rooms, a workshop, a book exchange, a radio studio, offices for The Varsity, the Students' Administrative Council, Torontonensis, and for the Union Administration. The first plans for the union, submitted last year, called for a building with modern lines, to be situated on Hoskin Ave. at Philosopher's Walk. It was planned to include a theatre and kitchens of its own. The price of land at that point, however, was prohibitive and the plan was dropped in favor of a building to be situated on the west side of Queen's Park, running south from Hart House and able to use the kitchen and theatre facilities of Hart House.

Two Murrays Try For Pres. Of UC WUA

UC women may be slightly confused when they vote for their president of the Women's Undergraduate Association on March 9. Two of three candidates are named Murray, Zi and Margot to be exact, but are no relation. The third candidate is Paula Zumstein.

These candidates, along with those for other WUA offices, were nominated at an open meeting yesterday in the Women's Union. At the same meeting Jane Hill, IV UC and the SAC Student Service Commissioner, was acclaimed as the WUA candidate for the Moss Scholarship.

The WUA also heard the finals of the Portia debates between Pearl Parnes and Joan Essor, II UC, and Shirley Skaines and Janice Johnson, III UC. Parnes and Essor won supporting the affirmative of "Resolved that Henry Ford contributed more to humanity than William Shakespeare." The lively debate, as pointed out by adjudicator Prof. Bagnani, was kept in a light humorous vein throughout.

As the meeting continued past six o'clock and many had left by then, it was decided to hold open the nominations for the year executives until to-day. Written nominations will be accepted by Secretary Patty Scott at Cody House, Whitney Hall, until noon to-day.

Lit. Says "Varsity" Distorted Evidence Requests Apology

The UC Lit last night adopted a report charging that The Varsity in a recent article about the Jean-Sartre play "No Exit" "misrepresented not only the play, but also the Guild, and the UTDC, as well as making certain statements which have no foundation in truth."

The Lit also requested The Varsity to print a front page editorial apologizing for its presentation of the events concerning the play.

The report, presented by University College Players' Guild President Don Davis, added that, "almost the whole responsibility for the banning of 'No Exit' and the resultant confusion and misrepresentation devolves upon The Varsity and its staff."

Another motion was defeated 20 to 10. It read: "Resolved that this Society condemns the action of Principal W. R. Taylor of UC in cancelling the presentation of Sartre's 'No Exit' without giving adequate reasons for notice to the students involved."

It was learned last night that the director and cast of the play have decided to present "No Exit" outside the campus Saturday night. They have rented Heliconian Hall, 35 Hazelton Ave., just off Yorkville, and will present the play at 8:30 p.m., with an admission price of 75 cents to be collected at the door. Capacity of the hall is 200 seats. The UC Players' Guild has nothing to do with this presentation.

In his report, Davis said, The Varsity has assigned the Players' Guild the role of a martyr in the cause of free expression being persecuted by the tyranny of the UTDC, while in fact the Guild is striving to co-operate with the other college drama groups in the field of undergraduate dramatics

Late Bulletin

London, March 1—(Special)—The British National Union of Students, one of the few western student organizations still a member of the Communist-dominated International Union of Students, intends to suspend temporarily its membership in the IUS.

Reason for the action of the NUS is the ejection from IUS of the People's Youth of Yugoslavia on charges of "Titoism".

The London Times reported that the reason of the NUS "seems to be based on the policy of other European countries toward Yugoslavia rather than on any factual evidence."

The General Secretary of IUS charged that the attitude of IUS to the People's Youth of Yugoslavia "does not appear to be based on any factual evidence."

Coming Soon

Prime Minister Louis St. Laurent has definitely accepted the Debates Committee's invitation to attend and speak at the next Hart House debate on March 27, committee members announced yesterday.

The Committee said no resolution had been decided upon yet but members expected a topic would be chosen soon.

Committee members also said Great Hall might possibly be used for the debate because the attendance expected might overflow the Debates Room.

Petition To Urge Adoption Of Bill On Civil Liberty

A move is beginning on the campus to organize students behind a drive for increased civil liberties in Canada.

SCM Associate General Secretary Mary McCrimmon, also leader of the Civil Liberties Committee of the Co-Ordinating Committee of Canadian Youth Committees, has contacted campus student leaders and invited them to a meeting of Toronto youth organizations.

At the meeting they will discuss support for Senator Arthur Roebuck's resolution for a Canadian Bill of Rights and will consider sending a petition to Ontario Premier Leslie Frost urging adoption of a Fair Employment Practices Act in Ontario like the FEPC bill now under consideration in the United States Congress.

The meeting to be held next Monday, March 6, at 8 p.m. in Central YWCA, 21 McGill Street, will be addressed by Trinity College Provost R.S.K. Seeley, chairman of the Association for Civil Liberties.

Students who cannot attend the meeting can take part in the petitions by calling the SCM office, Hart House (MI. 9727).

If a large amount of student interest is shown this may be used as a beginning of a campus civil liberties club, Miss McCrimmon said yesterday.

A Plea For Privacy

The last bastion of anonymity is tottering, the last towers of privacy are beginning to crumble. Not only, as John Donne said, is no man an island entire of itself, soon his dog won't be either.

In the dear days so rapidly dying, a man could own any variety or varieties of dog he desired, secure in the knowledge that it could never be identified. He could have as his best friend, the ugliest, most disreputable dog on the block and no one could point to it and say with positive proof, "That is your dog."

But the Department of Agriculture and the Canadian Kennel Club, if they have their way, will make this possible. According to a report in The Telegram, it is possible to fingerprint dogs on the nose, thus making identification positive and sure. We must fight this development with every weapon at our command. We must keep for the dog, and through the dog, for man, some measure of seclusion.

Once a dog can be reliably and incontestably identified, he is doomed, and his master is doomed with him. A noseprint found at the scene of an overturned garbage can can convict a dog of a felony. The dog will inevitably be incarcerated and his master fined and held up to ridicule. This must be averted at all costs.

Dogs of the world, unite! Resist nose-printing in every way you can! Cut off your nose and spite your fate!

No Ban On No Exit

Editor, The Varsity:

The University of Toronto Drama Committee wishes to call attention to some serious discrepancies in the article in The Varsity on Wednesday, March 1, concerning "No Exit". At no point did the UTDC ban "No Exit". Because of the controversial nature of the play, and because the UTDC receives certain privileges from the Board of Syndics of Hart House Theatre, the Committee felt that before including "No Exit" in one of the bills of one-act plays at Hart House Theatre they would prefer to have the full approval of the Syndics. As the program for the bill in question had to be drawn up within three days of the UTDC meeting of January 27, there was insufficient time for fourteen members of the Board of Syndics to read the play and make a decision. It was therefore recommended by the UTDC that the UC Players' Guild present "No Exit" as a special event in their own session at the Women's Union Theatre. The Committee wishes to stress the fact that this was a recommendation, and not a ban.

The recommendation was not made on grounds of immorality, but because the Committee felt that in a public performance some people might be offended, and that this would result in jeopardizing certain privileges the Committee enjoys, such as self-censorship. In other words, it is their desire to "lead" rather than "be led", and to "tell" rather than "be told".

The decision was made by the Committee with great regret, because they did realize the importance of their not all having read the play, but the time element demanded a decision at that meeting.

It is erroneous to state that no member of the Committee had read the play. It had been read by Edward Follows and John Finlay, and by the staff adviser, Robert Gill.

Furthermore, it is untrue to state that Robert Gill called a rehearsal for "Othello" with the deliberate intention of "scuttling" the special meeting which was to have been called to allow the director of "No Exit" to state his case. It should be apparent that with four of the major roles double-cast, every available moment for rehearsal was of great value. The rehearsal schedule had been posted a full week before any mention of such special meeting was made.

When the UC Players' Guild representative on the Committee, Edward Follows, was told of the choice of play by the director of "No Exit", he informed the director on two separate occasions that his play would have to go before the UTDC at their next meeting, and be subject to their decision, which would be binding for the purposes of the forthcoming Hart House Theatre bill.

The final paragraph in Wednesday's article stated "Mr. Gill and members of the UTDC were not available at Hart House Theatre on the night in question. It seems strange that even though the three hundred yards' walk from The Varsity office to the Theatre was too much effort to ascertain the other side of the story, no attempt was made to make telephone or personal contact with other members of the Committee who are in residence on the campus and easily available.

This Committee feels strongly that The Varsity has no right to repeat certain individual charges without checking all ascertainable facts.

LITERARY ISSUE

This is the 1949-50 Literary Issue. Entries in short stories, verse (two catgories, serious and light) and photographs have been judged by three members of the faculty and the prize winners are presented in this special 8-page issue.

The Varsity would like to thank Professors McLuhan, Frye and Robinson for their kindness in judging the many entries.

In the short story contest, two entries: "The Snowman" by Jim Dickinson, and "The Decision," by Charles Rea, tied for third place.

C.R.B. SALTER II TRINITY

Johnny lay quite still on his bunk, watching pale blue smoke twist upwards from the bowl of his pipe. The smoke hung lazily in the twilight let in by the open door, and Johnny watched the patterns it drew against the slow approach of the night. He heard a quick rustle in the brush outside his door—a mink, or perhaps the weasel that had made its home under Johnny's floorboards. A fish jumped in the lake a few yards away, a clear plash that lingered a few seconds before fading into the other evening sounds. A faint breeze murmured in the poplar leaves, and a loon called, three times. With the last echo there came its mate's answering cry. Johnny listened to all these sounds and made them a part of himself.

If he turned his head slightly he could see the other bunk and the boy squatting cross-legged upon it. Paulie-the-breed, studying arithmetic. Thick, black eyebrows and high cheekbones, brown eyes frowning over a page of symbols.

Johnny reached over, closed the book.

"Beat it home now, Paul, get some sleep. We're moving tomorrow."

Paul dropped the book on the orange crate that served as a table. He rubbed his eyes, hard, with the knuckles of both hands. He got up, straightened his shoulders. His arms hung long and loose by his sides.

"Where we setting up now?"

"Station fifteen, third level. Where I showed you on the chart."

"That's good."

"Why, were you nervous there on the second?"

"Guess a bit, maybe. Good to get outa there."

"Well, see you tomorrow, then."

Paul turned out the door and went down the little path to the lake.

Johnny waited till he heard the dip of a canoe paddle, then gathered up the sheets of scribbled paper that were strewn over the other bunk. He's progressing, he thought, if he'll stay with it I can have him on trigonometry in a couple of months. He's good for more than a diamond-drill helper, that boy. Good thing I saved my math texts . . . Johnny yawned, ran his hands through his hair. He stripped to his underwear and crawled between rough gray blankets, carefully arranging his mosquito. net, a ghostly white screen about the bed. He started to recall his own school days, his year at university . . . but Johnny had worked hard that day and was soon asleep.

Paulie-the-breed paddled quietly and powerfully. He landed his canoe at camp five minutes after leaving Johnny's cabin. Five minutes by water, a half-hour through the brush. If a man can paddle three hundred yards in five minutes, how long will it take six men . . . the arithmetic problems swam in his head. He pulled his canoe ashore beside the airplane dock. He walked past empty oil barrels, crated drilling machinery, great reels of steel cable, past the mine office where a gasoline lamp burned over the chart table, past the cookery to the long low bunkhouse.

A couple of machine-runners were playing cribbage at a blanket-covered table. Big sandy-haired Poles.

"Hey Paulie! Been out squaw-huntin'?"

"How's she t'night, Paulie?"

"She a good one, boy?"

Somebody muttered "Shut up! you guys," the Poles prolegomena

April declares my text: shall I repeat
Spring best stands for death, the end of winter
Leaves only the dead earth and no promise;
Or cry repentance in this wilderness
The windy space between the gaunt houses
Dark under a blind sky? Shall I say that
To me, walking the wet street by lamplight
Crying the promise of judgment by fire.
Only echoes reply, only footfalls
In the crypt?—The figure is familiar.

This I have said also, that fire attends
The desolation. Within glass and stone
Deceptive strength of an image city
Fire crouches: or beneath the hidden stair
Within the cold motor of the parked car
The green light at the deserted corner.
Fire is the substance of this solid world
Brimming within it, promised to dissolve
In judgment its pretensions; yet I stand
Silent, and tramp the circle of my mind.

This is not the king's prison, but my own.
Kingdom crippled me once, confined my will
To dreaming of an orthodox glory
Of calm afternoons under the poplars
Lamplight on carpets, leisure for reading
And for love—comfort in glass and stone. The Tetrarch's daughter, laughing in the sunlight
Tempted me once to other dreams. But that
Is past; and I have built my prison from
My freedom, and the choice of my desire.

How preach fire to the present generation?
Fire is a word:
And in words speech freezes, suffers distortion
As the blood of prophets cools, dries, hardens.
How maintain the heart's heat that yesterday
Made words fire, a flame to sweep the soul?
—Today merely a manner of speaking. a metaphor
Stiff in signification and easy of ridicule.

Better, reflect fire in the vacant eye
To singe directly the animal brain,
Bludgeon the ape to his knees: terror
Thrown upon a screen will teach the flesh
Which sermon only puts to sleep. Take
Camera and sense, to preach repentance.

Yet film will burn; and passion, even fear, subsides
As animal pursues his random pleasure
Forgets the lesson, and resumes his fate.
And when the metronome of pleasure fails, when Sensation withers in the final flame,
Terror spread thin at the red rim of the world
Leaves the numb beast transfixed, neither active nor passive
Having no measure of the time's meaning, except Ticking within the automatic brain
The ultimate comfort of a strict refrain
Deep in memory. So that in the end, there is only the Word.

With fear of fire, therefore, I coupled repentance
Urging a return to the remembered Word.
John the accuser become John the apostle
Offered salvation—and lost half my hearers:
For the new time demands a new accent
And I, who resigned the kingdom and the glory
Possessed but briefly the power I chose.
Caged now in the habit of last year's language
The spirit paces uncontent within the word
And plays at patience while the fire dies.

If in other days I hoped for the wrong thing
Age has disclosed the prison of my limitations;
And if there now seems space for a king, the future
Brings resolution—but never quite as we expect,
Never precisely on the pattern of the past.
I shall be remembered, in my place:
My eyes have seen . . . As prologue meanwhile, conjugate
The usual images in the usual rhythms,
Prepared to deny him when he comes.

Judges' Comment

SHORT STORIES

PROFESSOR McCLUHAN
Professor of English
St. Mike's

The only helpful comment on the bulk of the stories received in the present contest is that their writers have not reached the stage of being influenced by anybody. They have no literary interests or enthusiasms of a kind which evokes the homage of imitation. And it is only through such fervid homage that anybody discovers the style and technique of another writer. After such enthusiasm and discovery, after working in the style of another, there is a possibility of finding a point of view and a style of one's own.

The writers of these stories (especially those not published) seem not to have discovered that the short story aims, like the lyric, at a single effect. The precise effect, the particular emotion to be released, is the first point to be settled. The choice of a subject comes later. And the ordering of the events, the setting, the tone, the kind and amount of dialogue and description, are all controlled by the ultimate effect intended.

The Decision comes nearest to being such a story. The Breed seeming by contrast to have written itself in a merely lucky way. The Breed gets its effect but seems to do so without forethought or economy. So that had the effect of The Decision been stronger it would have been easy to put it first. It is in the style of Morley Callaghan's short stories and shows the advantages of even slight understudy of an artist.

VERSE

PROFESSOR H. NORTHROP FRYE
Department of English,
Victoria College

The serious verse had many entrants and, though the first prize seemed a clear first, it was a matter of considerable difficulty to make specific recommendations for the other awards. A certain amount of whim has perhaps entered into the final decisions — there were several entries which would have got a prize or a mention exoept for some accidental flaw in grammar or error in taste, and perhaps on the whole would deserve one equally well.

I took the category of "light verse" to mean more or less what it means in W. H. Auden's anthology, The Oxford Book of Light Verse, and reclassified some of the entries accordingly. Even at that there were few contributions to this section, light verse being much harder to write well, and the awards seemed less difficult to make.

The wan light falls,
As the night slides in,
And the thin moon calls
To a soul in sin.

And the soul cries back,
But the wispy thread
Cannot find the track,
So the cry is dead.

The walls of the cell
Are as clear as glass,
But the walls of hell
Have an easier pass.

For the soul is bound
And it cannot move;
Now the sin is found,
The sin is love.

laughed together. Paul undressed quickly and then for a long time lay very still in his bunk.

Two men worked in the mine office. One was Matthews, the manager of the mine, tall and fair with clear blue eyes that held a touch of ice. He was carefully plotting red and black lines on a map of the underground workings. The other was a heavy-set, swarthy man. This was Mike, the shift-boss, Johnny's foreman. He sat at a desk typing reports.

"Mike, is that number fourteen hole finished yet?"

Mike flipped over the pages of his notebook.

"Johnny says its finished as far as he's concerned. Says his last ten feet of core show a changed formation that's no use drilling."

"Did he bring up the core?"

"Not that I know."

"Have you looked at it yourself?"

"Nope."

"Well, that's damn fine! How much his he drilled?"

"A hundred and ten feet."

"Tell him to finish off the other forty."

"He won't like that, boss. He's all ready to move down to the third."

"Then tell him to set up again and finish that hole. What the hell does he think he is, a walking assay lab?"

"He sure knows his rock . . . ." Mike thumbed over the entries in his book. "Says he doesn't like the look of things where he's been drilling."

"And what doesn't he like?"

"Too much pressure in the rock."

"Indeed."

"I think he's right. Tap the back of the drift with a hammer and you get a funny ring. Maybe we should timber along there?"

"And where do we get timber in this scrub? Besides we haven't time, man. We have a six-month development program and five months to work at it." Matthews turned away impatiently. "By the way, where did you put that last set of assay reports?"

Mike hunted up a green cardboard folder, handed the papers to Matthews. Then he made a note in his pocketbook, "N.E. drift 14, 40 ft. or else."

That night Johnny dreamt of a smiling woman who caressed his face with soft, cool hands. She was dark-eyed, and lovely, but when she spoke her voice became the harsh scream of a demonted loon. . . .

Paul dreamt of a mission schoolyard and sandy-haired boys who yelled, "Dirty breed!" and threw stones at him. A tall, strong man called his name; Paul ran sobbing to him, but the face he looked into clouded and swam before his eyes and turned into the jearing mask of his tormenters. . . .

Mike was in an endless tunnel that had chalk-marks on the walls, "N.E. 14." As he walked along he heard a high-pitched whistle, singing faintly in the rock. As the sound mounted the walls trembled and began to close in upon him. He ran but the mud underfoot clung to his boots and held him back. His lamp went out, the whistling noise grew till it filled the tunnel and all his being. . . .

Johnny and Paul were waiting on the steps of the cookery when the triangle clanged for breakfast. They sat down at one end of a long table, piled their plates with bacon, pancakes, fried potatoes, toast. There were steaks, too, and pies—this was supper for the night shift as well as breakfast for the day gang. Coffee in two-quart pots, corn syrup and milk in heavy china pitchers. The men ate quickly, without talk. The machine-runners and their helpers were in a hurry to get underground — they worked on contract — and the surface gang had to get things rolling for them. The muckers had each shoveled ten or fifteen tons or broken rock, and they were tired. Some had not troubled to wash before eating — they would wipe their hands once or twice on the sides of their pants before picking up their knives and forks.

The mine operated only one diamond-drill, the one run by Johnny and Paul. They had about eight hours a day in which to do their drilling. They could take it easy and work till the machine-runners were ready to blast, or else 'slug it' and quit around lunch-time. Today they were in a hurry, because Johnny wanted to get set up on the new location and do a good day's drilling too. They got up from breakfast at about a quarter after six.

Their lunch pails were lined up on a table by the kitchen door. When Paul picked up his, the cook called out, "Hey there!" and tossed him an orange. Paul caught it, slipped it quickly into his pail and followed Johnny outside. He liked oranges but he didn't like getting them that way. They had told him that by law the company had to provide an orange a day for every Indian employed underground.

The two left the cookery by the back door, went out past the store tents to the path leading through the muskeg up to the mine.

A few moments later Mike came in for breakfast.

"Have the diamond-drillers come in yet?"

SHORT STORY

the man in the street

RONALD BRYDEN
IV TRINITY

He lay on the cold cobbles with the great pain in his leg, watching the sky above the strange houses grow paler and more huge. As the sky lightened, the housetops seemed to jut farther into it, he could not decide whether upward or downward; perhaps if you jumped from one of those chimney-ledges you would fall upward into space. Perhaps far along some funneling corridor of his pain he could squeeze his way into the open on to some pinnacle, and launch off upward, back to the perspective where the earth seemed tiny and inconsequent as the pages of a chart, back with Rushmore and Barnes and the others into the Lancaster's small, warm cabin. Perhaps a great wave of pain would sweep him back to the security he had fallen from, away from these towering houses, and the cold street which smelled of burning; but as the pain ebbed away from each climax he would open his eyes again, and see that the sky was wider and blanker, and that the 'planes had gone.

With the help of the pain, he thought, he might forget the cold stones chilling him through the thin blanket, forget everything except the warm Lancaster cabin, with Barnes' big, dark shape hunched before the little, glowing dials. It was not so long since he had borrowed a match from Barnes to light a cigarette, when they had crossed the Dutch coast. It had been the second night of the saturation raid, and the flight had been easy, with the bomber's moon low behind them and the same steady headwind making his navigation reckonings simple. It had been exactly two-ten when the moon had picked out the bend in the river which they were looking for, and a few minutes later they had been able to see pin-points of fires already started down by the railway yards, across from the Cathedral, which unfortunately had been badly hit the night before.

Feet went past down the street. He closed his eyes until they had gone. When he opened them again, he could make out telephone wires sagging against the sky, and remembered that today would have been Friday, and Joyce would call the station to see if he could get up to London for the weekend. She had probably called on Wednesday, and found that the station was closed to incoming calls, and so knew that the squadron would be out on operations. She would be nervous; she was always on edge these days, and one night after a show at the Palladium, she had got hysterical in bed, crying about her mother, who had been killed in the Plymouth blitz. He shut his eyes, and tried to see Joyce, but it was hard to remember individual features; as he had found himself doing this last fortnight, he began confusing her face with that of a girl he had known in Liverpool before the war, and then she changed into the girl he had picked up in Leicester with the very big grey eyes.

It was funny that he had no difficulty remembering the faces of the chaps in the crew—perhaps it was because he knew them chiefly by their voices and faces, Barnes by the big, stained teeth and stiff hair, Rushmore by the thin cheeks and high forehead. Then there was Bellows, who had been a stocking salesman in peacetime, beefy and amusing as he worked the bomb bay. Tonight he had been swearing because he had twisted an ankle at soccer in the afternoon. "Remind me to buy some razor-blades when we hit the canteen for char in the morning," he had said. "Want to be pink and shining when I get that new nurse to plaster the old shin!"

That started it. He could not stop remembering. Although the pain was there, there was no closing his mind or turning back, because just as Bellows had shouted those words, smiling, something had torn into the port wing, and the Lanc had staggered, and as Barnes swung round from the panel shouting to them, his face was made livid by a blaze of light from the wing, and then they had been struggling into harnesses while the bomber pitched, and someone had stood behind him at the open hatch and clamped him on the shoulder . . .

He could smell smoke drifting down the street from the little square at the end of the houses, and remembered that he had thought as he jumped, "Out of the frying pan." It had been like falling out of a meteor, from the lurid little cabin, into a vast, red-streaked whirlpool of sky, a whirlpool which was sucking him down terribly fast into a vortex which was a circle of fire. Then there had been the great tug up his spine from the groin when he pulled the ripcord, and the sky became steady and deep, and above him the parachute turned into a monstrous, luminous rose in the glare of the city engulfed in rosy tongues.

His teeth chattered again, but the pain in his leg was growing numb. He was in the city on which he had looked down, the toy railway set which looked so pretty burning on the bend of the river. He wondered how long he had been lying on the cobble stones. He remembered the tearing agony which had told him his leg was broken, and crawling away from the parachute, and then seeing a sign 'Freidling's' above him as he lost consciousness. He had been half-aware of the glare of fire across the square, and of people running past. Someone with a round, tight-mouthed face had thrown the thin, brown blanket over him, and from time to time, the corner had been lifted from his face. Under it he could hear explosions and occasional shouting, and feet, feet, feet hurrying by as if the whole city were flying past on foot without a destination.

He retched. It was like a dream, but it had not all been a dream. He had been lying on his side dazzled by a fire across the square, when he had seen a busy little scene acted out by small black silhouettes who seemed to have little to do with him, marionettes who ran back and forth and waved their arms in front of the burning building. They had eddied about a lamp-post, and dragged another of the small, black silhouettes up to the post, and hoisted it on a rope so that it hung there limply, twisting in the firelight, and with a sickness in his stomach he had known that the dangling puppet was Barnes or Rushmore or one of the others.

Now the pain had ebbed, and there was no escaping the cold horror of remembrance, and he knew that the sky was growing much lighter over the strange street, and he would have to move soon before they came to find him and set his feet turning slowly under a lamp-post while women screamed and men cried in anger. It was no longer safe to lie there pretending to be dead, and he could not even draw the blanket over his face.

He stiffened. There were feet coming along the cobbles, but they were dragging, not hurrying like the feet in the night, echoing dully between the blank buildings. He knew that he should close his eyes, but he was fascinated to see what kind of person was approaching, and he could not.

The man's face was unshaven, and dirty, sooty stains ran from under his spectacles down through the silver stubble on his cheeks. He was small and hatless; there was a rent in his overcoat near the pocket, and some dried blood was on his bald head. Behind the spectacles, his small eyes were glassy and red-rimmed. For what seemed like minutes they looked into each other's face; pain gripped him again, but through it he could see the little man's mouth working, and he wondered if he were going to spit on him or to cry. Instead the man spoke; somehow it seemed quite natural and reasonable for him to speak broken English words in that empty street that smelled of smoke and dust, under the huge sky.

"Why are you bombing us?" he said, his mouth working. "Why are you bombing our children and women?"

He looked at the man without speaking, and because he wanted to be warm

Good King Wenceslas looked out
On the feast of Stephen
Unperturbed by any doubt—
We, alas, don't even Know when Stephen's feast may be,
Why, and what occasion:
Wenceslas, I would that we
Were of the same persuasion.

In his Master's steps he trod,
Feet with faith unstinted
Following the word of God
Just as it lay printed;
Undismayed by modern qualms,
Modern speculation,
Canonized for giving alms
Without hesitation.

Wenceslas, thou holy king
Stand by me, confiding
Whence and from what secret spring
Flows thy faith abiding;
Help us as you helped the poor,
Draw aside the curtain:
How can Christian men be sure?
How can they be certain?

II

Angels from the realms of glory
Sweetly singing o'er the plains,
Why does your familiar story
Most affect me when it rains?

Why does Christmas always find me
Wrapped in melancholy thought?
Private darkness always blind me
To the glory I have sought?

Teach me holier emotions
As your trumpets thrill the air:
Do you really want devotions
Dedicated in despair?

Brighten Thou this sombre matin,
Christ descend, and speak to me;
Angels always sing in Latin
Tidings that are Greek to me.

Demonstrate how Bethlehem is
Solace for my special hell;
Grant me glory in extremis,
Consecrate my first Noel.

the organ grinder

The organ grinder wound his way
Noisily down the street
The monkey played and children stared,
Groggy in the heat.
His clumsy feet in big black boots
Left markings on the stone
Where rain still stayed in hollow spots
And held the wheezy groan.
The ancient organ played a tune:
All strangeness worn away,
The children put a penny in
And watched the monkey play.
A woman passed in dainty shoes
And stepped around the pair
She didn't notice that her back
Was dirty from his stare,
But heard him spit on the curb
And children laugh in glee
As he wound the box, and smiling
Set the monkey free.

the breed

"Johnny and the breed? Just went out the door."

Mike hesitated, considered going after them. Oh hell, he thought, I'll see them before they get started. He reached across the table for the coffee.

* * *

When Mike got up to the mine Johnny and Paul were ready to go underground. They were standing by the headframe, in their rubber clothes and steel helmets, waiting for the cage to take them down. A carbide lamp hissed on each helmet, its flame invisible in the hot morning sunlight. They watched the oily cable climb slowly up the shaft. The diesel engines in the hoist-room couged and barked. Hammers rang in the forge. An insect buzzed loudly as it zoomed away from the fetid air of the shaft-mouth.

Mike's boots crunched on the broken stone.

"Johnny — hold on a sec."

The two looked up.

"Morning, Mike. What's on?"

"You're to finish off number fourteen hole on the second."

Johnny shifted a sack of drill bits to his left hand. He pulled off his right glove, tilted his helmet back and wiped little beads of sweat from his forehead.

"Look Mike, I'm getting solid chart in my corebarrel. Why waste bits on that stuff? Anyhow that north-east drift doesn't feel right."

Mike brushed away a blackfly that had settled on his neck. He looked at Paul standing motionless behind Johnny.

"Scared maybe? Get drilling or pick up your time."

Johnny's lips tightened. He said nothing but opened the safety gate and stepped into the waiting cage. Paul followed, pulling a set of core-boxes in after him. Johnny's hand reached for the signal cord.

"Then tell Matthews to come down and take a look, if you don't believe me."

Mike nodded and swung the gate shut.

Five rings. One-pause-two-pause-two. Second level.

The cage dropped away.

The sunlight faded to a postage-stamp square above their heads, disappeared. The lamps burned brightly in the cold wet air that closed around them. There was a lingering stench of burnt explosives.

They went two hundred and fifty feet under the earth. When they got out Johnny gave one ring to release the cage. They sloshed along the cross-cut leading to the north-east drift, their rubber boots splashing in pools of water and mud, their lamps throwing dim splotches of light on the surrounding walls. In some places the rock glistened black where water from some fissure had washed it clean; elsewhere it was coated with gray mud from the blasts. Their lamps illuminated the dust particles hanging in the gray fog in which they moved.

When the rails underfoot bent around to the right they were in the drift. This was in mineral-bearing rock which was for some reason dry. On the ragged, slashed walls survey numbers were chalked at fifty-foot intervals: 12, 13, 14. At station fourteen a mine car stood loaded with the drilling equipment. Air and water hoses, drill rods, core-barrels, the drilling-bar and the wooden blocks to brace it, bolts and clamps, wrenches, spanners and the bright steel cylinder of the drill.

Hole number fourteen slanted downwards in the wall.

They began unloading the car and setting up. Johnny got his shoulder under the seven-foot steel length of the bar and heaved it into place. Paul drove in the chocks at the floor and ceiling. The drill would be bolted to this bar once it was securely wedged in position. Paul picked up a wrench and dragged the hoses back down the drift to connect them to the air and water handle in the jack at the foot of pipes. Johnny inserted a thick steel the drilling-bar. He hit it sharp blows with a sledge-hammer, tightening the bar against the wooden blocks.

It came after his third blow with the sledge.

Pebbles and dust spurted from a sudden fracture in the ceiling. Johnny looked up, blank-eyed, frozen where he stood, the sledge over his shoulder for the final blow. Things seemed to happen very slowly—the bar quivered under the pressure of thousands of tons of rock, the spurting pebbles struck a high, clear note from it . . . then the blocks gave way and the bar snapped Johnny's neck and the drift was dark and hideous with the roar of falling rock.

* * *

Mike and Matthews were dressing to go underground when the alarm sounded. Nine quick bells, a pause, then two. Second level. They grabbed helmets and lamps and ran to the hoist-room.

"Where's the cage?"

The hoistman sat tensed over his levers.

"Coming up from first."

"Get her up here fast!"

Matthews called to an Indian carrying steel from the forge to the shaft-head.

"You! Hike it down to camp and bring up the muckers. Accident! Now mush!"

"Mike, get helmets and lamps for the surface crew and bring 'em down. I'm going on ahead."

The rescue work had already begun when the manager reached the north-east drift. Two machine-runners and their helpers worked to free a man's legs, where great slabs of rock had pinned him facedown in the rubble. The still hands clutched a wrench and a hose coupling. Air hissed from a broken valve, a few pebbles clattered down from the black vault in the roof of the drift.

Matthews knelt down and felt for a pulse.

"Who is it, boss . . . Johnny?"

"It's Paulie-the-breed . . . and he's alive. Get him out of here, a couple of you. Johnny must be back in there . . ."

He looked at the cascade of broken rock. The tunnel was blocked completely some twenty feet from where they had found Paulie. The hoses were thirty feet long . . . Johnny with with the drill, thirty feet back there in the drift . . . perhaps. . . .

They took Paulie up to surface and laid him on a table in the wash-house, while they improvised a stretcher. They left a Cree named Job to watch the tourniquets on the crushed legs, and went back to the second level. There was no doctor in the camp.

When the effects of shock wore off Paulie's face blanched under the dirt and blood. He made no sound, just bit through his lower lip when the pain hit him. There was morphine in a first-aid kit at the mine office, but no one had thought to get it.

About noon a radio message brought a plane and a doctor to the lake before the camp.

Paulie lay on a cot in the bunk-house. The doctor came in and began to examine the crushed legs.

Job stood awkwardly beside the bed.

"We walk again, doc?"

The doctor didn't look up.

"No."

"He live?"

"If you call it that—maybe."

* * *

When the doctor was through they strapped Paulie onto a stretcher and carried him down to the plane. The sun was hot on the silver wings of the plane and the cabin was hot and close. They tied the handles of the stretcher to ring-bolts on the cabin floor. The doctor tested the knots and climbed up into the co-pilot's seat. The pilot started the motor, signaled with a wave of his hand to the men on the dock. They cast off the mooring ropes and warped the plane around to the end of the dock. The pilot taxied out into the lake, turned into the wind. The motor snarled as the plane gathered speed, and the silver pontoons kicked up fountains of spray. Then the plane was in the air and banking away over the pines along the south shore of the lake, a diminishing speck of brightness in the blue sky.

SECOND PRIZE LIGHT VERSE — FRANCES HOPPER, III VICTORIA ambition

The noiseless foot of time creeps ever on
While numerous desires stay unfulfilled;
Before I die I wish to see the sun
Rise in a Rocky mountain pass, instilled

With beauty; to fly the English Channel
And recline on a beach in the famed Riviera;
To see if some old European man'll
Kiss my hand and say 'Have some Madeira.'

To visit Rome and see the Sistine ceiling
And marvel at the master Michelangelo
And gaze at Adam 'till my head is reeling,
No match beside a magic lantern show.

But all this travel, be it understood,
Is not the only object of pursuit;
For I would like to paint and carve in wood
And write a book and learn to play the flute.

The tour is limited to 48 people.

THIRD PRIZE SHORT STORY

the snowman

JIM DICKINSON III VICTORIA

For Christmas the children received a strange gift; a white rabbit — over which they shrieked with joy on Christmas morning. Even Mona seemed pleased. In the unusually mild weather that followed, the rabbit was often let out of its box to play on the lawn and nibble the sodden grass. For a while its long legs and funny jerky movements, its perpetually quivering nose and its big sensitive ears intrigued the children, including all the children from round about. When it hopped over the lawn they screamed happily and ran after it. But in time they tired of it, except Mona, who liked it more than ever.

Mona watched it in its box with as much amusement and as little interference as Alicia, her older sister, watched the endless squabbling of Mona and her twin, Aubrey, and its invariable outcome in which both children were silenced with parental impartiality. Alicia never failed to marvel at Mona's imperturbable stupidity in defending herself and Aubrey's knack of dressing his innocuous twin in culpability. By his actions it appeared that in as much as they were twins, everything of Mona's was his, but since he was a boy, nothing of his was hers. This perverse logic so frequently reduced his sister to helpless sulks that her parents soon concluded that not only was she the cause of most of the squabbles but was least satisfied over the administration of justice. Her greater susceptibility was Aubrey's special joy. He once even tried extending his conquests to his older sister's territory but she repulsed him with such dexterity that the house rang with howls. It was one of the rare occasions that Alicia was out of favor with her parents.

But what at last came to annoy Aubrey no end was that the rabbit, whenever released from its box, now always made straight for Mona where it was assured the most protection. For the other children, in the ebb of purely passive interest in the animal, had now turned to a variety of tweakings, ticklings, and raising by the ears, from which Mona defended it with much more vigor than she had ever succeeded in defending herself.

When she managed to get away from the others she sat in the cellar by the rabbit. She even tried reading to it, but the reception was indifferent and she usually just read to herself. "Never mind, when summer comes I'm going to take you out to the woods and let you go," she told it. They gazed at each other through the wire mesh, wide-eyed and uncomprehending.

One afternoon when Mona got home from school she found Aubrey and some other children on the lawn beside the empty hutch. They were excited. Angela, a pretty little girl from across the road, tugged at the hem of her dress and jumped up and down making elated squeaks, her blond curls bobbing up and down with her. She indicated a drain pipe that stood about a foot above ground, with its dome lying beside it. "Aubrey put the bunny down there!" she gurgled. A staccato yelp of laughter from another child verified this. "Oh I did not," said Aubrey sheepishly. Mona ran to the pipe and looked down but she couldn't see anything. She reached down but she couldn't feel anything. Roger, who was a little older and who lived over a store, said: "Put your ear to it." A hush fell on the children and they listened in fascination.

Bright-eyed and flushed they watched Mona get to her feet. They had never seen their playmate's sister do much of anything before, least of all cry. Mona looked all around at them with dry urgent little sobs, pulling her hands together. Quite suddenly it began to snow hard and the other children, newly diverted by the welcome change in weather, ran off to play elsewhere. But afterwards it seemed to the little girl as if they were playing a game and she didn't know the rules. She guessed the white rabbit hadn't either.

He felt, from a long way off, a shock of cold against flesh and knew that eyes had opened for a moment — his eyes — because they hurt with the dazzling orange brilliance. The sun must have come out. He saw the fingers raw and red quite close and then he shut out the painful light to watch the dull red pain inside his head get duller and duller. Perhaps if he could breathe a little he wouldn't feel afraid about something, wouldn't notice the distant panic. Maybe they're taking my tonsils out again. I am nine years old, I am nine years old, I am nine years old . . . .

Indeed the sun had come out. The impenetrable gray cast that had moved slowly eastward over Parnell for days ended abruptley in a long straight line. Above, the pale blue wash of winter sky widened from the west, flooding the suddenly glittering ground with sunlight on a late February afternoon. One might have followed the retreat of the huge cloud mass across the campus of Parnell University by the electric lights that disappeared in its wake.

Professor Briden walked across the dais talking as he went, and flipped off the light switch. Then he returned to his stand, still talking, and glanced at his students. Many were properly appreciative of the studied little effect, for it was believed he only read his lectures; others were looking dreamy-eyed at the new sunlight, their intent faces relaxed for a moment.

"To quote Dr. Hutchins: 'The problem is urgent because all other education is wasted if moral educaton fails,'" said Professor Briden, and out of the corner of his eye he saw the boy in the jersey reach down and gather his books off the floor. He talked faster for the hour was almost over and this fellow invariably led the exodus. "'The crisis of the contemporary world may be summed up'"—he doesn't have to make that commotion—in a minute the others will start—"'in the proposition that our knowledge now exceeds our capacity to use it for the good.'" The boy in the jersey sat back, gazing blankly at the professor and drumming his fingers on his closed books. Why does he take the course then? — "'The solution is not to reduce our knowledge but to make moral education equal to it'"—Imagine dressing like that at this time of year — "if you'll just be quiet for another minute, please—'we have now reached the point where the bad character or even the momentary carelessness of the human race'"—he raised his voice — "'may lead to its extermination.'" In the original important unit of human-

CHARLES L. REA
I VICTORIA

They walked together towards the Blue Horizon, the best bar around in the downtown area. It was late afternoon and outside it was sunny and bright, but the dark blue-green glass of the cocktail lounge looked in on a sombre scene. It was as if you were peering down through water off some south sea island and saw the weird shapes among the rocks. Only they were just people.

"Well," said Bill, "let's go in."

They both entered, in their blue business suits with their black brief cases, and picked a table at the side in the shadows. The one called Bill motioned for the waiter, who came over.

"Two scotch and sodas. O.K., Jim?"

"Right," the other said.

Bill fished out cigarettes from his inside coat pocket, lit them with his shiny new lighter. Silent for a moment, they listened to the steady subdued hum of cocktail voices, the piano-bass-guitar group playing softly in the background.

"What can he do besides look good?"

"You know damn well what he can do," said Jim. "He's graduated just like the rest of us. Honours, too."

"So what. That's still no reason for dragging him into the firm."

"Look, Bill, we've been through all this before. I've told you he knows his stuff, he's got just as many contacts as we have, and, and Mike and I like him."

The waiter brought the drinks.

"Yeah, but I still insist that three is a hell of a better number to have than four. And anyways, we don't know Bud that well." He took a swallow. "Listen, what kind of a name is Bud for a lawyer?" He sneered slightly at the name, then grinned.

"I'm dying with laughter. Look, don't be ridiculous. My God, you don't put a guy's personal name on the firm's stationery."

"Even his last name is funny."

"Don't be silly."

"Who's being silly? All I say is that he isn't coming into this partnership. Or else I'm getting out."

Bill gulped down the rest of his scotch.

"That's no way to drink scotch," Jim said. "It's a gentleman's drink. You sip it slowly like the English do."

"Oh go to hell."

"Go to hell yourself."

"Well, before we do, let's have another drink."

"I don't know why you're in such a huff over things, but I suppose we might as well decide this right now, Bill."

"Yeah. Where the hell's our waiter? Oh, there. Come here, Mac."

When the drinks had been set in front of them Jim sloshed scotch in the cold, wet glass. Then he looked up.

"Let's have a toast."

"O.K. What'll we toast?"

"That's a good question. I never thought of that."

"Well, it was your idea."

"Forget it then, if that's the way you feel about it."

"I don't feel any way about it. I just said it was your idea. Which it was."

"That's true. It was just that it seemed the thing to do. I wasn't thinking—"

"You never think of anything," Bill said.

"That's an outrageous lie! Damned outrageous!" And he knit his eyebrows at the other, who was grinning. "What's so funny?"

"I just thought of Townshend when you said 'outrageous'. Remember how he used to get so mad at us in Latin when we'd be fooling around?" Bill mimicked Jim saying the word, only throatier.

"Oh God, do I ever!" He laughed. "Whatever became of good old Townshend? Retire?"

"Yeah. He collects goldfish."

They laughed together.

"It's not that funny but it's sure funny," said Jim.

"Yeah. Good old Townshend."

They had another laugh.

"British, you know!"

Jim laughed so hard he almost spilled his scotch.

"Frightfully!"

This brought spasms from both of them. When they had settled down Jim reached for his glass.

"A toast to Townshend. To good old Townshend."

"To Townshend. Good old Townshend."

The glasses clinked and were emptied. The piano-bass-guitar trio had left the stand and a blonde girl in a black dress was singing a popular song of a few years back. Her dress was smooth and shiny and her body arched in time to her accompanist who was short and bald and bored.

"My, my, but that tasted good. Good good good," sang Jim.

"Come on. Let's have another," said Bill.

Jim's eyes narrowed and he leaned forward and said in a soft, secretive voice: "Let's do that little thing."

Bill pounded the table top with his fist. "Now you're talking!"

The waiter set the two scotch and sodas down. Bill grabbed both and bent low over the table, huddling them into his chest.

"Stop trying to be the comedian," Jim said. "You're funny as hell."

"All right. Take it, then. See if I care."

"Say, do you see that singer, shimmering and wiggling? She looks just like June, Christ."

"Oh for God's sake! Every woman that wiggles looks like Junie to you." He held out his hand flat, with the palm down. "I can't tell if it's moving or not but I feel just the slightest bit drunk."

"So do I," said Jim, "But drink up and we'll have some more. I feel like getting drunker."

"That's a damn good idea, Jimmy boy. Damn good. But I'm tired of this place. Too dark and mysterious. Let's go to my place and have some real ones."

"That's what I like to hear, William. Let's hit the road."

The trio was back and was playing a tune that was fast and light, and people talked and glasses clinked.

ity, that fast fading institution, the family, the ground-work of" —Only the girl in the white sweater, sitting at the front, was still listening—"the ground work of—For next day I wish you'd look at Hegel," he said — to his notes, because it was embarrassing to see the class crowding out the door. Ill-mannered. The girl in the front row was still writing. At least she was earnest, but she wouldn't pass. Anger welled up for a moment. Yes, she will too.

In the empty lecture room, Andrew Briden, M.A., Associate Professor of Ethics, leaned on the stand, and rested his forehead in his hand. The other hand relaxed and the notes bent suddenly in the middle and drooped over.

They cram it in at the last minute, and that's that. He knew he didn't care anymore either — hadn't cared for years maybe. For a long time. Perhaps he'd lost something, lost it in a sheaf of lecture notes and somehow it had all got divorced from the facts. No application to reality. His eyes focussed suddenly at the loud ordinary voice of Orbeth at the door. "Want a lift, Andrew?"

"That would be nice, Walter. Can you wait just a moment? I want to drop this shroud in the office."

It was nice, too, driving home with Walter, listening to the loud cheerful voice, letting someone else worry about the stop-lights.

"How are Ethel and the kids, Andrew?"

"Oh fine. Ethel went down to the station to pick up Alicia this afternoon, so I haven't got the car. Certainly good of you. Not much fun battling the bus lines in this weather. Alicia's been to her grandmother's for a week."

"Alicia must be quite the young lady now?"

"Well, not quite. She's twelve."

"Oh. Getting cold, isn't it?" Andrew didn't seem to be listening. "Very cold. Colder with this clear weather."

The kids are fine. Three fine kids. Alicia loves to go to her grandmother's, Alicia's a darling. Her granny's favorite. Grandma Briden never asked the other two, though, but after all an old lady can't handle three. She always just said: "Well Alicia was the first born," as if that were important somehow. And if you asked one twin you'd have to ask the other. But Aubrey was a real boy.

The Bridens were overjoyed when Aubrey came and turned out to be a boy. Let's see, Alicia'd be four when the boy came. I don't think she minded. Aubrey was always the baby, always the youngest, the pet. Then there was Mona. Odd but you always think of Mona last, if you think of her at all. Morose child. Uninterested. And when you think of her you can't clearly picture how she looks. An unfinished face, unformed, with no characteristic expression. Oh well, every family draws a blank. He felt a twinge of guilt.

The street lights came on and he glanced at his watch. "Oh Walter, I forgot," he said hastily. "Let me out here, could you? I have to pick up something. Don't wait; I can walk the rest." He slammed the car door. In the drug wholesale he bought a pound of activated carbon. The clerk grinned and said: "What's the matter, something die?

Andrew grinned back and took his change and left. "Some people might shovel their snow," he muttered ferociously as he tramped along. Yes, something died. Died in a drain. He took a convulsive gulp of cold air. So sordid. What a stupid thing to give to kids. If Ethel doesn't make Mona go out and play, she'll be sick.

"Too lazy to shovel their snow," he muttered again, and his rubbers filled up and got soggy inside. He'd have to use the back door — Ethel wouldn't have him traipsing wet feet in the front door. He turned down the back lane and when he passed through the break in the cedar hedge his eye fell on a large snowman, rather ill-formed and bulky. Devoid of bits of coal and other devices it had no face and looked the same from any direction. Then he saw Mona looking at him. Her serious plain face bothered him. He felt the same uneasy guilt again. He was a little sorry for her.

"Well, so you're out playing again." He stooped and pulled the mittens over the numb little hands. Then mechanically he carried a shovel into the garage and entered the house.

"You home already, Ethel?" he called from the stairs. She replied over a sizzling sound from the kitchen that Alicia's train was early; then she added that supper was ready, and he'd better tell Aubrey and Mona to come in.

Mona scuffed toward the door, noticing that the heavy damp packing snow underfoot was turning powdery and crystalline in the intense cold. Reflecting, she went back and touched the snowman, but it was packed hard, and the surface was turning slick and icy. Inside she sat at the table.

Alicia took her place opposite and glanced at Mona. The younger girl looked pale and serious but she was eating her soup with regularly timed scoops.

"Where's Aubrey?" her mother said. "Mona, where's Aubrey? I thought he was playing in the yard with you?"

"He was, but just for a little while."

"Well, it's getting late, and he ought to be home," said her father. "How's my girl? Have a good time?"

Alicia smiled assent at her father. Eyes bright and face flushed, she was very pretty at that moment.

But after supper there was still no Aubrey, and Alicia and Mona were sent upstairs where they wouldn't be exposed to awkward adult anxiety and more unsuitable scenes. Even so, Mona heard her mother's frightened tears and was moved. Afterwards there were loud authoritative knocks on the door when the police arrived.

Alicia lay flat on her bed. Lying in the dark she stared at the flickering light on the ceiling. "You're my only girl at grandma's," her grandmother always said. Long ago she had had that kind of attention here, too. The feeling of being everyone's pet was a feeling she had never forgotten; it had stayed on like a longing, the way the intangible sensations of early childhood do long after the details are obscured. As always she had left her grandmother's with deflated spirits. And then this afternoon while she lay stomach down on the nursery window seat, head propped on her elbows, everything had changed. Personal volition drained with the setting sun and in the queer orange half-light she had lain detached, emotionless, watching but scarcely understanding.

She listened intently to her heart pounding. She'd love to have the children at school point at her, even snub her perhaps, as they did in books. It would be very dramatic and very tragic. Alicia felt tragic. The excitement was almost more than she could stand. She went downstairs and cried in the sun room where she could easily be seen from the hall.

Mona had been in the nursery for some time. Down below there was the same commotion — if anything it was a bit louder and more hysterical, but the noise filtered into the big room indistinctly, and was hardly obtrusive at all. The nursery, so called from baby days, was a room set off from the rest of the house and now served as Mona's bedroom. It was faintly illumined by a streetlamp. Mona looked out the window at the snowman, rather than at the rectangle of light on the wallpaper where the nursery figures, now colorless, capered with eerie and static intensity. The nursery windows were the only ones commanding a view of the patch behind the cedar break. From downstairs the cedars were too high, and no other upstairs windows looked on that section of the garden. But presently she wasn't listening anymore.

At night my head draws into hard sharp bits here and there in the rock-wool softness like the opera glasses when the screw turns and they focus. Or a bun with hard currants in it. Twisted under soft white fur—or snow—but in the morning it was always just the bed. The sheets rumpled, limp and unsinister, and daylight.

She must have slept for awhile. Much later she heard her door open and close softly. The house was very quiet. Alicia walked across the room and sat on the window seat. The two sisters looked at one another by the dim light from the street. Alicia remarked that the yard looked peculiar. "Because when you make a snowman, you can see the green paths where the snow was rolled. And that"—she indicated the lawn — "looks like it was shovelled."

"My train was early this afternoon," she went on after a pause, and added as an afterthought, "The policeman left a long time ago. They don't know where he is." She paused. "I know."

Mona watched her dully.

"I was here in the window seat nearly all afternoon," she went on. There was no response; apparently there wasn't even any reaction.

"You're a horrid little monster," she said finally, in a low voice, "and I saw it all. Aubrey's frozen to death!" she hissed.

It was true. Aubrey had prevailed on the unwilling Mona to make a snowman out of him just as they made sandmen at the beach, right up to the neck. Mona shovelled and shovelled, piling the snow higher, packing it harder. "Let me out now," said Aubrey, "I'm too cold." Mona looked at him. He whispered, but the casing held his limbs powerless. "Break it down!" he screamed, and Mona lifted the shovel high in the air. When she finished the snowman the sun had set and her father was pulling her mittens on.

"Are you going to tell?" she asked the older girl.

"Hardly. You see, I don't know anything about it." She slid off the seat. "But every day you can gather the melting snow."

Mona's mind drifted away from something horrible. In the summer the sunlight is a copper cross on the screen door and even in the early morning you can lie on the grass and it's warm. You look up at the wonderful deep blue, and the green branches sway and roar high above, and silver glints and flecks across the shiny oak-leaves — thousands of leaves, green, green leaves—and mottles the warm grass below . . . .

A shrivelled leaf stirred lifelessly on the end of a branch and was still. The blank face of the snowman was terrifying through a veil of tears.

"I never knew a rabbit could make a sound. Any sound at all," she sobbed, but once again the door had closed softly and no one heard.

Alicia walked quickly down the silent carpeted hall to her own room. Winter would soon be over, and the anticipation of spring filled her with uneasy excitement; however she secured her conscience against reproach in the knowledge that she would prove a constant solace to her parents.

and out of pain and away from the noise of destruction in the strange city, he thought of the cabin of the Lancaster again from which the world looked small and green and neat, but it was no good. He looked at the telephone wires across the sky, and suddenly he could see Joyce's face quite clearly, twisted in tears as it had been in the hotel room after the show at the Palladium; it was bitter with hatred, the lips almost snarling, and she was saying "They started it, didn't they? They started it, the dirty bastards!"

But the great pain blotted her out, and there was only himself wounded in the wounded city, and the smell of ruin and the white sky. He had not yet spoken to the little man, because there was nothing to say. The little man had gone. There was no more comfort in being alone; the cobbles were icy through the thin blanket, and the pain began to rise again in his leg, and he shut his eyes and wished someone would come and take him away.

A Tribute To The Baha'i World Faith

"I have followed it (the Baha'i Faith) with deep interest ever since my trip to London to the First Races Congress in July, 1911, when I heard for the first time of the Baha'i Movement and its summary of the principles for peace. I followed it during the war and after the war. The Baha'i Teaching is one of the spiritual forces now absolutely necessary to put the spirit first in this battle against material forces . . . The Baha'i Teaching is one of the great instruments for the final victory of the spirit and of humanity."

through the medium of the UTDC."

The report continued, "It is the opinion of the Players' Guild executive that the irresponsibility on the part of The Varsity staff has not only created an issue where no issue would otherwise have occurred, but has also placed the Guild in an invidious position in the eyes of the college authorities, the results of which might conceivably cause restrictions to be placed on future Guild activities which would seriously hamper its work."

One of the specific charges against The Varsity said, "The executive of the Players' Guild were entirely ignorant of the preparation of, and sentiments to be expressed in, the news article which appeared in the March 1 issue of The Varsity. The Varsity made no attempt to contact any member of the executive of the Players' Guild, although I have been assured from two sources that the article in question was in preparation at least three days before publication."

Davis later replied to a questioner that the claim the article was in preparation for three days was "hearsay."

He commented on the March 1 article's statement that "members of the UTDC were not available for comment" on the night of Feb. 28. He declared he is served by a telephone-answering service, and there is no record of any call. Davis is the UC member of the UTDC.

WOMEN'S ATHLETIC ELECTIONS

Women's Athletic Directorate

The electoral meeting of the University of Toronto Women's Athletic Association to elect the six student representatives of the Women's Athletic Directorate for 1950-51 will be held in the Lecture Room, Household Science Building, on Tuesday, March 14, at 5.00 p.m. sharp.

Nominations will be received by the Secretary of the Association until Wednesday, March 8, at 2.00 p.m. Nominations must be signed by two members of the U. of T. W.A.A. and must be made on the forms to be outlined from the Secretary, Room 62, University College.

A student eligible for nomination must at the time of nomination be in her second or higher year, but not in the final year, at the University.

Representatives to the Electoral Body must be appointed and sent to the meeting as follows: the W.A.A.'s of University College, Victoria, St. Michael's, St. Hilda's, the Faculty of Medicine and the School of Physical and Health Education, four representatives each; the W.A.A. of the School of Nursing, two; the W.A.A.'s of O.T. and Physical Therapy, one representative each; Basketball Club, six; Hockey Club, five; Swimming Club, four; Tennis Club three; Badminton, Baseball and Volleyball Clubs, two each; Ski Club, one; Archery Club, one; the undergraduate members of the 1949-50 Directorate. Names of voting representatives must be given to the Secretary not later than Thursday, March 9 and no proxies will be permitted except upon written notice to the Secretary prior to the election. Electoral Body representatives may only carry one vote each.

Women's Athletic Clubs

The annual elections for the women's Basketball, Hockey, Swimming, Tennis, Badminton, Baseball, Volleyball, Ski, Archery and Bowling Clubs will be held on Wednesday, March 15. Voting will be held from noon to 5.00 p.m. in Room 62, University College.

An election for the presidency ONLY of each club will be held, voting to be preferential. Nominations for the office of president for each club must be signed by two voting members of the club in question and filed with the Secretary of the Athletic Association, Room 62, U.C., by 2.00 p.m., Thursday, March 9.

Each faculty, college and department entering one or more teams in an intramural series is entitled to ONE representative on the executive of the club directing that sport. The president of the club is not regarded as a representative and her faculty is entitled to its regular representative.

Voting members for each club are restricted to those who have been registered with the Secretary of the W.A.A. as playing members of an intramural or intercollegiate team in that particular sport during the past academic year, or who are certified by a team manager to have attended at least 50 per cent of the practices of that team; members of the club executive and managers of all teams playing under the club.

LIFEMEN COP INTERMED CROWN

Trinity Tie Saints 7-7 In Cup Tilt

By BARRY THOMAS

Trinity and St. Mike's A fought to a 7-7 draw in the second game of the hockey finals yesterday. It was a see-saw battle all the way with the rejuvenated Trinity team having a slight edge in the play. St. Mike's now hold a 3-1 margin in points, with the result that a win or a tie Monday will give them the championship.

Trinity took a two-goal lead in both the first and third periods, but the double blue came right back to tie it up. In spite of the fourteen goals scored against them, Grossi and Brownell made many spectacular saves, which brought rounds of applause from the large crowd.

Prendergast Hat-tricks

Trinity's goals were well distributed with defence-men Tony Wells scoring two, and Whitehead, Leishman, Cowan, Crerar, and Wright picking up singles. For St. Mike's, it was their high-flying forward line of Duffy, McKillop, and Prendergast that led their way, accounting for six of their goals. Prendergast performed the hat-trick and added two assists, while Duffy scored two and McKillop one. Bill McNamara, who led many dangerous rushes, notched the remaining goal and assisted on three others.

The game was fast and clean, with only five penalties handed out. However, the contest became rough in the third period for awhile, but the boys cooled off and paid strict attention to hockey.

Kelly and Robertson played well for St. Mike's, while Crerar and Cowan turned in fine efforts for Trinity.

Rack Up Four Hattricks Score Twenty Times Carl Marks Up Shut-out

By JOHN DUGAN

Jack Life's Intermediate Hockey copped their fifth straight Shaw Cup as they swamped Waterloo College 20 to 0 yesterday at Varsity Arena. This leaves them with a 7 to 1 record, the sole defeat coming at the hands of an inspired O.A.C. team last Friday.

First Shut-out

Gary Carl earned his first shut-out of the campaign as his forwards kept the Waterloo men too busy to worry very often about scoring. Waterloo yanked their goalie at the end of the second period, but his substitute fared no better as the little Blues added seven more to the thirteen goals they had amassed in the first two cantos.

The Intermeds fattened their scoring totals as they piled up 43 scoring points as a team. The boys hit for four hat tricks; John Lickley, Pete Gawinski, Al Conboy, and Rene Gauthier doing the honors. The first three named netted four apiece while Gauthier got three. Pat McLoughlin and "Black Jake" Raftis bagged a pair apiece, both of Raftis' being of the unassisted variety. Bill "Capt. Harry" Paterson bagged the other goal, also unassisted. Ted Gawinski and "Little Joe" Wolf were the only Varsity forwards who failed to dent the twine.

There was no real doubt as to the eventual outcome after the first three minutes of play as the Blues kept the Blue and Gold bottled up in their own end most of the time and the hard-skating, hard-checking Blue defense handled all the Waterloo attacks with ease.

Real credit should go to Coach Jack Life for the wonderful job he done in winning his fifth straight championship; assists to manager Ron Hall and trainer Smith.

Varsity—Goal, Carl; defence, Allan, London; centre, Lickley; wings, Paterson, Gauthier; alternates, Hyde, Fingland, Raftis, Wolf, T. Gawinski, P. Gawinski, McLoughlin, Conboy.

Waterloo—Goal, Dinkel; defence, Luciw, McDonald; centre, Ariss.; wings, Kallid, Haney; alternates, Mutton, Innes, Howald, Gellatley, Kramer, Kraft, Schade, Gitter, Ogg.

Referees—Percy Allan, Bing Caswell.

Blues, Carabins, Tonight Must Win For Playoff

This is it. Tonight the Blues play the high-flying Montreal Carabins at Varsity Arena in the final and deciding game of the schedule. Varsity is two points ahead of the Montrealers, but the latter have two games to play with Queen's, so the Blues have to win this one to force a tie in the standings. They have won one and lost two to the Frenchmen; a win tonight will give them a saw-off in their dealing with that team.

Fox and Moore still being on the shelf, Varsity's line-up will be the same as last week, Turcott again centering Frey and Arrowsmith. If there is no play-off, or if the play-off is held on neutral ice, tonight will be Cece's last appearance at Varsity Arena, as it will with Wilf Digby, Wes Moore, Bun Hayes, and Art Bell. T he rest of the team, if all goes well, will be back next year.

The Carabins, though fast skaters and high scorers, have been a home team, and if the Blues' checking shows as well as against McGill Friway, the Frenchmen may fare no better than the last time they were here.

Another Students' Union Suggestion

This sketch of a proposed students' union is another of the three-day assignments given to Fifth Year Architecture sturents, this time by P. R. Brook. Like the plan printed in the Friday issue, this is not a permanent plan, but a suggestion. Note the one-floor extension with a three-storey wing. The top of the one-floor extension is to be a terrace on the same level as Queen's Park.

Take Soap And Shoelaces Travel Pamphlet Suggests

If you intend to visit Europe this year you may be interested to know that:

You should take two dozen passport photos, and not forget to memorize your passport number.

Your camera, if foreign made, should be registered in Canada before leaving if you expect to get it back into the country.

The Netherlands Bureau voor Buitenlands Betrekkingen can tell you the best accommodations in Holland.

All this information and almost anything else a student traveller might want to know is included in the pamphlet "So You're Going to Europe", prepared for the National Federation of Canadian University Students by the University of Manitoba NFCUS Committee.

Data for the pamphlet was gathered from the United States National Student Association, the National Union of Students of England, Wales and Northern Ireland, The Canadian Department of External Affairs, Thos. Cook and Sons Ltd. (Cook's tours) and other expert organizations.

The resulting 18 page booklet tells all about passports and visas, travel conditions, finances, customs regulations, living accommodations, travel rates, European university courses open to student travellers and Canadian consulates.

No detail was too small to be considered in the pamphlet. For instance the authors warned travellers to take soap for stops in the many hotels that do not supply it, an extra pair of glasses, and hard-to-get items like shoe laces, hairpins, bobbypins and razor blades.

The local NFCUS committee expects to get more of the pamphlets for any students wanting them. Copies may also be got by writing NFCUS National Headquarters, McMaster University, Hamilton, Ontario.

Bury Campus Apathy

Edmonton, March 6. — (CUP) — Amid the loud wails of student supporters, "campus apathy" was buried in the dejected surroundings of the University of Alberta last week. The feeling of the moment was illustrated by the funeral-garbed supporters of the extinct university spirit at Alberta, who led by the SAC President, bewailed the fact that apathy at that University, long dead, was being buried by the faculty.

The service took the form of a funeral led by a ribbed "father of the Alberta faith". Three coffins bearing the spirit of football, the spirit of Mock Parliament which was banned two years ago, and the recently banned Gateway (student paper) were borne in from the Arts Building of the campus on a black-draped truck.

Service Costs Up Fees Raise Ahead Says SAC Report

The problem of rising costs and shrinking revenue has hit the Students' Administrative Council. A finance brief to be presented to the SAC at next Wednesday's meeting will advocate an increase in the present $3.00 SAC fee.

Increase Inevitable

Finance Commissioner Earl Orser stated that he is convinced that with the present high cost of the SAC services, steadily rising since 1936, such an increase is inevitable. The reasons for the increase advocated include the expansion of SAC services, especially since 1945; the greatly increased costs of SAC publications; and the deficits incurred each year by the council.

The Varsity alone, Orser stated in January, with a budget of over $11,000 would be more than $3,000 in the red by the end of the year. It was suggested at that time that six issues be cut to lower expenses, but the paper would still be far over its budget.

Trouble At McGill Too

The Varsity is not the only student paper to be hit by rising costs though, Orser stated. At McGill, where a student council fee of $6.00 is levied, the students pay an additional $1.50 McGill Daily fee. Even with this amount to work on the McGill Council, which cut 20 issues from the Daily this year, will face a deficit of $11,000. An increase of $3.25 has been proposed for the McGill Daily next year.

Torontonensis too, has been included in the brief. It is suggested to pay for the yearbook entirely out of SAC funds, with the graduating class possibly paying an additional amount to offset the cost. The brief also suggests that the Students' Handbook be given free to the students and paid for out of Council funds.

Merchants Claim Services Unfair

Miami, Mar. 6—(UPress)—A clash educators have long feared has come about at the U. of Florida, where local merchants have begun court action to find just how far state universities may go in selling commodities and services to the students.

Their bill of complaint cites cafeterias, book stores, sandwich shops, soda fountains and recreational facilities.

Students have set up picket lines around the eight stores which filed the suit, but no attempt has been made to stop any student from entering the places of business.

The Alligator, U. of Florida newspaper, commented editorially that the business men of the "Gold Coast" have made the move in order to determine if it would be profitable to expand their enterprises.

Issues To Come

Remaining issues of The Varsity this year are as follows:

1. Wednesday, March 8 (4 pages).

2. Friday, March 10 (16 pages —a roundup of the year in the final regular issue), and

3. Friday, March 17 (4 pages, special issue devoted to various election results).

Music Symposium

Presents Student Compositions

By HERB WOOD

One of the forces most active today in the encouragement of creative music among undergrads is the International Federation of Music students.

This is a student-organized group made up of six universities: The Curtis Institute of Music, Philadelphia; Eastman School of Music, Rochester; Juilliard School of Music, New York City; New England Conservatory of Music, Boston; Yale School of Music, New Haven; and the Royal Conservatory, Toronto.

Toronto's Turn

Every year since it inception, four years ago, a symposium has been held at one of the universities; this year it will be held at the Royal Conservatory, March 8-11. Each of the participating schools will present a concert of new chamber music composed and performed by their students. Symposium concerts are followed by brief, and often very lively open discussions of the works heard.

Two of last year's winners from the Royal Conservatory are now on scholarships in Paris.

Those representing the Conservatory at this year's symposium are: Harry Freedman, Phillip Nimmons, John Beckwith, Paul McIntyre and Andrew Twa.

Concert Thursday

In addition to the chamber music, there will be a concert by the Royal Conservatory Symphony consisting of representative orchestral work from each school, held in Convocation Hall next Thursday, March 9th. Principal Ettore Mazzoleni will be conducting. These concerts are open to all students.

There will be a panel discussion with representatives from three different publishing houses on the topic, Problems in Publishing Contemporary Music, at 2 p.m., Saturday, March 11. The chairman will be Sir Ernest Macmillan.

A committee under the dual chairmanship of Nipper Benson and Harry Freedman is looking after the billeting of approximately two hundred representatives from the six member schools. A final banquet will be given in Hart House on the last day of the symposium, Saturday, March 11.

News From Britain

According to a sketchy report received last week, the British National Union of Students has indicated its intention of "temporarily" suspending its membership in the International Union of Students.

Reason given for this sudden move was:

The recent ejection of the People's Youth of Yugoslavia from the IUS on charges of "Titoism." This ejection, according to the sketchy reports received here, was based "on the policy of other European countries towards Yugoslavia rather than on any factual evidence."

To the Toronto NFCUS group, which has been given the go-ahead signal on NFCUS affiliation with IUS by the student body, what does this news from Britain mean?

There are only four Western nations left in IUS. Of these the British NUS is the strongest. (The NUS has only "temporarily" suspended membership, it must be remembered.)

If the NUS leaves the IUS completely, the leadership of the Western group will greatly suffer. But this should not dissuade the National Federation of Canadian University Students from affiliation in the Communist-dominated IUS. The purpose of affiliation is to keep the western voice strong. From many reports, it does not seem impossible that many students behind the "Iron Curtain" can be shown our side of the story, despite the overwhelming handicaps.

The question of affiliation is to be discussed at the national NFCUS conference held this fall. The British move is not a final one, and even if it were, the question is: Are we going to affiliate with IUS to get a western word edgewise?

In this move, we have nothing to lose and everything to gain.

Letting It Out Of The Bag

The common man has been led and harried by politicians, robber barons, wives, mothers, sisters, and dictatorships of the proletariat from the beginning of time. He has been shoved and pushed and cajoled and lied to and he has not resisted. He has not resisted simply because his leaders and liars have convinced him that resistance is futile, and the common man has been easy to convince.

But every once in a while, there arises a common man who has not been convinced, whose philosophy has invariably consisted in the attitude that "there's no harm in trying." Such a man has arisen, in the United States of America.

For years past, ever since the miracle of television was perfected, the greatest minds in the United States have endeavored to perfect a technique whereby television could be transmitted and received in color. These great minds had decreed that such a technique would take years of time and millions of dollars to perfect, and these great minds were believed.

One man did not believe. One man decided to see for himself. One man bought some colored cellophane for twenty cents, and mounted it on a wheel costing sixteen cents and spun the wheel in front of his television receiver. His television images are now colored. He could have made millions. He would have, but for one thing. He told his wife and sister. They, of course, were overjoyed; except, of course, for one thing. They were not sure just how fast to spin the wheel, and they asked the great minds to tell them, thus letting the cat out of the bag.

There is only one way for the unconvinced common man to survive. He must, at all costs, keep his politician and wives, and dictators, and mothers, and robber barons, and sisters completely in the dark. But above all he must be skeptical.

Our Readers Write

Ban Criticised

Editor, The Varsity:

Underlying the banning of Sartre's play "No Exit" are two patently vulgar and irrational motives: (1) those responsible for the banning were motivated by distorted, trivial and amoral scruples; (2) those responsible were concerned to continue in the good graces of the local populace. The former is so manifestly characteristic of our quasi-puritanistic and highly hypocritical mores that it requires no comment here. However, the influence that we permit the local population to have over the intellectual life of this university is viciously inconsistent with the purpose and function of this institution.

We conceive of a university as a place where all significant ideas are explained, criticized, and modified with as little bias as is psychologically possible. However, this institution is neither self-supporting nor self-contained, and its 'employees are well aware that a great deal of difficulty and embarrassment may be avoided by the means of a certain degree of hypocrisy. In emphasizing the above as the cause of the banning of "No Exit" we are in fact choosing the more gentle accusation, since it would be preposterous to suppose that the play was really objected to on considered moral grounds. Surely no members of the university believe that students must be protected against ideas; or are unaware that banning a play is the most efficient method (par excellence) of stimulating an unhealthy interest in it. What is more likely is that a compromise has been made between intellectual and the stereotyped hypocrisies of our society's 'great middle class'.

We speak much of intellectual freedom. But do we realize that it is bought with a price—it may be social isolation, it may be financial difficulty. We should certainly cultivate the courage necessary for maintaining that freedom, for in this age we cannot afford to forfeit it.

Let no reader conclude that the writers are unaware of the practical exigencies of the university administration. Nevertheless, the University cannot resolve its problems by acquiesing to the anachronistic prejudices of its supporters. Surely such an institution's status in the world community is not so precarious that it must submit to principles which are both pedagogically and philosophically un-Indeed, our intellectual leaders have often expressed the view that the university ought to play the dominant role in the perpetuation and development of our moral ideas.

Need Name

Editor, The Varsity:

It's about time, well doggone near time that someone did something about it. About what? About the lack of name for the poor little nameless street which is described as — heading north from College Street between the Wallberg and Mining, Old Chemistry and New Mechanical buildings between the MacLennan Lab, and the Engineering Building, heading south between the Medical and Electrical buildings, Hygiene and Mining buildings to College Street.

Complicated isn't it? That is what we find every time we try to describe this short stretch of abused pavement.

We suggest that Mr. LePan's office, in co-operation with the city of Toronto Roads Department erect a set of name plates. What is on them couldn't matter just so long as it gets a name. For a suggestion why not "Campus Crescent, East and West"?

We would appreciate it if this suggestion were directed to those in a position to ease the task of one trying to describe this street.

Absurd Act

Editor, The Varsity:

There are not suitable words to describe the absurdity of such an act as the banning of Sartre's "No Exit" for this play is a brilliant psychological study. Far from being "immoral", it is highly moral, capably directed and excellently cast. The play contains characters about whom men and women of University level should know more, since such characters have to live within a hostile hypocritical society such as our own.

The students in "No Exit" have devoted time and energy to a play that has a vital message, only to be stigmatized by people who obviously have not read the play, or else misinterpreted it. I understand that Principal Taylor is responsible for the latest interdict, and can only assume that he is one of those who have not read the play, for it is impossible to conceive that a man of his intelligence would prohibit the presentation of such a harmless and inoffensive play, were he familiar with its contents.

This is a play which should not run for a single night as was the intention, but one that should have a two week run so that every student on the campus might have the opportunity of witnessing it; a play that every student should feel it their responsibility to see.

Would Hobble Glenesk

Editor, The Varsity:

Herewith a second plea for the control of William Glenesk! Please, Mr. Glenesk, why do you adopt such a patronising attitude in your reviews?

Naturally you have a perfect right to give your opinions, but I suggest that the manner in which you express them indicates a presumption of authority which students do not altogether endorse.

I refer to the closing sentence in your review of Othello: "But apart from these few discepencies, his production of Othello went rather well."

By all means let us have a criticism—every moron is entitled to free speech—but let it be restrained by a modicum of politeness, and, since it is the opinion not of a panel of experienced men but rather of an individual undergraduate, please let it be delivered in a less condescending manner.

Noted Architect Marcel Breuer Museum Speaker

Marcel Breuer, a man who has left his architectural mark across Europe and America, will speak tomorrow under the auspices of the Architectural Society in the Museum Theatre at 8 p.m..

In 1902 Breuer was born in the Hungarian intellectual centre, Pecs.

Although offered a scholarship to study at the Art Academy of Vienna, he turned it down and headed for Weimar, Germany, the site where leading European architect Walter Gropius taught. Experimenting in many fields, he invented the widely known tubular steel furniture, and was asked to join the teaching staff.

He was 22 years of age.

After he opened his own office in Berlin in 1926 he developed a home design that seemed to make them hover on "stilts", giving both airiness and spaciousness.

In 1932 he left Germany, wandered through Europe and erected many new buildings, exposition pavilions and homes.

Then, in 1937, his old teacher, Walter Gropius, newly appointed head of the Graduate School of Architecture at Harvard, invited him to the United States as his partner. Their mutual aim was to translate their architectural vocabuary into one that would reflect their own environment, America.

"Today the works of Marcel Breuer throughout the world stand as striking examples of the new spirit of architecture, with which we in Canada have not yet been infused, but which is only just now beginning to show signs of birth," Irving Crossman, V Architecture, commented yesterday. "I am sure that his lecture tomorrow will be an encouraging stimulus to Canadian artists and designers, who are indeed fortunate in having before them such wide unexplored fields for expression."

Admission to the lecture in Museum Theatre tomorrow will be $1.00 per person.

Sixty Percent Vote At Vic In Elections

Sixty per cent of the students at Vic went to the polls last Friday to elect their representatives on the Victoria College Union. Out of twenty-two positions, there were only three uncontested.

Third year student Don Lawson was elected to the Presidency of the union.

Associate President will be Jess Nugent, III Honor.

Bill Farlinger gained the position of Treasurer by acclamation. He is in his third year.

Vice-President after his victory in a three-cornered race is John Devereux, II Pass.

Lois Sutherland, III Honor, was elected SAC representative for women, while Glenn Ross, also of third year, was voted in for the men.

R. V. Howson, III Honor, was acclaimed as Social Director.

Social Directress for the year will be Lu Hammond, a third year honors student.

Grame Ferguson was elected Publicity Director.

Pat Ewing of second year will take the position of V.C.U. Secretary.

George Slater will lead the Debating Parliament. He is in third year honor.

John Finlay gained the presidency of the Dramatic Club without opposition. He is in third year.

Associate President will be Jean Scroggie, III Honor.

For the Social Directorate, Roy Little (III Honor) was elected Assistant Director. Lois White (II Honor) will be Associate Directress.

Men's NFCUS representative will be Dick Gage of second year.

The women will be represented on the NFCUS committee by Cathy Turnbull of second year.

Women's Athletic Directress is Tove Jensen, III Honor.

Below-Zero Caledon Farm Has Exercise Sweetbriar

By DOREEN STEPHENSON

Five members of the Exploration Society carried out their own Exercise Sweetbriar at the Hart House Caledon Hills Farm one weekend ago. In order to test the endurance of the men, they were to sleep outside in sleeping bags on a night calculated to be five degrees below zero on a broken thermometer. The scientific guinea pigs were Allan McDermott, Lloyd Mills, Ernie Saunders and Warden Ignatieff of Hart House.

The guinea pigs drove within a mile and a half of the farm house, then battled through an unplowed section of snowed-in highway dragging two pair of skis, a 20-lb. box of groceries and a sleigh. Upon arrival, the men collapsed upon chairs and sofas and felt tempted to give the Sweetbriar idea up for the present to spend a weekend of pleasure—within the warm, cosy farm house. But little voices within said "No" and so the men set out to dig their way through snow drifts and to construct a rather hasty lean-to to sleep under. The impracticability of the material used —snow—made the men a little wary but faith upheld them. So they stripped down . . . struggled into the close confines of their sleeping bags.

Shivers, bird calls, chills and frost all made for a rather unpleasant night. One caustic member of the expedition told an eerie tale of a similar group of adventurers who froze to death. Morning came —rather, dawn came—and all rose to climb into clothes and boots frozen and coated with icicles. A fire was attempted with wet wood and broken matches. No go. Taking the easy way out, they retired to the farm house for an indoor meal.

Chief chef, Alan McDermott, created a meal which proved ade-

Want New Talent In Coming Year Robert Gill Says

Bob Gill, Director of Hart House theatre is now holding auditions for next year's productions. "I'm always looking for new talent", he said in an interview, "and people shouldn't be afraid to try out. As a matter of fact, three major roles were cast this season just by chance: I happened to walk into a rehearsal of one-act plays at one of the colleges. These very people were afraid to come out and audition."

The productions next year will be Eugene O'Neill's "the Marco Millions"; Robinson Jeffer's "Medea"; Shaw's "Captain Brass Bound's Conversion"; and a Shakespearean play, perhaps a comedy.

"The Marco Millions" is a satirical comedy which present Marco Polo as a sort of American travelling salesman. It has many scenes and a big cast. "Medea" is a new version of the Greek tragedy. This is the play which Judith Anderson starred in for a year on Broadway. Shaw's play is a witty comedy about a managing woman who manipulates the men about her.

The 'phone number for auditions is MI. 9873.

NFCUS Committee Report On Books Due Wednesday

Advance information on the local NFCUS committee's text book costs report to be released this Wednesday indicate it will cover virtually every aspect of the personal student problem. Committee Chairman Tom Symons said last night the report will be aimed at three levels: government, publisher, retailer and university.

"This report is based on a great deal of investigation and work by an able group of Toronto students," Symons commented. "I believe the recommendations resulting from their work are based on solid facts, and hope these recommendations if adopted by the national conference of NFCUS will receive serious consideration by government, publishers, retailers and the universities."

The report will be among many presented next September to the national NFCUS conference, and was assigned to Toronto at the last conference, held in September, 1949, in Ottawa.

Seven members of the Toronto committee prepared the report under the joint chairmanship of George Morrison, II Meds, and Tanis Kell, III Vic.

The group contacted 23 Canadian universities, 17 United States colleges' book stores and five Canadian publishing houses, in order to find information. They also co-operated with the National Council of Canadian Universities, which has already made a study of Canadian text prices.

The report's recommendations will deal with changes in sales tax, customs duties on texts and discrimination against English language texts. Like NCCU investigators they have found custom duties on texts often seem to have no logical principle behind them.

Suggestions to publishers will deal with mark-ups on American texts sold in Canada. Investigation has shown strangely high prices in Canada compared to those in the U.S. are sometimes explainable but often evidence was found that indicated an extra large profit is being made by certain dealers.

To the universities the student investigators will suggest book co-operatives, used text book exchanges and an extension of "adopted text lists" which are duty-free. These are lists of texts shown in calendars of universities as adopted for specific courses.

Princeton Students Call Communist Texts Illegal

Princeton, March 6 — (CUP) — Four Princeton students have charged a local book store with violation of the Smith Act of 1940.

The Act deals with the sale of books with a criminal or subversive intent.

Lawyers and State officials in New Jersey hesitated.

The books in question were the works of Marx, Lenin and Engels.

Inst'l Management To Have Journal For First Time

Institutional Management students are going to try their hands at publishing a magazine this year, for the first time.

The students' place in the hotel industry and its allied service fields are among the subjects of the articles of a more serious nature to be contained in the newly established Institutional Management Yearbook. A summary of the graduates' activities and positions will be included as well as editorials and other articles about the proposed I. M. building, and trends in the industry.

The magazine is aimed not only at the students and graduates of I. M. but also the people engaged in the hotel industry and allied fields as a whole. It will be distributed to these people in the industry in order to acquaint them further with the ability of the students and graduates of the course.

The staff of the magazine which will be distributed about the middle of March, includes: Ian MacKay, Editor In Chief; Bruce Johnston, Associate Editor; Pete Tobias, Business Manager; Bud Baldwin, Advertising Manager; Pat Millar, Publicity and Sales Manager.

Junior Philosophy Club Final Meet Wednesday Features "Open Clinic"

The closing meeting of the Junior Philosophy Club will be held Wednesday night at 7.45 p.m. in Croft Chapter House, and will run on a very different basis from any previous meetings. The publicity refers to it as an "Open Clinic for the Diagnosis and Treatment of all Philosophical Ailments," and a parade of philosophic peeves is expected.

Students will be urged to present any problems they have, and it will be dealt with by the group as a whole, with Professors McRae, Goudge, and McCurdy leading the discussion.

Paris Reports

Extra Curricular Activities Lacking

Paris —(Special)— A Canadian finds that extra-curricular activities are as few at the University of Paris as they were plentiful on his home campus. There are no team sports, no equivalent of All-Varsity or faculty revues, no Feather Fairs — not even a campus. As substitutes, the French student has his work and Saturday night dances. Almost every Saturday, from one to three faculties, schools or residences hold a "grand bal de nuit," beginning about ten o'clock and going on until dawn. It is not merely that the French love to dance — which they do — but there is no means of transportation until six o'clock, when the subway re-opens for the day. Most Canadians are amazed at the energy and stamina of the French. Their dances are, for the most part, fast waltzes and polkas and the dancers stop only rarely for a glass of champagne, the local counterpart of punch.

Some small, university-affiliated clubs do exist, but not in numbers comparable to those at Varsity. The U. of T. Film Society has a counterpart here in the Cine Club Universitaire, while another club, the Cine Club du Quartier Latin, is largely composed of students. Moving pictures are treated seriously here; the university conducts day and evening courses in the technique and history of cinematography. In France as in North America, foreign pictures are generally considered to be artistically superior to the domestic product. The results, from the English-speaking student's point of view, are decidedly happy. Many Hollywood masterpieces, neglected at home because they are products of Hollywood, are shown here to enthusiastic audiences who frequently understand little of the dialogue. This group of pictures includes Orson Welles' Citizen Kane, Billy Wilder's Double Indemnity, Alfred Hitchcock's Saboteur, and John Huston's The Maltese Falcon. The students have made almost a cult of the triumvirate of Charlie Chaplin, Robert Flaherty and Orson Welles. The Third Man, the most recent picture to star Orson Welles, is having an enormous and continuing success in Paris.

Canadians find that, all in all, living costs are much the same as in Canada. Unmarried veterans receive almost 19,000 francs monthly from D.V.A., enough for a frugal standard of living. Happily, dating is still possible on such a slim budget, thanks mainly to the admirable and wide-spread French institution of the Dutch treat. Most French girls, in fact, insist on paying their own way as a matter of principle.

Besides, entertainment is far from expensive. Legitimate theatre tickets cost from twenty cents to two dollars, and frequently students are given reduced rates. Other forms of entertainment, except night clubs, are correspondingly low-priced. If you like conversation, you can sit in a cafe and nurse along a glass of wine (cost: seven cents, including top) for as long as you please. The proprietor, who often doubles as his own waiter, seems glad to have you stay, and will say a cheery "bon soir" whenever you choose to leave.

In the cafes and in the lecture halls, in the theatres and in the museums, in the markets and in the homes, mature Canadian students are acquainting themselves, first-hand, with France, the racial and cultural mother of one of Canada's two great streams of population. All of them will return home better prepared to make their own contribution to Canadian life.

ART ∞ MUSIC ∞ DRAMA

Wymilwood

Sunday evening's concert of contemporary music at Wymilwood might represent a remarkable panoramic survey of life in general and humanity in particular; embodying the works of four composers, each of whom has courageously spoken his mind and/or heart for what they are worth, the program was very neatly divided into the four aspects of the eternal cycle — classicism, romanticism, perfectionism, and chaos, or, from the other side of the fence, innocence, passion, serenity, and death.

The works of Frederick Clarke displayed the diligent effort of the student; it is doubtful if there was very much of Frederick Clarke in the music. Performance by a more mature pianist might have resulted in a more pleasing show, and that may well be the main reason for the greater approbation accorded the Adagio and Scherzo for flute with the composer at the piano again. The influence of the flautist, Keith Girard, tended to make the performance more sincerely artistic.

Paul McIntyre is our neo-romantic; though well versed in the modern idioms, and quite possibly possessed of perfectionist dreams, Mr. McIntyre's composition and performance alike do largely express certain sweet passions which are as old as the hills.

The five songs of the Tang Dynasty by John Beckwith were beyond doubt the climax of the program. This type of music might well be called the science of graphic acoustics, constructed along sound engineering standards by a balanced integrity of head, heart, and hand.

Phillip Nimmons in his piano sonata is of that noble breed which adores but refuses to believe. Here particularly in the first movement, we find the furious straining of opposing worlds brought into close proximity; passages of fatal serenity are brutally interrupted by wild cacophonous materializations of the very sound itself.

Perhaps it would be a good idea for artists to get out of their glass houses — they have been throwing quite a few stones. There is some music sung by people who always sing out of tune, and played by bands that always play too loud, but this music has a few good ideas like giving a little and taking a little, and lately someone has been shouting at the top of his lungs that there's gonna be a great day — that's good music.

Hart House Glee Club

Short, dapper, respectable Charles Peaker, eminent city organist (St. Paul's) and lecturer (Royal Conservatory), led the Hart House Glee Club Sunday night through a rousing program of ballads and folk songs that spoke well for both Glee Club and conductor's skill.

First came the rollicking Lincolnshire Poacher, The Arethusa, and Sir Eglamore. The chorus stepped from gay to sombre mood, gave each song its due in strong, projected tones and a keen sense of interpretation. Soloists in the group were George Roberts and Allan Kerr.

In Shaw's Hay Robin the choir subdued harmony to rhythm; voice-blending seemed uneven, but in The Blue and White, arranged and conducted by Ward McAdam, the chorus sang as one, injecting dash and spirit into the University song.

Guest soloist was young pianist Marie Peaker, who played two sonatas of Scarlatti (D Major and E Minor), and the Valse Brillante in A Flat of Chopin. If the Scarlatti lacked clarity and tempo, it made up the difference in phrasing and melodic line. Miss Peaker's light, delicate touch, unsuited to the Chopin, presented the Gluck-Brahms Gavotte in the restraint true to the classic dance.

Highlight of the concert were three Schubert songs: He Whose Flag, The Gravediggers' Song, Drinking Song in Winter, and the concluding Alto Rhapsody of Brahms. In these the Hart House Glee Club achieved a performance of real worth. Dr. Peaker apparently demands complete subjection of all voices to the impact of the whole. In rendering the Alto Rhapsody with Evaleen Dunlop as soloist the all-male chorus met the conductor's demand in all respects. Douglas Bodle was accompanist.

quate if not appetizing. Bacon with black streaks was featured with mountains of leaky eggs and potent portions of tea. The chef decided that the directions on the tea bag box, which called for one tea bag for a large tea pot, underestimated the size of their vessel of brew and quadrupled the order. That was tea.

Fortified with these rations, or, in spite of them, the men set out for home. According to official reports none of them have suffered from indigestion or pneumonia.

Exercise Caledon-briar: success?

Teachers' Choir

Yesterday the Toronto Board of Education celebrated its centennial year at Convocation Hall. Chaired by the mayor, the assembly was addressed by Lieutenant-Governor Lawson and Dr. J. G. Althouse.

Guest artists on the program were the Toronto Men Teachers' Choir, directed by Eldon Brethour, Alec Turner at the piano. Born some ten years ago, when a group of teachers decided to sing, the Men Teachers' Choir now has seventy members and both conductor and accompanist have been with the choir since it began.

Tertius Nobles' Fierce Was The Wild Billow, their opening song, was marked by a tremendous evenness in tone quality with a wide range of expression. With a huge hall at their disposal conductor Brethour and choir brought out in rhythm and tone the storm on the Sea of Galilee. Clarity of diction here was subverted somewhat for drive and spirit of delivery. The Battle Hymn of the Republic saw the choir step into the stirring marching song (John Brown's Body) where the emphasis lay not on facility of harmony, but in projecting a message in emotive notes. Soloist was Russell Cole.

Concluding works were a Russian folksong, Russian Picnic, a galloping chant, and Now Thank We All Our God. Although rendering the Picnic with lilt and snap, Eldon Brethour and his men were at their best in the Te Deum hymn of praise, where they achieved a simple dignity combined with grandeur in the crescendo, enhanced by the dexterous accompaniment of Mr. Turner in the contrapuntal Gloria Patri.

If the calibre of the choir's performance bears any relation to its members' teaching of song, one may expect an equally keen sense of music and musicianship from the students in Toronto schools.

Facts of Love

English comedy if well done is quite delightful, and Sidney Box evidently intended Facts of Love (coming soon to the International Cinema) to be another Quartet. Unfortunately a rudimentary type of formula is beginning to appear in what hitherto has been a fresh and highly diverting form of cinematic entertainment. For the most part Facts of Love is completely charming; there are, however, two things which impress one as being the thin edge of the wedge of Hollywoodian box office slavery.

The tried and true humour of an Englishman's caricature of the foibles of his countrymen is all very well, just as long as he doesn't make too much of a good thing. It is one thing to gently poke fun, but it is quite another to trade on the gullibility of dollar audiences. The line "I would think England the best country in the world even if I were a Dutchman" is rather reminiscent of Gilbert and Sullivan. The colonial joke about English being intelligible to foreigners if only it is spoken loudly enough is also of ancient vintage. No doubt this sort of humour has its box office appeal, but it is disappointing after Quartet and Saints and Sinners which showed that a comedy can also be a work of art.

The second thing about the picture which smacked of cliche was the situation where a clean living young English boy is subjected to the wiles of a wealthy, sophisticated woman of the world who also happens to be married. After some pretty close shaves virtue triumphs purely by accident, and the young man is returned to his former girlfriend, intact. The boy was played with imagination and understanding by Jimmy Hanley who brought to the characterization all the shy awkwardness to things unknown and callous assurance of things known that typify late adolescence.

These criticisms merely decry what may be the beginning of a trend. It would be sad indeed if all producers decided that good pictures don't pay enough and decided to pander to the somewhat doubtful movie tastes of those people south of the border. After my panic subsided I sat back and thoroughly enjoyed The Facts of Love. The cleverly contrived situations and slyly farcical insularity keep one in a state of amused relaxation. No one gets hit in the face with a figurative custard pie and then waits for the laughter to subside before wiping it off. As a matter of fact if one is going to laugh at all, one must laugh fast in order not to miss what comes next.

A M & D

Editor, The Varsity:

On Tuesday, Jan. 31, at the weekly meeting of the executive of the Emmanuel College Students' Society, the following motion was passed: "That the secretary write to the Editor of The Varsity a letter expressing the opinion of the executive of the ECSS on "chatty, down-to-earth art, music and drama reviews, and also urging that the former standards of the Art, Music and Drama page be maintained."

The members of the group realize that the breezy style of reporting has real value in many areas, but they feel that articles appearing on the Art, Music and Drama page should show signs of literary skill and appeal to the intelligence of the reader.

S. Kathleen Christopher,
Secretary, Emmanuel
College Students' Society.

Looking Backwards

Mid-Century Highlights

Elections have always provided exciting copy for The Varsity. Through color stories, excerpts from campaign speeches, paid advertisements and election features, the atmosphere of the contests has been captured for all time in the pages of The Varsity.

In the days of Old King's College a simple show of hands determined the outcome of elections. However this system was outmoded by the advent of three-handed students and was replaced by secret ballot, and locked ballot boxes. It is claimed that this method might also be discarded because some students have become adept at the art of stuffing.

The files of The Varsity reveal that the week preceding the elections has always been set aside as the unofficial "Kill Them With Kindness Week." The signs of the time are reflected year after year. Vic coed candidates doff their mantle of gentility and in the heat of the campaigns have been known to address Vic men without a previous formal introduction. That rare avis, the check-grabber, a somewhat elusive bird appears on the campus about the same time of the year as the elections. Gone are the days of sitting four hours at Mac's in an attempt to out-shuffle your coffee companions. The spirit creeps into the staid Varsity News office. Ambitious associate editors are seen gently fondling the heads of young copy boys.

Another phase of the pre-election "Kill Them With Kindness Week" is the obliging attitude of car-owning students who are seeking office. Pedestrian scholars accustomed to mud in their eyes find themselves relaxing amid upholstered vehicular interiors. It must be rather disconcerting for the pampered students to return to their original mode of transportation immediately following election results. Never has the milk of human kindness flown so freely or curdled so fast.

In a paid advertisement of a late February Edition of The Varsity of 1922 "Kissing Hot Lips" Hooligan explained his recent defeat to the student body. He had canvassed Whitney Hall and was half way through French House when his campaign was brought to an abrupt conclusion through his contraction of Trench Mouth. This misfortune not only cost him the election but also a new set of dentures.

An interesting sidelight of the heated S.A.C. Elections of 1941 was provided by The Varsity's feature news story on Candidate David Judas who was aspiring to the presidency of the student body. David claimed he had special qualifications for the position inasmuch as he had many years experience as a shepherd of his father's sheep ranch in Alberta. Said candidate David, "When it comes to leading sheep, I'll make a perfect S.A.C. president. I am also proficient at pulling wool over your eyes, wool gathering, sheep-dipping and shearing the flock in general."

David Judas was opposed by Happy Herman Horowicz, an American Exchange student, whose platform slogan, "two chickens for every pot" was painted on the windows of University College. As usually the student body ended up without a pot or a window.

Book Review

Orpheus

Judging by John Lehmann's Orpheus 2 (Longmans, Green & Co. $3.00), a "symposium of the arts", contemporary British literature, both creative and critical, is in a healthy state. The material of this anthology is neatly divided into sections such as creative writing, critical essays, poets on their images, the theatre, art, and autobiography. If there is a fault in the choice of this type of arrangement, it is one of omission rather than commission. Surely the time has come to recognize the film as an art form and to include articles on the film in anthologies devoted to the arts.

The creative writing section, containing both prose and poetry, is distinguished by a short story of William Sansom, possibly the best short story writer in England today. Sansom's mastery of mood and descriptive detail, rather than ingenuity of plot, characterizes his stories. Three of England's most capable younger poets—Laurie Lee, George Barker, and Terence Tiller are represented in this section also. The distinct differences to be noted between poetry written today and that of the "Auden" school of the thirties is really remarkable. Just as the poets of the thirties learned from Eliot but refused to be over-shadowed by him, poets today maintain a creative independence in spite of their debt to their older contemporaries.

A splendid essay by Donat O'Donnell on the late George Bernanos—the most disturbing of contemporary French writers, Sartre notwithstanding — makes up the bulk of the critical section. There is also an interesting conjectural article on "The European Spirit of Literature" by Rex Warner, whom readers may possibly be acquainted with through his fine novel, The Aerodrome.

The articles by poets on their own images are very provocative, except for Edith Sitwell's exegesis of her own poetry, which is merely provoking. Louis MacNeice's discussion is stimulating and suggestive; no one could ever write on his poetry without consulting it. George Barker's article has an apocalyptic quality that is both startling and awe-inspiring.

The sections devoted to the theatre and to painting are well supplemented by illustrations. All in all, this anthology of British avante-garde writers is of high calibre. One is struck by the lack of fanatical partisanship among literary cliques in Britain as compared with their counterparts in the United States. Possibly the healthiness of contemporary British writing, as revealed in this volume, is responsible.

Books Received

Take Care of My Little Girl by Peggy Goodin (Smithers & Bonnellie—$3.00). A superficial and obvious satire on sororities in a Midwestern university characterized by a contrived wit and a predictable denouement.

The Pink House by Nelia Gardner White (Macmillans—$3.75). An escapist novel aimed at fulfilling the nostalgic dreams of popular taste, banal in ideas and trite in conclusion.

Fees Raise

from 1936 to 1948, the last year for which figures are available. The U of T Symphony and the All Varsity Choir for instance, has increased its expenses from $48 in 1936 to $1,200 in 1948, a 25-fold increase. The NFCUS fee too is proposed to be increased next year from the present six cents per student to 25 cents.

The brief also considers the Housing and Employment Services, which were not even in existence in 1936, and cost the Council almost $4,000 in 1948.

Warned in 1947

The reason for the present financial plight of the Council as stated by Orser, was the steadily increasing costs of services and the decrease in enrolment. According to the brief, the Council had been warned as early as 1947 by its auditors that unless it could find some additional source of revenue, or reduce expenses, the practice at that time of giving graduating students a fre copy of Torontonensis would result in substantial deficits. The increasing printing costs, the 1947 report stated, would make the alternative of reducing expenses less possible.

The problem of grants to various organizations and activities such as the Radio Workshop, the Carabin Weekend, ISS, etc., has also been included in the budget and a sum set aside in it to cover these expenses. These organizations have been voted money by the councils in the past as they required it, and the present set-up may put some of them on a permanent basis.

CARABINS BEAT BLUES

By MAL CRAWFORD

The University of Montreal has won the Queen's Cup for the second year running. Their 7-3 win over Varsity Friday night, followed by a 17-7 landslide over Queen's Saturday, put the Blues definitely out of the running. There are still two games to play, neither of them involving the Blues.

Best Form

The fast-skating Carabins showed their best form this year in their match with Varsity Friday. The Blues lacked nothing in the way of fight; in fact, in the first two periods, they seemed to be at too high a pitch. Standouts were Andre Charest, who scored twice and leads the league in goals; Raymond Flynn, who leads in points; and Roger Pinard. Pinard was top man in points for the night with a goal and two assists.

Biggest stumbling-block for the Blues was Montreal's penalty-killing combination of Flynn and Charest, with Laperriere and Gariepy on the Blue line. Though the Frenchmen incurred seven penalties to only three by the Blues, Carabins' Leon Bouchard got that many himself — the Blues could score only once with their man advantage. The goal that Varsity did score with a man advantage, by Bill Walters, went in off Flynn's stick. A bit of a fluke, but Bucky's play wasn't; in the last couple of games he has been among the Blues' most effective men.

Improve In Third

Varsity sharpened up considerably in the third period. Walters' goal was followed 40 seconds later by a fine counter by Digby, from Howson and Vernon. This line was Varsity's most effective combo, and has been ever since Turkey's wingmates got scrambled two weeks ago.

Other notably hard drivers were Rich Howson, Wilf (the Woodchopper) Digby, and Artie Bell. Bell and Laperriere collided against the boards in the second, and Laperriere had to go off for five stitches. So did Art, but he wouldn't go off for repairs till the end of the period.

Almost anything short of manslaughter was tolerated most of the time by the refs. Joe Kane and Leon Bouchard tussled in the centre of the ice in the most thrilling bout on the card in the third period, but no penalties were donated. But Joe showed his gentlemanliness as

By BOB DNIEPER

Since this is about the last column that this newspaper can stand, we might as well get a yearful of beefs off our hands, so if you dear readers want to see what is wrong with our campus, written in a sprightly style, bear with us for fifty lines.

Grade "A" beef: We are usually on the side of the Athletic Department, but there is one little matter we don't see eye to eye on . . . namely, the hardwood floor for Varsity Arena. The two reasons Warren Stevens gives for not starting the work immediately is that (1) with the stadium going up they haven't enough money and (2) although basketball is the coming game, it hasn't reached that stage of development where Varsity could have a senior team that could pack in four and a half thousand people. Mr. Stevens claims they have to get a winning team before putting in a floor to assure that the floor will be paid for.

This all reminds us of the couple who didn't get married till they were seventy years old because they couldn't afford marriage. How can you build up a following for senior b-ball if there's nowhere for the spectators to sit? How can you get money coming in if there's nowhere for it to come in from? The football stadium of course is a big money maker, but it's about time the arena became a moneymaker too.

Total cost of a cement floor of the highest grade with a removable hardwood floor also of the best quality would cost about $50,000, and it is our considered opinion that it would benefit the university, the students, the players, and the game, if the AA borrowed that money and fixed up the floor . . . and TOOT SWEET!

Grade "B" beefs: Where does Hart House get off charging 45c for a meal at lunchtime and up to 60c for the evening meal? If independent restaurants can charge these prices and less, and still make money, either Hart House is making a pile on the meals or the management isn't what it should be. They haven't the labor costs or the building costs (rent, taxes) that independents have, yet their prices don't compete very favorably with outside beaneries.

And this idea of getting a professional director for the All-Varsity Revue has to be nipped before it goes any farther. It may lead to other things . . . . the editor of The Varsity may be replaced by a pro, and we may be replaced by Jim Coleman. Then all this university would need would be some professional scholars to do our essays and studying and we would have a real top-notch school! There's no guarantee that the Council will confine their improvement crusade to the AVR director.

Last, but not least, a system of getting the best players available at Varsity for each sport. Western scouts the whole nation, but Varsity doesn't even scout its own students This is not the fault of the overworked coaches, but sufficient people should be around on the athletic association's payroll to pick out all the potential material at the college. With three assistant coaches instead of the present one, they could also be trained better.

This in some measure would improve Varsity football without resorting to monthly pay checks, and give everybody an even chance.

P.S. The University of Nevada has run into a debt of $45,000 for the boarding of athletes this year. The Boosters Club spent the money, but now can't pay, so the University is stuck with the debt. Hope it happens to Western!

Baldy Through

Cec Turcott has played his last game for the Blues! The old man of the senior Varsity hockeyites graduates this year, and although Cec played hard Friday, the Blues are through for the season. Fans will miss Turc's thrilling rushes and sharp scoring eye next year, but the B.A.Sc. must take its toll!

Better Halves Win Bring Back Bacon For Second Year

By BETTY ASTON

Varsity are once again holders of the Bronze Baby, emblematic of female Intercollegiate Superiority. In a round robin tournament held at McGill over the weekend the all-Varsity women hoopsters tied McGill and defeated Western and Queen's, totalling 88 points, three more than McGill's 85. Western came out third. All four teams were fairly evenly matched with Varsity having a slight edge in the scoring department backed by a solid defence. Alma Hatch, Kay Schenck, and Rosanna Kelly were the top scorers for the Blues with 33, 25, and 18 points respectively.

The all-Varsity team left Thursday night for Montreal, arriving Friday morning in time to rest up for their first game on Friday night. Taking on Western in their first tilt, the Blues came out on the long end of a 38-26 score to chalk up their first win of the tournament.

Alma Hatch, PHE, was the top scorer with 15 points, closely followed by Rosanna Kelly, St. Mike's, who potted 14. As in all three games the Varsity defence was a big factor in the Blues win.

Also on Friday night McGill downed Queen's 34-20 which gave them a tie for first place with Varsity.

Saturday afternoon saw them facing McGill in what proved to be a tough battle, ending in a 20-20 tie. Top scorers were Kay Schenck, St. Mike's, with 9, Denise Crowe, Vic, and Alma Hatch bagging 4 points each.

The game was touch and go all the way as both teams struggled for the extra basket at every opportunity. The tie score at the final whistle left McGill and Varsity still tied for top slot in the tourney, but the next two games proved the deciding factors.

Varsity played Queen's, downing them 30-25, and Western's win over McGill gave the Blues the Bronze Baby. Once again Alma Hatch took the scoring honours, chalking up 14, 3 points more than Kay Schenck who notched 11.

None of the games was a walkaway with every girl fighting all the way. Varsity were the defending champions of the Bronze Baby Trophy and were out to keep it on Toronto territory for another year.

High scorers for the other universities were as follows: McGill; Molly Camp, 13; Western; Jean Shillington, 12; Queen's; Pat Gardiner, 13.

Varsity Line-Up

Rosanna Kelly 18; Eleanor Lever 6; Margaret Doyle 2; Thelma Henderson; Alma Hatch 33; Beverly Morrison; Jane Timmins; Kay Schenck 25; Ann Ookes; Mary Lewis; Denise Crowe 4; Karlyn Hollis.

Trinity Ice-Men Need Win Today To Keep In Race

After battling to a thrilling 7-7 tie last Thursday in the second game of the Jennings Cup intramural hockey play-offs, St. Mike's and Trinity "A" meet again at 12:30 p.m. to-day at the Arena. St. Mike's won the first game 12-4, but Trinity, playing with only five extra players put up a fine fight to earn a tie with the smoother Mikemen in the second game. Most observers at the game Thursday seemed confident that St. Mike's would take the series but were surprised by the great fight the Crumpeteers put up. St. Mike's now have three points and Trinity one; the first team with four points takes the cup.

VARSITY SPORTS

Best of 123 Teams Start Into Playoffs

With hockey pretty nearly over for the 1949-50 season and water-polo drawing to a close the intramural spotlight swings on to the hardwood courts where the major and minor league basketball teams are well into the playoff scrambles. Basketball this year had 123 representatives in the major and minors. Last year PHE firsts won the major league crown when they defeated St. Mike's in a best of three series. So far this year, PHE have not been overly impressive considering the group that they are in; nevertheless they must remain a threat to retain the title due to their experience in working together and to their speed and conditioning. St. Mike's, although they lost two of their top men Ray Ryan and Bill Figel to Assumption College, have a good chance to reach the finals. They finished up third in group one but showed that they are capable of running away with a game once they get hot. Father Dorsay really makes the boys work and they have a fine team spirit that will be hard to beat. Between PHE and St. Mike's, if they meet, we would pick the Mikemen.

Perhaps the top rated team in the majors is senior Skule who finished the season on top of group one. They lost only two games, both to senior UC. They are usually sparked by Casey Latinovitch and long Bob Wilson. The team has height and good individual players but the fact that the hot and cold

on the sideline

Today is the deciding day for the championship in the intramural hockey field. From 9.30 to 11.00 the Vic Firsts will battle it out against the PHE Firsts in the arena in the final inter-faculty game of the year.

The title is won by the team which amasses the most points in two games, but this will be the third game for PHE and Vic. The catch comes in that both the first two games, played on Thursday and Friday of last week, ended in a scoreless tie.

Vic's drives, sparked by Alison Jeffries and Di Rogers are ably stopped by Mary Macpherson, PHE and also all-Varsity goalie. Irma Bullock had led the attack for PHE but the strong defensive tactics of both teams has kept the scoring at the zero mark.

In the first game of the intramural league, Vic defeated PHE 2-1 and the second time they met the Fizz Edders counter-attacked with a 3-2 score. The teams played again in an exhibition tilt at Acton, Ontario, on Feb. 24 and this time PHE took the game 5-3.

Vic started the scoring in the first period on a goal by Jeffries, and were still leading in the second with a 3-2 count, but the Fizz Ed team had a decided edge in the last period. The game was played for the Acton Winter Carnival in an attempt to promote girl's hockey.

If the score is still tied at the final whistle in today's game, an overtime period will be played until one team or the other tallies a point. There is no doubt that the winning team certainly deserves the championship.

Remain Here, Build Canada – Diefenbaker

Students were advised to stay in Canada after they graduate in an address by J. G. Diefenbaker, K.C., M.P. to the Trinity College Literary Institute last night. In the words of one of the students, the theme was "Stay home, young man, stay home!"

Introduced as a parliamentarian, Diefenbaker said that the address did not have to be in the 'stodgy, soporific' manner of many of the Parliamentary addresses.

Egg-Laying Expensive

To prove his point, he went on to relate many of the amuisng incidents of the Federal House. "Just last night a member from Saskatchewan said that it was cheaper for the farmers to buy eggs from the store than to lay them themselves," related Mr. Diefenbaker.

"But the traditions of the Parliament are invaluable, and a right of the people. It is in them that the democratic system had its birth . . . not in the work of one man, like the architect who designed Saint Paul's, or The Louvre, but like a family mansion that has acquired veneration by successive generations, added to and brought up to date by good citizens."

"It is not 'they' who build Canada, but you and I. Unfortunately this responsibility is not realized by some of Canada's people. Last year 25,000 citizens left the country, to go after the promise of better money. Two thousand of these were University graduates. We must keep them here to build the destiny of Canada."

"Helping to Build . . ."

Diefenbaker related the story of the Lord Bishop of London and his visit to the new cathedral at Rouen. He was shown the frescoe and art of the new cathedral, and leaving the impressive building he noticed an old man sorting piles of stone. When he asked him what he was doing, the man answered "Helping to build a great cathedral".

Diefenbaker closed with the suggestion that more students enter public life, saying that the only comparable occupation for service to one's country was the ministry.

Symposium Players

The Royal Conservatory of Music will be represented in the coming Music Symposium by the students pictured above. They are, left to right, (back) Andrew Twa, Philip Nimmons, and Harry Freedman, (front) John Beckwith and Paul McIntyre. The Symposium is to be held in Convocation Hall March 8-11 inclusive. The main feature will be the Royal Conservatory Symphony Concert, Thursday, March 9th at 8 p.m. sharp.

Welcome

I have pleasure in welcoming to the University of Toronto nearly two hundred students from leading music schools of the United States who will join with students from the Royal Conservatory in the fourth annual symposium of the International Federation of Music Students. We are especially pleased that this year we have the opportunity to act as hosts to the symposium.

I am confident that once again the symposium will be a richly rewarding enterprise: that during these four days you will find ideas that illuminate, and inspiration that leads to artistic renewal.

'Reconsider Motion Re Pro Director' Vic Union Asks SAC

Monday night the VCU Assembly expressed almost unanimous disapproval of the SAC motion that a professional director be hired for the All-Varsity Revue.

Suggest New Motion

The discussion arose from the report presented by the Vic SAC representatives, who were instructed to present the following motion from the VCU Assembly at the next SAC meeting; "That in the light of recent student reaction, the Assembly asks the SAC to reconsider its motion in favour of procuring a professional director for the All Varsity Revue, and investigate every possibility before making a final decision."

It was pointed out to the meeting that since McGill had placed its winter Carnival in the hands of a professional, the Carnival has steadily deteriorated, losing the freshness and vitality of an all-student effort and tending to sameness.

Gill Would Help

John Finlay, III Vic conceded that a professional director would definitely raise the quality of the show. It was pointed out, however, that the AVR is a student show and as such shouldn't attempt to attain the professional polish of a Broadway production. "Any advice needed," VCU Assoc. Pres. Phoebe Templeton said, "would be gladly given by Robert Gill and his staff, who would be glad to help and would not interfere in the actual production."

The main purpose of the meeting, the last for the 1949-50 executive, was to evaluate the work done by the various college groups, committees, and the Assembly this year. Suggestions to speed up procedure and improve efficiency next year were also introduced.

Awards Made

The winners of the 15 honor ring awards were announced by the president and the grounds on which the awards were made were outlined.

The question of setting aside a sum of money each year to start an art collection for the college was discussed by the Union but no decision was reached.

Lit Campaigners Support Athletics, More UC Spirit

More effort for college spirit and more money for athletics! These were the commonest platforms used by campaigners for offices in the U.C. Lit. at the election rally in the Junior Common Room yesterday.

Presidential candidate, Ian Smith suported an increased athletic subsidy on a sliding scale.

Jack Robson who is opposing Smith for the presidency promised better college publicity and a tighter budget for all activities.

There are three candidates for SAC rep.—John Christensen, Bob Dnieper and Rocky Martino. Christensen promised that he would consider every motion put before the SAC in the light of what was best for UC. Dnieper was in favor of a student director for the All-Varsity Revue and more encouragement for the Blue and White Society. Rocky Martino stated that he was the only candidate who could bring experience in such fields as The Varsity and the Radio Workshop to the SAC.

Jolliffe To Speak

E. B. Jolliffe, Provincial Leader of the Ontario CCF and member of the Ontario legislature for South York, will speak to the U.C. CCF club in the West Hall of U.C. at 1 p.m. today on "What the British Elections Mean to Us."

Elect New Committees For Hart House Today

Voting today for next year's committee members takes place in the East Common Room and Reading Room from 11:00-2:15, and in the East Common room only from 4:00-6:15.

Positions are to be filled on the five standing committees of House, Music, Art, Library, and Debates. Two members of each of these committees are carried over in next year's standing committee.

Last year at Ajax the engineers co-operated to elect their full slate of candidates. However there is a ruling that only allows three candidates to be elected from any one faculty or college. But the ruling that allows two members to be carried over in next year's committee favours the college that is the most active in electing their candidates.

Unlike the other all-University student endeavours, Hart House takes little account of the University's federal structure. All members may vote for other members

To Extend Date For Seminar Application

Applications for the NFCUS seminar to be held at Fort Lennox on the Richelieu River Island are still being accepted. A statement from the SAC announced the application forms which are available in both. SAC offices are not being turned in quickly and that the deadline had been extended to next Wednesday. There will be fourteen candidates accepted, and both men and women are eligible. The subject: A general view of Canada. The seminar will be laid from August 14 to September 4, and it is suggested that applicants have a "working knowledge" of French.

Issues To Come

Remaining issues of The Varsity this year are as follows:

1. Friday, March 10 (16 pages —a roundup of the year in the final regular issue), and

2. Friday, March 17 (4 pages, special issue devoted to various election results).

Perambulating President

BUT THE HELICOPTER DIDN'T ARRIVE

A helicopter that didn't arrive, a snow slide and a highly successful speech that he didn't give helped make President Smith's recent trip to Western Canada more interesting, if more difficult. Dr. Smith, Toronto's "perambulating president" as the University of Saskatchewan Sheaf termed him, spent three weeks last month visiting Alumni groups in various Western Canadian centres to give them a report on the University.

The helicopter, the snow slide and the speech that didn't get delivered go together, Dr. Smith says. On the way from Calgary to Vancouver the train was held up for thirty-two hours in the Fraser Canyon. Alumni officials in Vancouver, when they learned the train was delayed arranged for a helicopter to take the President in style into the city, but that didn't come off. In spite of his efforts, Dr. Smith remained marooned in the Canyon.

He didn't get to the Alumni meeting in Vancouver but Toronto graduates there went on with their business anyway. Dr. Mackenzie, president of the University of British Columbia, introduced Dr. Smith to the meeting, and then solemnly got up and gave Dr. Smith's speech.

"They tell me Dr. Mackenzie did very well," says Dr. Smith. "He told them that we needed funds—but he also reminded them that the University of British Columbia also needed funds. It was a very fine meeting—which may say something for my non-appearance."

The President's trip was as much to gather information as to give it out. While he stressed the fact that Toronto needs the active support of its alumni, he also pointed out that there is room for Toronto alumni to support their provincial universities. "Toronto can only be strong if other Canadian universities are strong," Dr. Smith believes. "There is no basis for conflicting loyalties. They can and should be complementary."

President Smith

The President brought back many impressions from his western trip. One pleasant surprise was to find that western graduates put their first loyalty to the university as a whole, rather than to their individual schools or faculties. Western graduates are also very interested in having their children come to Toronto.

"The western universities, which are younger than Toronto, have built up a more technical type of training than we have," Dr. Smith says, "because of the role they have played and are playing in the building of the nation. At Toronto we have been able to develop a more liberal education, and it is this which attracts new members to the university."

To make it easier for people to get into Toronto the President says that the whole process of applying to the university is to be streamlined. Toronto will also make a great effort to publicize its opportunities. Already a booklet condensing entrance requirements, giving several outlines of courses and so on has been prepared for distribution in England. Next year's calendar will contain a summary sheet outlining this information to help prospective students find their way through the maze of the calendar.

The President is well pleased with his western jaunt. Large groups were out to meet him every centre he visited. In addition Dr. Smith addressed meetings of students at Royal Roads and at the Universities of British Columbia and Saskatchewan. The Western trip included Winnipeg, Regina, Calgary, Vancouver, Victoria, Edmonton and Saskatoon.

Let's Talk About.....

Let's talk about The Varsity. A lot of other people have been lately. They don't seem to like what we've been doing.

One of the criticisms has been that the news story in the McGill Daily on the settlement of differences between this paper and the SAC gave a poor impression of the Toronto SAC to McGill Students. The blame has been placed on The Varsity.

Through CUP (Canadian University Press) The Varsity exchanges information on important news reports with journals on other campi. These reports are usually filled out or cut down to bring the news into focus for local readers. The McGill Daily news story had been filled out with requested information from The Varsity. There can be no legitimate censure of either The Varsity or the Daily. We read the story when it arrived in our office, and we reread it when it was criticised. The Daily story is correct and says nothing that is contradicted by facts. Critics of this news report must realize that the University of Toronto is not limited to the square mile or so bounded by College, Spadina, Bay and Bloor. The U. of T. extends across Canada and the actions of its students' government are interesting within this area.

We have been criticised also for our stand on the advisability of a professional director for the All-Varsity Revue. The editorial columns of this and every other newspaper are for the expression of opinion. Our opinion about the All-Varsity Revue and its director of "professional calibre" has been outlined before. We stand by that opinion—and by the conviction that a democracy is free only as long as intelligent and alert public opinion acts as a check on the actions of the governing body.

We have heard criticism regarding our treatment of the banning of "No Exit". We have apologised for our error in not presenting the UTDC's side of the story. We apologise again. But nothing we have learned since indicates we were wrong in publishing the story. We cannot accept the suggestion that "it would have been better left unsaid for the sake of the good name of the University," etc., etc. We do not believe in kicking over manure piles to create a stink; but when the pile contains corrupt material, dissipation of the smell often accompanies the removal of the corruption.

ART ∞ MUSIC ∞ DRAMA

The Creation

Old wine flowed from new vessels in last night's performance by the All-Varsity Mixed Chorus and the University of Toronto Symphony Orchestra of Franz Josef Haydn's oratorio The Creation, presented by the Students' Administrative Council in Convocation Hall. And strangely enough the vintage was enhanced a hundredfold.

Conductor Lee Hepner combined reverence and praise in his reading of the oratorio with a freshness of approach to attain a standard of performance that one does not expect from a non-professional ensemble. By no means did he misinterpret the composer or avoid fidelity to the work in order to achieve effect. In the opening lengthy introduction (typical of Haydn) the orchestra presents the chaos which precedes the creation of the heaven and the earth. It was in this introduction that conductor and orchestra set forth the calibre of performance for the night. One does not expect the strings in a student orchestra to speak with flawless intonation and professional precision, nor can one expect a perfect synthesis of percussion, woodwinds, strings and brass. Yet the University Orchestra responded to Lee Hepner's spirited baton so as to achieve the very synthesis I did not expect to find.

Contributors to this integrity were undoubtedly concert mistress Elsie Babiak, first 'cellist William Hossack, and flautist Keith Girard, upon whose musicianship depended much of the orchestra's performing strength. The orchestra overshadowed the chorus only in rare instances (Uriel's Recitative: "And God saw the light, that it was good," and in the Air: "Now vanish before the holy beams"), but tenor Joseph Ward did not project sufficiently and the orchestra filled in. This overemphasis recurred in Uriel's Recitative: "And God created man in His own image," and Air: "In native worth and honour clad." Less emphasis and vitality from the orchestra in accordance with the tenor's singing would have resulted only in detracting from the impact of the oratorio as a whole.

Raphael was sung by basso James Beer. Possessed of a deep sonorous voice, he proclaimed the opening Recitative: "In the beginning God created the heaven and the earth, and the earth was without form and void, and darkness was upon the face of the deep," in clear, ringing tones. And apart from this sterling beginning the soloist was at his best in: "And God said, Let the earth bring forth the living creature after his kind," and in the Air: "Now heaven in fullest glory shone," where his sense of phrase and line brought forth the grandeur of the words.

Joseph Ward's singing of Uriel, although weak in tonality, with a resulting loss in communication, when heard above the orchestra, was skilful and articulate. His best renditions were at the first, with the Recitative: "And God made the firmament," and at the end: "And God saw everything that He had made, and behold! it was very good."

Donna-Gail Richards sang the role of Gabriel. Somewhat indecisive in her opening: "And God said, Let the earth bring forth grass," and Air: "With verdure clad the fields appear," where a slight tremulo marred her work, she gained vocality and certainty in the Second Part with: "And God said, Let the waters bring forth," and the Air: "On mighty pens uplifted soars." Miss Richards' interpretation was marked by a sheer clarity in voice quality, absence of any strain, and a lively delivery of bel canto song.

The chorus achieved a lustre and majesty in its performance of The Creation ("Despairing, cursing rage attends their rapid fall," and "Achieved is the glorious work") But it was in the closing chorus of the First Part: "The heavens are telling the glory of God," that the All-Varsity Mixed Chorus came closest to the truth of which they sang.

ART — MUSIC — DRAMA

No Exit

Jean-Paul Sartre's one - act drama No Exit is a play of little action and many words, demanding a high degree of both perception and finesse in characterization, and an intensity of mood which must be maintained unbroken though more than an hour and a half of playing time. The presentation of the play on Saturday night in the Heliconian Hall leaves little to be demanded in these respects. John Howe directed the production and took the minor part of the valet. The three remaining members of the cast were, Christopher Taylor, Sheila Craig and Patricia Scott, all of whom deserve unstinting praise for the artistry of their performances. The production was of a calibre which makes the singling out of particular flaws a process of microscopic and irrelevant discrimination.

For the play itself . . . the scene is a room in hell, three people are to spend eternity together—a coward, a lesbian and a nymphomaniac. Sheila Craig as Inez, the lesbian, tells her companions that it is not what they think that makes them evil, but what they do. Sartre demonstrates repeatedly through the three characters that what we think, quite as much as what we do, is the medium through which we express the evil or the goodness which we are. The discovery that the door to the room is not locked is terrifying: the dark mystery of the corridor beyond terrifies the coward Garçan, ably portrayed by Christopher Taylor. But the true horror their position fails to reach the three. It is not the room that is hell; it is the people themselves. Our society looks on cowardice, lesbianism and nymphomania with varying degrees of distaste. And yet we clutch at them, these arbitrary abstractions, just as Sartre's characters do, in an attempt to justify ourselves. Sartre's message is that we ourselves are evil or good . . . not as we are guilty of particular sins, but as the evil which makes those sins possible is part of us. Since the eternal damnation of the three individuals concerned is the supposition on which the drama is based, there is no point at which the dramatic structure is logically complete. The play concludes when the lesson has been demonstrated with sufficient clarity that everyone of any intelligence in the audience will have grasped the meaning. The players bow their way out amid a roung of well deserved applause.

Harold Burke.

Hockey Final

SMC Wins Over Trinity In Runaway Game, 7-3

In the Jennings Trophy final Monday St. Mike's "A" beat Trinity 7-3 in a game which loosened up after a first quarter of close checking. While Howard of Trinity was in the penalty box St. Mike's rapped in three goals in less than one minute.

When the Trinity men came back in the second the fast work of wainhouse in the SMC crease took the wind out of the striving Trinity team. The intramural championship game was put on ice in the third when the Double Blue sank three more in quick succession to end up with a lop-sided score of 7-3, and the last minute efforts of the Buttery Boys couldn't push the total above three for their team.

It was the first championship for the St. Mike's team since the 1930-31 season. Both teams had a good average during the season, and it was the close checking of the Mikemen which won the laurels for them.

Top scorer for the winners was Tom McKillop with two goals and two assists. Prendergrast sank two, and Robertson, Milne and McIntyre added one each. For Trinity Tom Crerar with two goals and Leishman with one were the marksmen.

First Period

1.—SMC, Prendergrast (McNonany) 13:50
2.—SMC, McIntyre (E. Duffy) 15:53
3.—SMC, Robertson (McKillop and Duffy) 16:05

The Intercollegiate hockey championship having gone to the Montreal Carabins only two games remain to be played, and these will be strictly a battle for last place. Montreal nabbed four of the top five scoring honours, with Don Murray of Queen's being the only outsider to score over 14 points.

Reynolds of McGill has the dubious distinction of being the top penalty-getter with 45 minutes.

LPP

Stanley Ryerson, National Organizer of the LPP, will speak on Communism, Art and Science at 8 tonight in the J.C.R.

Sportswoman

PHE have taken another intramural title. In the closely contested struggle for the hockey championship PHE outclassed Vic by a score of 1-0 in the final game on Monday. The goal came midway in the game on a breakaway by Irma Bullock, and although Vic monopolized the play in the third period, Mary Macpherson put up a phenomenal effort in goal for PHE and turned away shot after shot that looked like a sure counter.

More Hockey

In a comedy game staged by St. Mike's girls and Elmesley House American boys, the girls came out on top of a 5-4 count. The score would not have been so flattering for the boys of they had not cheated, having Jerry Washington playing and he could skate.

Best Contribution Of Sportmanship Wins Biggs Trophy

The biggest athletic award of the year has been won by Jack Gray, a six-letter man in football and basketball, and one of the best all-round athletes that Varsity has seen in some time. The selection was made last night by the Athletic Directorate on nominations by each team and faculty. The trophy was inaugurated in 1942.

Besides the six senior letters, three for senior football and three for Senior Basketball, Jack also won a second letter in intermediate wrestling. In his earlier years he was a track star specializing in sprints. He was also a star sprinter in TSSAA competition when he went to Western Tech. This year in addition to his regular athletic competition he coached the PHE III's Basketball team and was on the executive of the athletic committee.

Before coming to university, Jack played a year with Brian Timmis' Toronto Indians where he was hailed as one of the most promising ends in senior football. The trophy is awarded to the person "who contributes the most to university athletics from the standpoint of leadership, sportsmanship and performance.

In '42 the trophy was won jointly by J. A. Mullet and E. G. Finlayson. In '43 J. F. Murray was the winner and in '44 it was again jointly won, this time by H. H. MacMillan and R. T. Delaney. In '45 G. A. Lewis won it and the '46 winner was Wally Halder, who now coaches the Senior Hockey team. In '47 L. Marshall was the winner. In '48 Bob Henry and Don Bark and in '49 Archie Jones won the trophy.

VOL. LXIX, NO. 94 THE UNIVERSITY OF TORONTO Friday, March 10, 1950

Unanimous SAC Vote Appoints New Editor

Editor-in-chief Stan Fillmore (left), renowned for his crusading propensities, and next year's Editor-in-chief, Frank Moritsugu, are shown looking at the future with sober glance. The typewriter hiding Moritsugu is symbolic of The Varsity chieftainship. Despite evidence The Varsity will not change in stature next year.

Frank Moritsugu, II Political Science and Economics, Victoria College, was appointed Editor-in-Chief of The Varsity for 1950-51 at Wednesday night's meeting of The Students' Administrative Council.

Moritsugu, 27 years old, has spent two years on The Varsity, the last as Makeup Editor. He brings to the paper a wealth of technical and practical experience in newspaper work. In the past he has worked on The New Canadian, a Japanese paper. In addition he has done free lance work for various Canadian and American publications.

Pogo Competition

"We are going to try and make next year's Varsity a brighter and more imaginative paper," Moritsugu said yesterday. "We realize that we have Pogo for competition in Toronto's other morning newspaper, and we are going to try and make The Varsity a more attractive paper for Toronto students.

"One big problem that is going to be worked on is the training of a staff. We already have the nucleus for a good staff next year, but we are working on a complete training program for new members who join The Varsity in the fall. We must prepare a staff each year who will be able to take over the paper the following season.

Student Opinion Forum

"We'll try next year to create a forum of student opinion to discuss pertinent campus problems. One of the first moves in this direction will be to arrange to have advertising removed from the editorial page. In this way we will have more space for straight opinions. Editorial policy will attempt to lead, stimulate, and provoke student thought as well as to provide informed comment on campus problems.

"The various projects of the SAC and The National Federation of Canadian University Students and the International Student Service will be even more fully covered next year than they have this, if possible in a more attractive manner. The encouraging progress of the proposed Students' Memorial Union will be developed as much as we can in The Varsity."

Tough Crusading

Moritsugu takes over the editorship from Stan Fillmore, III Vic, who graduates this year. Fillmore, termed "crusading" in a recent Saturday Night article, plans to to work for a newspaper next year. He expects things to be a little quieter than the final few stormy weeks of his term as The Varsity's chief. Asked yesterday what he thought of his year as editor of The Varsity, he said: "It almost killed me!"

Peace Through Culture Exchange Plan Object Between France, Reich

Paris, March 9 — (UPress) — Another step has been made in the French program for lasting peace. Student exchanges between France and Germany will be stepped up considerably this year. A large number of French students will spend their vacation in Germany while students from the French Zone, the Saar and Austria will visit France. In many cases students will be received in homes and efforts will be made to find common ground in cultural activities.

'CHUCK LECTURES' FACULTY TOPIC AT VIC DEBATE

Four of the faculty of Victoria College will match wits next Monday in Alumni Hall at 8 p.m. on whether lectures should be abolished or not. Dr. Robins and Mr. Hoeniger hinted that they should, while Miss Albright and Dr. Leslie will oppose them.

The "Senators' Debate" is an annual event, as the last debate of the season, sponsored by the Victoria College Debating Parliament. According to tradition the professors make nonsense out of sense.

The finals of the Thomson Impromptu Debates will also be held and two will be chosen winners. Harry Green, Roy Neehall, George Slater and Stan Kurisko, who represented Vic at McMaster and walked off with top honors will be the contestants.

NFCUS Committee Report On Texts Adopted By SAC

The NFCUS committee report on text books, which makes recommendations on government, wholesale, retail, and university levels, was unanimously adopted by the SAC Wednesday night.

Principal recommendation to the universities extended use of "authorized" books, which are duty free. At the present time, the brief points out, all authorized texts are not included in the calendar. It suggests that more comprehensive lists be prepared by the faculties and that these lists be forwarded to the publishers and government.

Other recommendations on this level were the operation of a book store on a cost basis as a student service, and the use of co-operatives and used-book exchanges.

The brief urges the government to include dictionaries in the list of duty-free books, and to reconsider its judgment on other books which the brief feels should be in this class. The removal of the 8 percent federal sales tax on American books is also suggested.

Although the committee recognizes the need of a publisher's price mark-up to cover overhead and retailers' discount, it recommends that this be limited as far as possible. Also recommended to the publishers is a check on retailers to make sure they keep to the list price, and the inclusion of transportation costs in wholesale prices so as to keep a general price over all Canada.

The brief also charges "flagrant profiteering" on the part of retailers, particularly in cases of direct importation from the United States.

To get the information for this brief the committee contacted 23 Canadian universities, 17 United States college book stores and 5 Canadian publishing houses. It also co-operated with the National Council of Canadian Universities which has already made a study of Canadian text prices.

SAC At A Glance

At Wednesday night's meeting of the Students' Administrative Council, the Council:

— Passed the Finance Committee's brief which recommends that the SAC fee be raised to $6 per year (from $3.) with an additional charge of $3. to students in their graduating year for Torontonensis. A move to raise the Torontonensis fee to $4. was defeated. (Story page 3).

— Adopted the report of the Students' Memorial Union Committee, outlining the revised plan for the proposed union. (Story page 16).

— Decided that the final meeting of the Council will be held on March 29, last regular meeting on March 21.

— Tabled a motion to reopen discussion on the appointment of a professional director for the All-Varsity Revue until next meeting, because the chairman of the AVR Committee, Miss Benson, was not present.

— Appointed Bill Girvin III Music, as next year's Blue and White Band leader, with James Guthrow, II Music as associate director.

— Heard the report of the Student Service Committee which had held a preliminary investigation of the state of cultural affairs on the campus, and recommended that a special committee be set up to go further into the matter.

— Heard a report from NFCUS Chairman Tom Symons on the local committee's investigation of the text book situation. (See story above.)

— Heard Music Committee Chairman Joyce Rous report that the cupboard constructed for the tympani was too small, but that the situation was being attended to. The tympani will have a home.

To Permit Women In HH Great Hall St. Laurent Debate

By RICH CLEE

Women will be allowed into Hart House for the debate to be held in the Great Hall at 8 p.m. Monday, March 27. The evening has been declared a "special occasion" since the guest speaker for the debate will be the Right Honorable Louis St. Laurent. The motion to be debated is "Resolved: that there is no effective national alternative to the Liberal Party."

P.M. Leads "Ayes"

The motion will be introduced by Jack Geller, II U.C. The ayes will be led by Mr. St. Laurent and Ed Eberle, IV St. Mike's. The opposition will be led by Elmer Sopha, IV U.C. and John Morden, II Wycliffe.

The debate will be held in the Great Hall, which will be specially arranged for the occasion. The Speaker's chair will be located in the centre of the raised dais, and flanked by chairs occupied by special guests. Among those expected to be invited are Leslie Frost, CCF leader E. B. Jolliffe, Mayor McCallum, Liberal leader Farquhar Oliver, and LPP leader Norman McLeod.

Divide Great Hall

A bar will be placed across the hall from the servery door to the far wall. The southern part will provide space for the debaters while the remainder will give seating for spectators. Admission will be by A. T. L. card. The upstairs gallery will be reserved for the wives of the guests.

The Prime Ministers have been invited perennially to take part in these debates, but this is the first time in 15 years that the invitation has been accepted. The last Prime Minister to visit the house for a debate was R. B. Bennett who came in 1935. The Debates Committee has had forty dollars put aside for such an occasion for many years to be spent on appropriate photographs. Elmer Sopha announced that the entire fund will probably be used for this event.

This will be the "biggest event of the term", said Sopha. The Speaker of the House for the occasion will be Roy Neehall, IV Vic. There will be seating space for about five hundred people and will be assigned on the basis of "first come first serve". Since a large crowd is expected, only the earliest will get seats, as there will be limits on the standing space to avoid overcrowding.

Short-Term View In House Design Called Difficulty

By DOREEN STEPHENSON

The architect with too short a view in his designs is a major problem today in architecture. This is the view of internationally famous Marcel Breuer, as expressed in his illustrated address, "Where Do We Stand," at the Museum Theatre last Tuesday.

Fundamental foundations of buildings should be futuristic because when a house becomes outmoded it cannot be moved like an old car, Breuer said. The house stands up long after its life is over, and generally determines the type of district that will grow around it.

Breuer's philosophy of architecture includes designing buildings so that the exterior becomes one with the interior decoration. He has developed this idea by having a continuous vista from potted plants on the inside through glassed-in walls to the landscape on the outside.

Professional Vote Sweeps Election To HH Committees

Meds and Skule dominated the Hart House committee elections yesterday with a heavy vote. UC, Architecture, Law and Trinity also had several successful candidates.

Keenest competition was for the House committee, with 15 candidates vieing for eight positions. The Debates committee election was the quietest for the eight members were decided by acclamation.

In the results that follow the first successful candidates named led the polls for that committee:—

House Committee

B. Lamb (Law), F. Mark and J. Johns (Meds), J. A. Butler (Archit.) C. Hersh and R. C. Joiner (SPS), Bruce Bone, Vic, (in a close decision over Chapman, UC). From the '49-'50 committee — R. Hassard (Trinity) and C. A. McCurdy (SPS).

Art Committee

Dave Briant (Meds), T. D. Barnes (SPS), J. Kaminecek (Archit.), D. G. Watson and R. R. Towes (Meds), E. A. Toshach, A. M. Watson and J. D. Grube (Trinty). From the '49 - '50 committee — J. D. Boggs and P. R. Day (SPS).

Music Committee

R. E. Turner (Meds), A. Kegetsu (SPS), C. B. Noble (Law), A. R. Davy (Archit.), M. Dumbeliuk (Trinity), J. T. Townsend (Wycliffe), J. F. Tracy (St. Mike's), R. H. Farmer (Meds). From the '49-'50 committee D. E. Coates and W. A. McCoy (SPS).

Library Committee

Watkins (SPS), J. W. Hoag (Archit.), E. A. Jupp (Law), D. Iliffe — Dean and J. G. Hooper (Trinity), J. J. Bateman (St. Mike's), T. D. Harpur and R. Clee (UC). From the '49-'50 committee — K. G. Moles (UC), W. F. Lawson (Trinity).

Chess Club

Rogers, Rotenberg and Shulman (UC), Robinson (Vic), Feldberg (SPS).

Camera Club

Tucker, Sprott and Wade (UC), Angus and W. MacKenzie (Meds), I. A. Ford (SPS) and graduate Blackhall by acclamation.

ROBERTSON DAVIES WILL BE SPEAKER UC GRAD DINNER

Robertson Davies, editor of the Peterborough Examiner and author of Fortune My Foe, and Eros at Breakfast, will be the guest speaker at the University College Graduates' Banquet to be held Wednesday, Mar. 15. Tickets for the Banquet will be available in the Rotunda today and Monday from 10 to 2.

Just Say We Called

This is the last regular issue of The Varsity for this year.

Last fall we said we faced the coming year with something of the feeling of a young man passing his twenty-first birthday. That was in the first editorial of the year. Now, in the last editorial of the year, we feel that a more apt comparison at this time would be to the old man who is the classic picture of the Old Year—stooped and bent, prematurely white-haired, greatly disillusioned but a good deal wiser than when he faced the new year only twelve months before.

Looking back on what has been accomplished, we realize we did not do all we had expected to do. We have made mistakes by doing the wrong thing. We have made other mistakes by doing nothing at all when we should have done something. We can say only that these errors were made in all honesty. Our sins of commission and omission have been, and are, due to human frailty rather than to intention.

Any success we may have had may be ascribed in large part to the genuine spirit of cooperation on the part of all those concerned with the publishing of The Varsity. The students, the SAC, the administration and, above all, the staff have, by their willingness, contributed to whatever has been good.

Before signing the final "30" we would like to offer our congratulations to the SAC and three of its sub-committees for some very fine work which has been acomplished this year.

The Finance Committee brief and the Memorial Union report are now on the way to the Board of Governors for final approval. If and when these two reports are accepted by that board the SAC fees raise and the Students' Union can be considered accpomplished facts. Toronto NFCUS has produced some of the first concrete suggestions for the solution of the country-wide text-book problem.

Toronto students have reason to be proud of these three accomplishments.

Let's Write An Editorial

A Definite View

A report of the All-Varsity Revue Committee, adopted by the Students' Administrative Council on Wednesday, states "the editorials on this question of a director of professional calibre (for the All-Varsity Revue) as presented in The Varsity was a typical one-sided presentation of a subject on which they had definite views."

The Report is correct in one sense only. We do have definite views on the question of hiring a professional director for the All-Varsity Revue.

We would like to make our position clear once more. We do not think the SAC is acting in the best interests of the student body when it takes responsibility for an all-student function from the students and places it in the hands of a hired professional.

We have already pointed out the obvious conclusion that if a professional is hired to direct the All-Varsity Revue, there is nothing to prevent the Council from hiring professional editors for The Varsity and Torontonensis, a professional conductor for the University of Toronto Symphony, in short, well qualified professionals to direct all student efforts.

At this point, of course, such proposals would sound ridiculous. But in essence, they are no more ridiculous than the proposal that a professional be hired to direct the Revue.

The All-Varsity Revue was originally conceived as a completely student function. This meant direction as well as acting, producing, stage managing, and all the various functions that go into making such a show.

The original purpose of the Revue was to provide an outlet for student talent in this specialized field. It was definitely not conceived originally as a money-making scheme.

It is admitted that the purpose of making money is not primarily the one for which the Council decided to hire a professional director. The purpose was to save money. But if the old adage "a penny saved is a penny earned" holds true, then, in essence, the professional director is to be hired to earn money for the Students' Council.

If it is felt that professional advice on a purely technical nature is needed with a view to keeping costs down, there is no reason why the professionals already on the University payroll cannot be approached. It was, in fact, reported to the Victoria College Union last Monday that Robert Gill and his staff were willing to provide such advice.

There is no need therefore to take the direction of the Revue out of student hands. We, as students, have been a long time gaining the management of our own affairs. Let us not give up the hard-won autonomy we have gained.

Studies In Communism

The God That Failed, edited by Richard Crossman; Hamish Hamilton; $3.00.

The masses of propaganda being slung at the world today often serve to obscure our attitudes on some of the big issues which face us. For the university student, who is presumably learning to think, the management of problems like one's personal attitude to war, to the H-Bomb and to politics is difficult, even without so much verbiage.

Among the problems, whatever we may think of it personally, is communism, the current bogey of the western world. It seems particularly fortunate that at this time a book should appear which describes in their own words the trip that six famous intellectuals took into the communist never-never land, and of their return. Here are six essays which tell something of what happens inside men when they embrace communism —why they join, and why they quit. For the thinking university student of 1950, The God That Failed is required reading.

The essays, by the Hungarian novelist Arthur Koestler, Italian writer Ignazio Silone, the American Negro novelist Richard Wright, French Nobel Prize Winner Andre Gide, American Journalist Louis Fischer and the British poet, Stephen Spender, are an attempt to put into words the state of mind and the events which led the six into communism and out again. Of the six, only the first three (and Spender for a few weeks) were actually members of the communist party, while Gide and Fischer limited themselves to strong support from the sidelines.

These stories are not a rant and rave against communism: they are rich and varied and reflect the widely different backgrounds of the contributors. These six men took up the cause of communism for different reasons, but all were seeking faith with which to build a better world than the one they saw around them, a system of life which would correct the injustices of the capitalistic system. Eventually they were disappointed by the developments which were expressed in Russian communism, but it was still harder for a man like Richard Wright to leave the Party than it had been, for him to join it. By subjecting themselves to a rigorous self-examination, and because they believed firmly in the intrinsic value of the individual, they got out. It wasn't easy, and when Wright says, after he has left the party: "I'll be for them, even though they are not for me," we get some idea of the monumental conflict that went on the heart and mind of a man who really believed in communism.

The explanation given by the six men for their disillusionment with the communist ideal, point out as well as we have seen for some time that element of modern Russian communism which makes it such a dangerous component in the present world situation—for they show that whatever the merits of historical communism may be the present Russian regime has corrupted that ideal until it is almost unrecognizable, a totalitarian danger which cannot be ignored.

The essays, especially those by Koestler, Silone and Wright are well written, and Richard Crossman contributes an excellent introduction. The God That Failed is informed constructive reading, a good book to put on your list, for-after-the-exams perusal.

Reps Petition Fair Practice In Employment

By IAN MONTAGNES

Forty-eight delegates, representing 18 youth organizations officially, and many more unofficially, presented Premier Frost with a petition regarding anti-discrimination legislation, Wednesday.

The petition urged introduction of a Fair Employment Practices Act, extension of the present bill forbidding restrictive covenants on real estates to include existing covenants as well as future ones, legislation to curb discrimination in public places such as Dresden, and a programme of education to instruct children in tolerance.

Includes Many Groups

Represented on the delegation were religious organizations of many beliefs, junior branches of most of the political parties, the Toronto Negro Study Group, the WUA, and various colleges and courses.

Mr. Frost told the delegation that all these matters had been carefully considered, and would be again. He stressed the fact that Ontario led the rest of Canada in anti-discrimination legislation.

Pledge Support

In interviews later, leaders of the opposition parties pledged support of a bill containing these ideas.

SAC Staffers

The working section of the SAC is diverse, for the very structure is complex. Above, left to right, are three of the key members of the Committee: Secretary-treasurer E. A. MacDonald; Associate-secretary Miss A. E. M. Parkes, and Miss Edith Annis, Office Assistant to Miss Parkes.

Erect Front Campus Fence When-When-Well When..?

By HERB WOOD

In a few weeks or so, nobody knows for sure, the fence will be going up. For those few who are unaware of the implications surrounding the fence, let me explain.

When the fence goes up around the front campus, then is the time to settle down and study for those dreaded spring pen manoeuvers. But there is one catch: nobody knows the time it will go up.

Last year the waiting grew unbearable, so The Varsity dispatched a reporter to obtain, if humanly possible, advance notice on the fence. The man dispatched was that redoubtable reporter, Bird-dog McScoop.

Bird-dog quickly located the grounds superintendent, in a shack behind Convocation Hall. Ruddy Corbett was the grounds superintendent in those days, but he retired soon after Bird-dog concluded his campaign.

Corbett calmly smoked his pipe, revealing nothing to The Varsity reporter. Bird-dog was getting nowhere. Time was passing.

Bird-dog decided to use strategy. Dressing up in overalls and pulling a peaked cap over his eyes, Bird-dog mingled with the laborers, keeping both ears open and the one eye not covered by the peak of his cap. But he learned nothing. Did he give up? No siree, not Bird-dog.

Next he tried flattery, serving Ruddy coffe in the morning and in the afternoon with cookies. This was before the days of the samovar, now in standard use at The Varsity.

It was this touch that changed Ruddy. Quote: "I'll tell you anything, only don't give me any more of that coffee!"

Reeling In

The Final Scene

By ROCKY MARTINO

"How long, Mr. Clavier?"

"One minute, Professor."

Professor Satterly pulled out his pocket watch and waited — for one minute. Then he stepped forward, picked up his container of liquid air and proceeded with the next experiment. This time the one minute was enough; the cameras rolled and "Item Ten" was filmed.

At the end of this experiment, the cameramen rushed about adjusting lights and apparatus until everything was suitable for the next item on the "script" — "Professor revives goldfish after immersing it in liquid air for one-half minute".

When everything was set, Director Nat Clavier of the National Film Board stepped back, raised his right arm: "Action. Camera!"

"Eyewitness" Series

Over and over, from nine in the morning until five in the afternoon, Professor Satterly beamed into the cameras and did all the tricks in his repertoire as the National Film Board filmed his famous "Liquid Air Lecture."

This film is the first of a new series for the Board. At the present time, they have a series in issue under the heading "Eye-witness". The 'one-reelers' have up to now contained two or three short features on such subjects as cod fishing, gold mining, etc., and have been released for rural and smaller urban communities. The filming of "The Uses and Misuses of Liquid Air" is the first of a new series which will try to capture for a much wider audience such outstanding Canadian personalities as Professor Satterly. This new "Eyewitness" series will be shortly released in the major cities of Canada (and possibly those of the United States) under a new Film Board policy.

The Star — Professor Satterly

Least perturbed about the whole thing was Professor Satterly. When asked how it felt to be a movie star he replied with his customary curtness, "It's nothing but a lot of work." But anyone there during the filming could see the twinkle in his eye as he did the experiments for the audience. The cameras were merely a nuisance that had to be put up with while he had some fun.

But for all the gaiety of the occasion, there was a note of sadness in the air. Professor Satterly was giving his last liquid air lecture. In June, Professor Satterly brings to a close 37 years as a lecturer in Physics at this university.

Sitting with him in his office after the lecture, the years seemed to slip by with each puff on his pipe until it was 1912 again. John Satterly recently arrived from England joined his three teaching colleagues on the staff. "There was no Hart House then. No Trinity, no Knox. The campus was very small and we on the staff knew one another quite well. In those days we knew most of the students and even entertained in our homes. But that's impossible now. The staff is so big and the student body is so big that there isn't the feeling of comradeship that there was before."

Future Plans

"No, I don't know what I'm going to do next year", he answered in reply to my question.

"What about the liquid air lecture?" I went on.

"Oh, someone else on the staff will give it."

Perhaps someone will — at least someone will go through the motions, but only one person can give it — John Satterly, Professor of Physics in the University of Toronto.

SAC Fees Increase Coming Next Year Deficits To Be Cut

SAC fees will be higher next year. On Wednesday, the Students' Administrative Council passed a brief requesting a raise in the Council fee from $3.00 to $6.00 with an additional $3.00 for students in their graduating year. The brief will be presented to the Board of Governors at its meeting this month.

Reasons Stated

The reasons given by the brief for the increase include the expansion of SAC services, the increased costs of SAC publications, and the deficits incurred each year by the council.

The brief showed how costs have been steadily rising since 1936, and included the costs of services which have been instituted by the council since that year. The Housing and Employment Services, for instance, were begun in 1946 and '47 and cost the council $4,000 in 1948. Another example, the University Symphony and the All-Varsity Choir, whose expenses were raised from $48 in 1936 to $1,200 in 1948 shows the need for an increased fee.

$3.00 For Torontonensis

The additional $3.00 to be paid by graduating students is intended to pay for Torontonensis. In this way, every graduating student will receive a copy of the yearbook, and the guesswork in ordering the amount of copies required will be avoided.

The problem of financing the Memorial Student Union, estimated to cost $506,000 was not included in the brief. A standing committee will be formed to study the problem of financing the Union, and it is hoped that the report of this committee will be presented to the Board of Governors this summer. If the Board approves the report, the SAC fee will have to be raised to include the Union fee.

The fees brief, in short, concluded that the present services are beneficial to the entire student body and ought to be maintained and consolidated. Since costs had risen so sharply while revenue had decreased, a raise in the fee was seen as inevitable if these services were to be kept.

IUS Committee Election For Executive Positions Thursday, March 16th

The Toronto ISS Committee will hold elections for next year's executive at an open meeting, Thursday, March 16 in Room 1, Trinity. Nominations for the position of Chairman, Vice-Chairman, Secretary, Treasurer and heads of the various activity committees such as Public Relations, Campaign, Scholarships and the Information Service are now open. Any interested students are eligible for election and nomination in writing, stating qualifications, will be accepted in the SAC Office until Wednesday.

ISS is a voluntary movement and the elected officers carry out the program adopted by the National Conference and campus projects decided by the local committee.

Swap Staff Zither Player For Gael Journal Samovar

By FRASER FAIRLIE

These things always start off so innocently. This time it was a zither. You would never guess it, but at the CUP conference one of The Varsity members said the following wire arrived:

EDITOR VARSITY FROM EDITOR QUEEN'S JOURNAL GREETINGS REQUIRE ZITHER PLAYER FOR ENTERTAINMENT AT FORMAL DANCE THIS WEEKEND STOP CAN YOU HELP US STOP WILL LOAN PRIZED POSSESSION ONE RUSSIAN SAMOVAR AS SECURITY KINDLY ADVISE STOP. The Editor immediately sent out a man, T. Jaeger, to hunt up a zither player, and after enquiries at the Conservatory and the Parliament Buildings one was found.

EDITOR VARSITY TO EDITOR QUEEN'S JOURNAL GREETINGS STAFF ZITHER PLAYER AVAILABLE STOP SEND DETAILS REGARDING ENGAGEMENT STOP EXPRESS SAMOVAR AT ONCE DELIGHTED STOP. This was the dispatch from Fillmore to Queen's.

In the meantime Jaeger had gone in search of the zither player whose phone number he had obtained. Here he found a surprise . . . L. Pichler turned out to be Miss Leopoldine Pichler. He, along with his valet, decided to accompany L. Pichler to Kingston to protect the . . . zither.

A wire was dispatched to Queen's: EDITOR VARSITY TO EDITOR QUEEN'S GREETINGS ZITHER PLAYER L PICHLER AND TWO ASSOCIATES ARRIVING FRIDAY FOR DANCE ZITHER PLAYER REQUIRES ROOM ALONE OR WITH ANOTHER PLAYER STOP WHERE IS SAMOVAR STOP

The samovar arrived next morning and is now adorning the News room. As you read this, the zither, associate Jaeger, and flunkey, and L. Pichler are on way to Queen's. One last message left Toronto today:

DISCOUNTS AND CANNONS — RESIGNATIONS AND APATHY

Variety Spices News

It is always dangerous to look at a selected period of time and to try and draw from it conclusions which will point up trends and directions of thought and action. But at the end of each year The Varsity sits down and looks over its columns for the past seven months and tries to find out what direction the student mind is taking.

STUDENT INTEREST DROPS

This has been an unusual year, with its fair share of large and weighty problems. Some of the old perennials were back — The International Union of Students and the proposed Students' Memorial Union, took up quite a bit of space. But there were also some new problems, among which the most important was the growing awareness of a falling off in student interest in the so-called 'cultural' activities. This led, towards the end of the year, to an investigation of the problem by the Students' Administrative Council, which will result at the last meeting of the Council this year in the formation of a committee to look carefully into the question and report to next year's Council. The Council took other steps: the most controversial was the one that curtailed pep rallies.

TIGHTEN COOPERATION

The SAC-Caput Liaison Committee was formed early in the year, but it had only one meeting. The Students' Memorial Union almost bogged down this year for lack of funds, but towards the end of the term things looked brighter as the SAC Union Committee brought in its new report, which puts the proposed union on a new site near Hart House and holds some hope that financial assistance will be forthcoming from the Administration.

The Chariot Race looks as if it is headed for moth balls after a rather unsuccessful fiasco this year. Meds stole the Jerry P. Potts trophy and it hasn't been heard of since. UC also got away with the Skule Cannon, while Skule retaliated by lifting the UC Dragon. Later in the year Skule came out with a shiny new cannon, displayed in public only when chained to three stalwart engineers.

VIC WORRIES

Over at Vic they had a hot time over whether the Vic Formal would be formal or informal. The informal supporters won that battle. Vic also worried about the growth of All-Varsity activities, and asked the SAC to let the colleges have more time for college functions.

The Varsity provided some good copy this year, and turned up a resignation of the editor and masthead for the first time in twenty years. It all turned out to be a misunderstanding, but not before a special meeting of the Students' Administrative Council had been held to discuss the matter. In the end The Varsity went back to work.

INTEREST SPARKED

Text books and the prices students pay for them has been a running topic all year. Sparked by a ten percent discount at the University Press Bookstore in the fall, and by the subsequent refusal of the Macmillan Company to supply the Press with textbooks, student interest in the problem was aroused, and the Council found students across the country supporting its and the Press' stand on the discount question. Good work on the textbook problem was also done by the local NFCUS Committee.

From the administration came announcement of the new pass arts course, which will abolish the present three year pass arts course and substitute a new course with fewer electives.

At the beginning of the year there was a lot of fuss about the refusal of the United States to allow certain students and professors to enter that country. Several instances of this aroused a lot of comment, but the affected people stayed out of the US. The H-Bomb, presented in a special issue of The Varsity, was one of the main topics of letters after the decision to make it had been reached. Students seemed to be genuinely interested in finding some intelligent way to peace, without a compromise of their democratic principles.

Professor Slatterly bowed out this year, and the last of his famous liquid air lectures was seen on the campus. No student characters appeared on the campus this year and the days of Potts, Nobleman and Suddick were only a memory. The veterans have become a minority and with their departure and the advent of the younger student body, a far more serious attitude than typified the post-war generation of the twenties is evident.

No Backdown In Book Battle With Macmillan

By JIM KNIGHT

With the announcement last fall that the University of Toronto Press would sell new text books at a 10% discount for cash, one of the hottest controversies of the year was started.

A Sincere Effort

Mr. Alec Rankin, appointed manager of the Press last fall, said the discount was given "in a sincere effort to reduce the cost of texts to university students." The next day Coles Bookstore followed suit. Coles offered a discount of 20% on new texts to students, and accompanied the announcement with a charge that Rankin "was no more interested in helping the student than the man in the moon," that Rankin was forced to reduce prices because Coles had withstood pressure from the University Press, which had attempted to force Coles to raise their prices on texts. Rankin denied all charges and made some of his own. Coles were slow in paying their accounts, he said, and henceforth would be supplied books on a C.O.D. basis only. Outcome, as expressed by Rankin, "It looks like a good year for the students."

Macmillan's Boycott

Just over a month later, however, the biggest blow to the Press' policy came from the Macmillan Company. Macmillan's, which supplies most of the Medical texts used and distributes Oxford and Nelson Presses, refused to sell any more books to the University Press until the 10% discount was discontinued.

Main beef of the Macmillan Co. was that the Press was taking unfair advantage of the retail trade. "Any customer who will not respect

SAC Winds Up

Free 'Bibles' And Eskimo Chorines

By JOAN EDDIS

'Sound' contributions have come from the Music and Radio Committees of the student government. Under the music department, concerts were given by the U of T symphony and All-Varsity Mixed Chorus, daily record hours made use of the Carnegie Record Collection, and work on the new Varsity song book was begun. A weekly program was broadcast over CJRT-FM by the Radio Committee which also conducted a workshop to give interested students experience in announcing, producing and the technical side of radio.

For the first time this year, the U of T Debating Union joined forces with the Hart House debaters to send a team of two to tour the States. The controversy stimulated bythe Liberals' demand to debate the Charitable Gifts Act at the Mock Parliament session in the Ontario House ended in their resignation as the government.

Pipes to Boards

Controversies sparked the Council meetings on every issue from Pipe Band finances and SAC bulletin boards to NFCUS-IUS affiliation and the ad policy of The Varsity which resulted in the brief resignation of the daily's staff due to a "misunderstanding" which was later cleared up.

Asked to comment on the SAC meetings, Chairman Carman Guild replied, "The controversies generated more light than heat."

FLASH!

A catastrophe has been avoided. The new wheeled tympani now have a home. First reports indicated that the cupboards especially constructed for the drums were too small but ingenuity solved the situation. Music Commissioner Joyce Rous, III St. Hilda's, told the SAC that by building additional shelves the tympani could be squeezed in.

Canadians Led By Toronto For More NFCUS Benefits

This year the University of Toronto was the main driving force behind moves to expand NFCUS activities, both in Canada and in the international field. With the national student union solidly organized after the wartime lapse in its activities, NFCUS handled enough activities during the year to show it needed a better organization and to indicate it was ready to go into international work.

The better organization is to be built around a new permanent full-time secretary. It will require a bigger fee, and Toronto has been the first to vote an increase to a 25 cents per capita charge. The local NFCUS committee's support for a full time national secretary grew out of stumbling blocks they ran into in several projects they undertook this year.

Find Exchange Plan Difficulties

Prime example of the need for someone with time to organize certain activities was the fiasco that developed out of attempts to arrange student exchanges with United States universities. Those on this campus who tried to organize Toronto's end of the scheme found liaison with the United States National Student Association. (USNSA) virtually non-existant.

Varsity is in a good position to urge the fees increase, for the Students' Administrative Council is in the throes of working out a general SAC fees increase. But Toronto is not alone in its readiness to set up a 25 cent NFCUS fee—the University of Montreal is even speaking of a one dollar charge per student. Also, the delegates to last year's national conference passed a decision urging each other to work for a fees increase on their own campus.

Want Agency

Another use Toronto would like to see made of a full-time secretary is the establishment of a NFCUS-run overseas travel ticket agency. Warren Willings, III Trinity, from his experience this year in getting tickets for students, under the direction of NFCUS, has decided that it is impossible to arrange the buying of tickets for students across the country unless a permanent agency can be set up. He feels organization of such an agency could best be done by a full-time worker. Despite his difficulties he has arranged passage for several Toronto students, and hopes to have several more tickets for other universities.

For the third time in succession the U. of T. showed it is ready to risk the danger of associating with Communists. The SAC's working committee for NFCUS affairs, however, was a little embarrassed over the vote. The members are our established list prices compels us either to assist him to a favourable competitive position, or to suspend supply in fairness to those who do," a letter from Macmillan's stated.

The Press and Macmillan's have stood firm on their principles and the situation at present is a stalemate.

Probes Continue

Ever since Macmillan's made their position clear on Oct. 26, investigations have proceeded by various bodies. St. Michael's SAC passed a resolution at the end of October recommending that the faculty of the college remove from the reading lists all Macmillan's texts. A poll conducted by The Varsity showed that the University of Montreal, Laval University and Carleton College received cash discounts on texts ranging from 15% to five per cent, and that at Queen's a credit slip system in effect allowed a discount of 10%. Of the 15 universities polled, nine reported no discounts, the four above reported discounts and two, St. Francis Xavier and Dalhousie, reported there may be discounts on Macmillan's texts.

Want Used Texts

The most positive step taken in the dispute so far has been the announcement by the bookstore that it would take in all used Macmillan's, Nelson's and Oxford books it could get and resell them to the students. An official letter sent by the SAC to 16 Canadian universities asking them to support our stand, has been answered by all but Ottawa, Montreal, Laval, Queen's and Acadia.

Eight Support Us

Of the replies received so far, eight universities — McGill, Manitoba, Western Ontario, Saskatchewan, Alberta, Mt. Allison, Macdonald and Bishops — have supported us and three, McMaster, Dalhousie, and Carleton, have declined to take action.

This is the situation at present. The Bookstore, in attempting to reduce text prices, has allowed a 10% discount; Macmillan's, charging unfair competition, has stopped selling books to the Bookstore; the Bookstore, in an attempt to maintain low prices, has issued an appeal for all the used Macmillan's, Oxford and Nelson texts available.

Most of the notes we ought to sing in the year's Art, Music and Drama swan song have been sung before. Last fall we set out to accomplish a threefold task: to provoke, stimulate, and tell the truth, but above all to provoke.

Review Astonishes

Editor, The Varsity:

A member of your staff has at last pursued the art of criticism to an "O altitudo."

Wednesday's critique of "Othello" introduced such a shimmering tissue of novelties and subtleties as the world has not before seen. Upon reading this unusual analysis I was astonished that such a mind as its author undoubtedly possesses should be spent in mere writing. His profound irony and straining wit flicked about his victims with a pedestrian lightness that evidenced a critical capacity of unspeakable degree. The poisonous flowing of his humor surely as much agonized the admonished players into reform as it moved his delighted readers to scorn.

What novel turns to the English language! Such exquisitely curious additions to native idiom! I hesitate to number all his innovations in style, and yet intense surprise prompts that I should indicate one or two of his sublimest peaks and boldest aversions from base, customary usage.

He tells us in the beginning that "Ted Follows' misconception of Iago almost destroyed the play."

Hapless Shakespeare, how passing thy fame, how tottering thy throne! What thanks do we not owe this modern wit for so keenly detecting the weaknesses and transience of literary immortals? And mark this noble stroke: "David Gardner did justice to the part in all but speech and stance." Could ironic delicacy arrive at another extreme? But the two preceding touches of genius are as compared with the next "coup de main" in which he reproaches the same actor as in the latter excerpt:

"His lines lacked emphasis and intensity, were so many words in blank verse culminating in a questionable death scene at the end."

Note that "at the end." What ordinary critic would have faced the howls of ignorant laughter that inevitably crowd upon these most inspired innovations in literary expression?

Later he turns his high-ranging spirit upon another indifferent player in which instance I would beg you to remark the artistic restraint which, perhaps, a little hinders his genteel savagery, but at the same time lends his enunciations a fine pungency and odor:

"Avoiding vitality and strength in his portrayal, John Finlay managed his part."

Wrenching language into pleasing contortions is one of this critic's happiest abilities; thus we come upon the unique and figured description of an inadequate supporting actor as:

"a stilted, mechanical Lodovico whose closing lines let the climax down with a thud at the play's end."

The perennial search of highest authorship is for just such concrete metaphorical illustration. Envision, if you can, the manifold connotations of that sublime "thud." The reader's prayer is answered in so enlightening an image.

And after appointing the myriad faults of Mr. Gill's dismal production, our critic leaves us, in the fullness of his magnanimous soul, with a lighthearted flourish:

"But apart from these few discrepancies his production of 'Othello' went rather well."

I cannot but look upon this brief and unique little essay of one of the most illustrious members of your staff as the most informative and amusing manifestations of spleen.

Year-End Highlights

I shot a column into the air
It fell to earth I know not where.
I lose more columns that way.

With the end of the publication term one realizes the great number of strings left untied in the presentation of a review of Varsity Highlights. Rather than attempt to complete the task this final column will be devoted to a summary of the past year's events in hopes that some future historian, perhaps at the end of the century or his wits, may be facilitated.

A review of the awards presented for conspicuous achievement in all phases of campus life provides an interesting and informative examination of the year's progress. A list of the more important award winners follows.

THE ABIGAIL ABERCROMBIE AWARD to Zoologist Radford Q. Bradford for his comprehensive study on the mating instinct as exhibited by the pileated sheep tick.

THE YUKON ERIC LOVING CUP to House Ec. graduate Passionelle Blacklace for introducing the double body slam into the genteel art of smooching.

THE JOHN ALEXANDER FERGUSON AWARD to Mimi La Crotchmeyer for unselfish giving beyond the call of duty.

THE SPADETHUMB MEMORIAL ATHLETIC AWARD to Featherhead Witherspoon for his inspiring leadership of the Trinity Tiddly Wink Seven. Captain Witherspoon also starred at left Tiddle.

THE PLANNED PARENTHOOD TROPHY to Ingrid Bergman for her discovery of the wonder drug Sulphadenial.

THE SCHNOOK OF THE MONTH CLUB AWARD to Robert Gull for his new one act play "This Way Out."

In addition to the above awards there are several other tokens of esteem which should be recorded.

To P.T. Instructor Nails Hammerhead, the original Simon Legree cat-of-nine-tails.

To Hart House Chef Rospierre Mange the new Edition of "800 Ways To Cook Hamburger."

To Jane Russell, two bushels of tat.

To Omar Walmsley, a bound copy of Duncan Hines' "Where To Stay If You Can Visit the United States."

To George, the understanding Park Plaza Doorman, one linen handkerchief to replace the one he loaned us during an unexpected upheaval.

To Miss Harrison, a faded rose for remembrance.

To Thaddeus Egghead, my parole officer, a bag of wet mice.

And last but not least, to my loving wife, whose industry and generosity have made possible my attendance at university, a new scrub pail.

FEATURING WOOD

By HERB WOOD

Writing, as a reflex of an individual's impression, is the mirror of the period in which it is written. If the people are contented, optimistic, and moral, those characteristics will be reflected in the writing.

Newspapers, generally speaking are unable, for considerations of policy and time, to print impressions. The publishers of newspapers do not entertain the policy, or expend the money in printing impressions. News, and facts are what they purvey.

Varsity Features Differ

Feature articles in The Varsity differ from those appearing in commercial newspapers chiefly in point of view and scope of coverage. Since our features are limited to the campus and the students and to a lesser extent, the staff, a fairly representative picture of the student can be drawn by the reader.

However, since features offer the only vehicle for self-expression outside of the editorial page, they depend pretty much on the individual writer and what he is interested in, excepting considerations of style and policy. This enthusiasm is wonderful. A genuine interest in a feature is half the battle and results in a finer product.

Limited Courage

But it is in this manner that inconsistencies and limited coverage of campus events and personalities come in. In a downtown paper, fuller coverage is assured by a paid staff. On The Varsity, with the exception of the masthead, the students volunteer their time and ability for nothing.

Quite naturally, the popular features are those that appeal to the imagination and require little research. Those features that require research or are not colourful, are by and large, passed up. This is particularly true of campus clubs. The remedy? At the beginning of the year, the publicity men responsible should submit a core of facts to the editor to form a basis for a feature. Again, students could co-operate by tipping off The Varsity on likely feature material.

Might Be a Genius

As far as features are concerned, The Varsity this year has put the emphasis on readability and general interest. Occasions occur where features differ radically from what we believe constitutes newspaper style. If the style is novel and interesting it will run as written, in spite of our better judgments. Our judgment is tempered by the opinion that there are always new and perhaps better ways of writing features, and who can say this isn't one of them.

CUP VIEWS THE NEWS

Canadian Universities are still a long way from the muchly vaunted era of Joe College. Despite the predictions that with the graduation of many veterans schools would return to the pre-war type of razzle-dazzle flaming-youth student bodies, there have been few signs of such doings on Canadian campi.

No Mausoleums . . . these

On the other hand the halls of learning have not been mausoleums. Engineers across the Dominion still keep the pot boiling—kidnapping the editor of the UBYSSEY and filling a special edition of the GATEWAY with 'Gineer style humour with a resultant banning of the sheet. Sports enthusiasts have added their quota to headlines—a minor riot at DALHOUSIE and ACADIA over whether a football game had been properly played; a hotel roughed up at WESTERN during a football celebration; the entire student body rilled up over the banning of a hockey player at UBC, because he didn't get permission before playing on an outside team.

Duffy, Atheism and Streetcars

But such a picture of Canadian schools must also include the terrific enthusiasm in the western schools during the Gouinlock debates (subject: that Communism is illegal in Canada), the passage of a compulsory $1 levy on all UBCers to subsidize D.P. student guests, the Father Duffy furore, the Atheist issue at Queen's, and the McGILL DAILY fight for the right to report SAC meetings to the students.

The situation on the McGill campus was reflected on many other campi where war-matured students clamoured for a bigger hand in student government. MANITOBA students are still fighting a proposed hike in streetcar fares; UBCers carried on a campaign in the interests of just treatment of an LPPer who was refused admission to the bar, and U.N.B. finally forced through permission to debate non-party politics on the campus.

Apathy and Asininity

Bannings, resignations and libel suits painted a new type of picture of undergraduate papers, which are usually content to concentrate on adolescent trivia. "University papers are growing up", stated the SASKATCHEWAN editorially and went on to show that the H-bomb, politics, civil liberties and student independence had occupied more lineage than ever.

"Canadian school papers outthought American college papers on all counts," stated a Canadian Press official in a recent interview. He could have added that in spite of charges of apathy, asininity and addle-patedness, Canadian students made a solid contribution to Canada during 1949-50.

and Canadian enthusiasm for membership in IUS may be dampened by recent reports the NUS has "temporarily suspended" its membership.

Probably this year's highest effort was a brief on federal aid to education that was compiled by several committees and presented to the "Massey commission" during January.

Everyone applauded the University of Montreal committee's success in arranging a subsidized summer seminar to further the cause of Canadian unity.

Organize Surveys

The Toronto committee carried out efficiently many undramatic surveys, on text costs, campus book outlets, and student union problems.

Members working on this mostly unnoticed work were cheered on in their work by evidence of the long range success of such everyday effort. When NFCUS was first set up in 1926, its aim was to organize country-wide debates. Last fall news arrived that the NFCUS debates organization has finally been developed into an autonomous body, the Canadian University Debating Association, with a permanent secretary-treasurer.

NFCUS will be increasingly useful to Canadian students if the University of Toronto has its way.

14 Varsity Pins To Be Awarded At Staff Banquet

Fourteen Varsity pins will be presented to staff members of The Varsity at the annual banquet for the newspaper staff on Friday, March 24. These pins are awarded for consistent work of high quality throughout the year.

Pins are limited in number — usually only a dozen are presented each year. Recipients are chosen by the Editor-in-chief on advice of the various departmental editors.

About one-quarter of an inch high, the pin has a blue "V" and the university coat-of-arms superimposed on a white porcelain background. Around the pin run the words, The Varsity—The Undergraduate Daily.

The awards were initiated eleven years ago. At that time only the right to wear the pin was granted and the recipient had to buy the pin himself. About two years ago, the Students' Administrative Council took over the payment for the awards.

The distinctive Varsity pin is becoming a familiar sight in Canadian newsrooms. One recipient is present Labor editor for one of Toronto's evening dailies, another is news editor of a local radio station. Other pin holders work on the C.B.C. newsstaff, the Canadian Press, and out-of-town papers.

This year's pins go to the following:

Encourage Varsity Writing With $100 Freedman Prize

The Annual Staff Banquet of The Varsity will take place March 24, and one of the high-lights at this occasion is the presentation of the Anita Freedman Award. This is a cash award of $100 to a member of the staff 'for the most distinguished reporting' during the publication year.

The award is made in the memory of Anita Freedman, a graduate of UC, former staff member of The Varsity, and for a short time, an employee of the Globe and Mail. Her death in the spring of 1947 cut short a very promising career in the field of journalism. A group of close friends thought it would be fitting tribute to her to establish the cash award as an incentive to journalism on the University of Toronto campus.

The award is given on the basis of outstanding contribution during the reporting year, with no specific definition for qualification other than energy, faithfulness, inventiveness, integrity of the reporter concerned. There are no restrictions involved as to the type of writing: writers of sports, news, art, music, book and movie reviewers and feature writers may qualify.

The selection rests with a committee consisting of the editor of The Varsity, Stan Fillmore, who will give the personal reference necessary, the secretary-treasurer of the SAC, E. A. Macdonald, a member of the faculty, Dean Bissell this year, appointed by the President and a representative of the Toronto Press who will be Dorothy Howarth of the Evening Telegram who examine The Varsities of this year.

supposed to be the campus experts regarding NFCUS, but they voted down affiliation with IUS when asked by SAC for their personal opinion, while the student body voted strongly for affiliation.

Represented at Conference

An attempt was made during the Christmas season to bring all western student unions into IUS. The British Union of Students invited other western unions to a London conference. NFCUS was represented by Gordon Gwynne-Timothy, last year's SAC president and NFCUS national president. Nothing came of the conference,

God Bless Godiva

The Lady Godiva Memorial Band turned out in full force for every campus event this year. Although losing the best-band prize at the Mulock Cup finals, they dominated the musical field on Chariot Race Day and even gained an invitation to the Hart House Spring Dance. They were most prominent on the day of the float parade, when they travelled aboard a truck escorted by most of the Engineering faculty.

Excuse Me!

St. Michael's College flashy Blue back Dick Brown puts on a display of hip-swinging and straight-arming that would do justice to any big-league ballplayer. Here he gives the business to George Arnott of the University of Western Ontario in the Varsity-Western game in Toronto.
The Blues won this one, shutting out the Metrasmen 7-0 for the first goose-egg the Westerners had suffered since "way befo' de wah."

Future Choo-Choo

The prize-winning entry in the Float Parade is seen as it rounds the bend in the Varsity Stadium. The Architects' "Train of Tomorrow" walked away with the prize, drowning all the competition out with their whistle, powered by a special air-compressor.

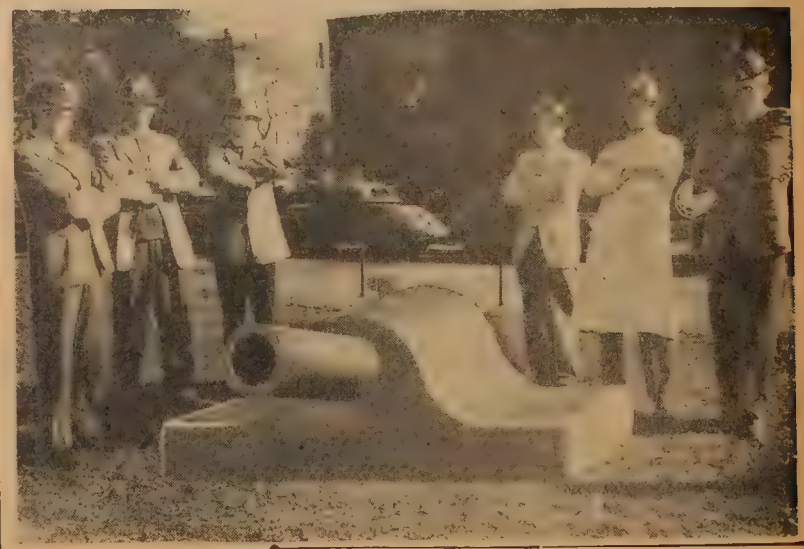
Aero Engineer

Entertaining between halves at last fall's exhibition game with Balmy Beach, Jim Miles, III SPS, demonstrated his faith in Skule unity by making a spectacular swan dive from the goal crossbar into the arms of waiting fellow engineers. Planned entertainment was eclipsed for a moment with all eyes centred on this feat.



Up And Over

Au Revoir!

Now You See It....

The old Skule cannon (pictured right) was stolen and appropriately engraved last fall by University College. After a pitched battle on the front steps of U.C. it was recovered by the Skulemen in time to be fired in the annual float parade. It has since been replaced by a noisier and more efficient model equipped with fifteen - foot chains which are locked around the wrists of the Cannoneers whenever the piece is brought out in public. There have been no attempts to capture it since. Anyway, the campus began to look like a training school for thieves and kidnappers, with cannons, gargoyles and coeds all missing at the same time.

Remember her! Stella McCord's the name. One of P&HE's best gals when it came to cartwheels and turning batons at the same time — she graced the half time periods at last fall's football games. Cute, too! Besides which she has a routine. Cartwheeling to "Stella By Starlight," slowly and gracefully, down the field, her theme played specially for her amidst the round approval of the Joes and Janes in the stands.

Students returning to school in September were met by the sight of stonemasons rushing to completion the University of Toronto's official war memorial.

Visiting Dignitary

The campus waited with bated breath last October for the visit of "Dr. H. M. MacBurney, graduate of the University of Toronto, year of '93." This is what they saw: Dr. MacBurney (Doug Cameron), and Mrs. MacBurney (Anita Beaton), in a proper "Killaloe" buggy.

tanium tetrachloride in his college's traditional "cake fight". Reports he had turned orange seemed amusing to him, as is shown in this picture. While he was in the hospital he also read quite easily that doctors were fighting for his eyesight. Students in charge of the affair said all "weapons" used in the fight should have been okayed by them.

Coloraturus

Replete With Revue

The All-Varsity Revue was a success this year, both in entertainment and financially. Perhaps this was due to the excellent publicity work done, not the least of which was the introduction of the All-Varsity Revue Sundae, a concoction dreamed up by the chefs at Diana Sweets. Its popularity was immediate, and the number of students who knew its name had an influence on the attendance at the Revue '49-'50. The only fear that the girls had was that their costumes for the Revue wouldn't fit after eating such a huge quantity of calories.

Bienvenu was the greeting for these travellers to Montreal for the Carabin weekend. When the U. of M. students returned the visit later the forty who travelled down were their special hosts for the occasion. The scene here is during the sight-seeing tour which was crammed into their busy schedule.

Rural Hart House

With the purchase of the 140 wooded acres on the Niagara escarpment, the Hart House outing Club got under way. The 80-year-old farmhouse, shown above, is headquarters for the activities, which include swimming, skating, fishing, skiing, camping, in fact anything appealing to the outdoorsy.

The 1949-50 session saw the official opening of the Wallberg Memorial Building by the Governor-General. Built at a cost of $4,000,000, the first step in the University's building programme, Wallberg incorporates hitherto badly needed facilities of the Departments of Chemistry and Chemical Engineering. Novel innovations included in the structure are hollow walls containing plumbing, heating and ventilating and electrical facilities easily within reach for repair, completely enclosed lecture rooms, small laboratories with every facility for individual research, and a special lab, 56' by 92' with an open well centre and two-ton crane.

ardson were among the men who worked at top speed to complete the memorial in time for November 11 services. The section they are shown lifting into place was among many that formed a memorial which is a facsimile of the one constructed after the first World War. The carvings of the war-dead's names did not show up very well at first, but authorities said the gradual accumulation of dirt will clarify them.

From Sticks To Stones

The old order changeth yielding place to new . . . the bare sticks of the old wooden stands are coming down, and the new concrete bowl will be finished by game time this fall. The work will give Varsity Stadium a seating capacity of 30,000 which is 10,000 more than before. Besides better seating, the safety factor helped to prompt the authorities to spend the necessary $600,000 for renovation. As well as the extra seats there will be improved facilities for players.

Labs For All

Science and Engineering

By JOE HARRISON

With the iron ring on our finger, graduation ball at hand, classes nearly over, and examinations only a matter of days away, "looking backwards" on the past year becomes more than just a resume of the activities of this column. However, we will try to suppress nostalgia wherever it occurs, and examine our accomplishments in the light of our original intentions.

With less time to look back on than some of our contemporaries (the first column appeared on Jan. 6) we find that much was left undone. It was intended from the start that the range of subject matter dealt with should be broad, including every branch of Engineering, Science, Medicine, and Architecture. It was hoped that sufficient contributions would be received from the students representing these faculties to make this possible. Unfortunately this was not the case, and as a result the subjects dealt with were representative of the work of only one or two individuals.

Aids After Graduation

The Varsity, we feel, performs many functions on this campus. It is not simply a source of information, a reporter of facts, or a bulletin board. It also provides an opportunity for the undergraduate to develop certain talents which may stand him in good stead when he leaves the university.

It is perhaps natural that the greatest number of students gravitating to The Varsity as an extra-curricular activity should be from the arts courses and be made up of those who intend to make journalism and newspaper writing their careers, but there is a large section of the campus which fails to take advantage of the opportunity provided. To direct the attention of this "isolationist South" to these opportunities was one of the primary intentions of this column.

An examination of the university curriculum indicates that there is a definite trend towards the liberalization of the professional courses. The newspapers, magazines, and the radio indicate that today as never before the engineer, the scientist and the medical man are in the public eye, with their every action under constant scrutiny. To leave the interpretation of their work in the hands of the layman puts them in an unenviable and possibly dangerous position.

Need Insight

The elimination of the "strong, silent type" involves an insight into the role which his particular profession plays in society, and coupled with that an ability to express himself to the non-technical public in a style far removed from that which is required in an engineering report or in a technical paper.

The opportunity to develop this ability exists in the pages of our undergraduate publication and the time to start developing it is now. Our undergraduate years are habit-forming years; habits of thought, of study, reading, and writing. The excuse that there is not sufficient time available for these last two pursuits is not a valid one. Having used that excuse ourselves at one time, we feel qualified to make that statement

Finds Precedents

An engineer has been editor-in-chief of The Varsity; an undergraduate in medicine was one of the candidates for the position next year.

This last column would not be complete without a word to the reader as well as to the potential writers. One of our greatest regrets during the past few months has been that although we have been the recipient of much verbal criticism and commendation not one of our columns has inspired "a letter to the editor." We have borne with a studied indifference the superior airs of the Sports Columnist and the AM&D Editor as they passed, bowed beneath the weight of their "fan mail." At first this indifference was genuine since nearly all the letters they received were of a derogatory and critical nature, but as our mailbox remained empty, we reached the point where we could be envious on occasions when the AM&D was snowed under by three vituperative notes in one day.

Therefore, on behalf of my successor, I would suggest to the reader that criticism is a form of appreciation and that nothing will so quickly dampen an eager spirit as being ignored.

The Varsity invites applications for the position of Science Editor for the year 1950-51. This invitation is particularly directed to post-graduates or under-graduates in the faculties of Engineering, Medicine, Architecture, or pure Science. Anyone interested may leave a note addressed to this column at The Varsity Office in the basement of UC, the SAC Office (Hart House), or the Engineering Stores.

State Of Varsity Discussion Begun As ISS Expands

The International Student Service gained in stature on the campus this year as it moved to expand its activities in the local field. Carrying on its activities begun in past years, the local committee also began a new program designed to bring the services of ISS to more individual students. A series of discussions centred around the state of the university was begun, with plans to expand the program next year.

Not so obvious, but an essential part of the ISS program this year were the displaced persons brought to Canada by the ISS to study here. There are 25 of them altogether, six at Toronto. They have blended into the university community here well, and will be among our best citizens. Little publicity has been given the six who came to Toronto, because it was felt that by allowing them to take up normal lives once more, their study and their adaptation to a new country and a new community would be helped. Even though we don't hear much about them they have done well.

Crisis To Be Topic

On a different level, the ISS has again organized its summer seminar, to be held this year in France. Within a week Toronto's six delegates to this seminar will have been picked. The seminar this year will discuss the crisis in western civilization.

One of the more significant events of the year was the visit to Toronto of the ISS general executive secretary from Geneva, Dr. Sigvard Wolontes. In a speech to Toronto students Dr. Wolontes outlined to ISS members here the trend of ISS thinking, particularly as it applies to South-East Asia. ISS will hold its annual international conference in India next year to point up its emphasis on its program in that part of the world.

But it was the ISS plan for South-East Asia that was most impressive. Based on the general principle of help to those universities which are willing to help themselves, ISS plans to send more relief materials into Asia this year, on the theory that before you can discuss ideas with a man you must first make sure that he has the necessities of life.

When he presented this program to Canadian ISS, Dr. Wolontes said that he hopes Canada will be able to contribute directly to the ISS relief program, as well as continue its own local and international program. That will mean a tough haul for ISS in Canada next year, with more emphasis on the relief program, and the kind of publicity and student support which will give them the necessary funds to carry out the program. The gains, as Dr. Wolontes pointed out are large: the building of a solid, coherent university community throughout the world. But it will mean Canadian students will have to dig a little deeper into their pookets next year, and that ISS campaigns for money will have to be more successful than they have been in the past two years.

On the local level, the Toronto committee participated in many activities, of which the Carabin Weekend here and at the University of Montreal is perhaps the outstanding example. Together with NFCUS, ISS organized and carried out the Carabin Weekend project which brought together a selected group of English and French speaking Canadians for a visit. It is this type of program which best illustrates the aim of ISS: the building of the world university community in which students and professors throughout the world find a common basis for thinking and endeavor. There are few university programs existing today which hold more promise for the future than that being carried on by the International Student Service.

Spectacle '50

Sparked by some very good music, the Optometry Spectacle of '50 racked up a resounding success on Monday night.

Hampered by examinations this week and with about one third of the entire College (some 50 students) in the cast, Producer Bob Patterson put together a breezy tuneful show that was in spots almost professional.

The cleverest touch was an interpretation of two Spike Jones records by Al Starko and Marsh Capel. Mouthing the lyrics and the sound effects in perfect time it looked very much as if the peculiar noises coming from the P.A. system originated with Messrs. Starke and Capel.

Most of the songs were written or adapted especially for the show, and for this the Optometrists deserve a lot of credit. Songstress Bette Johnson and trio Don Price, Joe Mancini, and Al Starko put the songs over with the slickness of professionals.

The theme of the show was Optometry, from the opening curtain to the finale. Topical, yet understandable to an outsider, the Spectacle proved that even with such a small group to choose their talent from, student directors need not steal songs or jokes to make their show a success. Terry Jaeger.

From Top To Bottom Is Senior Football Story

The Big Blues this year slipped from top to the bottom rung on the intercollegiate ladder. They took the Yates Cup in '48 but lost it to Western in '49. But the boys played better than the final standings would indicate, and in some measure atoned for their other defeats by soundly trouncing Western right here at Varsity Stadium by a shut-out score of 7-0.

MOOSE MUSTARD

The boys started strongly by whipping the hapless Balmy Beaches 40-6. They kept in the win column with their home game against Queen's by edging the Gaels 22-21. The Gaels took their revenge, however, in the final game of the season at Kingston, shuting out the Blues 9-0. That was one of the two games the Blues did not play very well in.

The Varsity boys lost two games to McGill, to reverse the previous year's decisions. The year before, McGill got slaughtered, and this year the Redmen won by comfortable margins. The Montreal game produced the oddest play of the year when Redman Johnny Newman ran the wrong way, almost for a touchdown.

With Western, it was a home and home win series, and pleased at least 32,000 Toronto and London fans. And however the results came out, it was a lot of fun while it lasted, and it was in doubt right until the last whistle.

U. OF T. CCF CLUB

The final meeting of the U. of T. CCF Club will be held in Wymilwood at 8 p.m. on Tuesday, March 14. The agenda will feature election of officers for the coming year and of delegates to the forthcoming convention of the Ontario CCF.

Senior Letter Winners

After a regular meeting this week, the Athletic Directorate of the University of Toronto announced that the following Athletic awards would be made for the 1949-50 season:

Harrier 3 (Barr, Doull, Webster)
Tennis 2 (Turner, Anderson)
Sr. Fencing 1 (Kellow)
Boxing 6 (Armstrong, Henshall, Couceiro, Leprick, Turner, Williams)
Wrestling 4 (Kirkup, Shaver, Lubbock, Wipper)
Basketball 10 (Senior team)
Hockey 16 (Senior team)
Swimming 3 (Crang, Doug Gibson, Tulley)
Gym 1 (Gord Gibson)

Bronze T's (awarded to three time winners of the first T or to those who have broken a Senior Intercollegiate record).
Farlinger—Poule vault record.
Green—Three time winner.
Crang—Three time winner.
Tulley—Three time winner.
Doug Gibson — Record in 440 yard free style swim.

St. Mike's Gals Are Winners In Interfac B-Ball

By BETTY ASTON

St. Mike's A's took the intramural basketball edging UC Sr. Jr. A's 26-25. The score see-sawed during the whole four quarters but St. Mike's one point lead came in the last minute of play on a free shot by Betty Fitzgerald.

The basketball finals this year were the most closely contested in many years. Both the championship game and the consolation game between UC Fr. and Meds were excitingly close. The consolation game ended in a 25-25 deadlock, leaving the teams tied for third place.

This year was the first time that St. Mike's took the chemplonship although they advanced to the finals two years ago. Last year PHE took the top spot but this year they were knocked out in the league games.

Mulock Cup To Vic After Tough Season

The Interfaculty League this year was unusually tough, and uncovered a lot of good football players, Bob Masterson told the Vic lettermen at their Athletic Banquet last week, when the Mulock Cup was officially presented to the Interfac Champs. Bob intimated that there was not such a big gap between the good interfaculty teams and intercollegiate football, and said that Vic in particular had several players of intercollegiate calibre. This was the third seizure of the Cup in the last four years for Vic; St. Mike's broke the string last year, but Lew Pick masterminded the Red and Gold back to a championship this year, sustaining only one loss.

Jim Rogers, Bob Rumball, and Brad Colbert are considered very likely Vic candidates for the Blues. Vic won the crown in a playoff with Senior Skule, which featured fifty yard runs by Bob Rumball and Harry Damp that will be remembered for a long time. Vic, the first division winners, got into the final by beating a big and tough Forestry squad, which nearly ground the Vicsters under in the first half, but lacked the staying power to finish on top. SPS beat St. Mike's in a snow-storm in their semi-final, to even up for the 7-6 overtime beating the Mikemen gave Junior SPS in a playoff for the group title.

SCRIBES SELECT COLLEGE STARS

Kingston, Ont. Mar. 10—(C.U.P.)—In a poll of sport writers and editors around the intercollegiate circuit this year's hockey and basketball all-stars were picked. Joe Kane, Toronto's rugged defence ace was the only Varsity man chosen unanimously by the scribes for the first team. Doug Orr, Toronto, and Bob McLennan of McGill tied for the all-important position of goalie. Andre Charest, veteran Quebec ace from the University of Montreal, snared the first team centre assignment while team-mate Raymond Flynn earned a wing position. Rocky Robillard, sensational McGill athlete was awarded the remaining first team wing post. Coach Therrien of U. of M. was elected coach. Toronto's Porky McDougall, spectacular rushing defenceman, Bouchard and Laperriere of the Carabins, and Sanderson of McGill all tied for the honor of playing defence with Kane on the first team. Cec Turcott and Rich Howson gained second team bids while Wally Halder was named coach. Murray of Queen's was the other winger.

Johnny McManus of Varsity rated the only selection on either basketball team. He was a unanimous selection to the first team. George Wearring Harry Wade and Paul Thomas of Western all grabbed first team spots as did Harry Lampman of Queen's. Frank Tindall was named first team coach. Queen's dominated the second team Griffin, McNiven and Bahner and Logan being selected. Fraser of McGill was tied with Logan and Bahner for the honors. Western's Johnny Metras was named second team coach.

Senior Intercollegiate Hockey All-Stars:

FIRST TEAM	POSITION	SECOND TEAM
Orr (T)	Goal
MacLellan (Mc) (tied)
Kane (T)	Defence
McDougall (T)
Bouchard (M)
Laperriere (M)	(all tied)
Sanderson (Mc)
Charest (M)	Centre	Turcott (T)

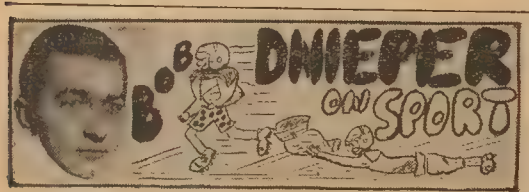
Hockey

Blues Finish Second Again Beaten Out By Carabins

By MAL CRAWFORD

Finishing second in their league with a record of nine wins and three losses, the hockey Blues made by far the best showing of the three senior teams in major sports. The team faced the three other colleges (Montreal, McGill, and Queen's) with a new coach, personable and popular Wally Halder, and practically a new team. Of the sixteen players that went through the season with the team, eleven were playing their first year with the Blues; only Howson, Turcott, Digby, Frey, and Hayes were on last year.

Four away trips were made, two to Kingston and two to Montreal. The trips to Montreal were Friday-Saturday double bills; they would play McGill Friday at the Forum and Saturday, Carabins at the Verdun Auditorium. In between, they would work in sight-seeing tours to such places of interest as the Gaiety, Lili St. Cyr, training table, the Gaiety, Lili St. Cyr . . . But the biggest mixup was the last trip to Queen's, when the basketball team and the hockey team found themselves assigned to the same pullman for the trip home—24 berths for over 30 players, with coaches and other baggage. The B-ball boys thought they were pulling a fast one when they "reserved" their berths by throwing their bags in before the game. But the hockey game was over first, so . . . However, Bob Masterson didn't mind sleeping above the wheels—he says. Later on, one of the basketball players, in a rather exuberant state, possibly a result of the team's nearly beating Queen's stumbled into the car. He was accosted in front of Masterson's berth by waggish Bill Prince, manager of the Hockey team, who handed him a basketball pointed to the coach's sleeping form, and said, "there's a tramp in that berth: throw this ball in and run like hell!" Being in no condition to think up an argument, he did just that . . . After the train crew had welded the roof back on, they were ready to start.



The prospects for next year are bright. Doug Orr will be back in goal, and there will be an all-star defence with Joe Kane and Porky McDougall returning. Two forward lines will return, Bazos and Howson at centre, and wingmen Frey and Arrowsmith and Vernon and Fox. Bucky Walters, with Pete Vernon, has four more years, and John Addison will also return. Several of the Intermediates have caught Halder's eye and may be up next year; centre John Lickley is a likely choice. Wardrop and Fullerton stood out with the B's, and Paul Prendergast is another possibility.

INTS. SONT LA!

Varsity intermediate hockey club, perennial winners of the Shaw Trophy, did it again this year, nosing out Western Colts by a comfortable margin. They lost only one game all year and won their last against Waterloo College by a terrific 20-0 score. This was the fifth straight year that the intermeds have taken the western division of the intermediate league.

Jack Life, coach for the last two years, deserves a great deal of credit for his untiring efforts in working with the team. The season showed a great improvement in many of the players who either moved up from junior ranks or were hold-overs from last year's aggregation. Black Jake Raftis, shifty stick-handler, came up from the junior B's and did a fine job with the intermeds. John Lickley was another performer who played his first season with the team and impressed with their ability.

Gary Carl, playing his first season with a university team, was one of the top goalers in the league even if he was accused of having a horseshoe up his sleeve at times by unkindly observers. John Fingland improved a lot over last season as did Pat McLoughlin and Bill Paterson. Al Conboy, slight winger, played some fine hockey and deserves an opportunity for senior ranks.

RING OUT THE BELLS! Dance In The Streets! It is the time for Great Rejoicing! This is Dnieper's last column for the year!

Like old father time does on December 31st, we'll look back over the year and recall columns we have written. Some of them look pretty foolish, and when we read them now we feel like crawling into the woodwork. The greatest force for discouraging young writers is for them to read some of the stuff they have written themselves.

Anyhow . . . . that column advocating beer for Hart House drew quite a bit of attention. In fact, we had a clipping sent to us from the North Battleford, Saskatchewan, (up near Great Slave Lake) Optimist with a nice story about the whole thing. How word does get around! We may even get beer before this poor old slave shuffles off this mortal coil.

Another bit of stink the column raised was about athletic scholarships. Several people phoned from London, offering to punch us right in the snoot, in fact quite some people came from London and told us we were all wet. Calmed them down though, before permanent damage was done to our fairly prominent beak. The net result of our opinions on scholarships was that we now know that the greatest majority of students refuse to condone them in any shape, form, or mode for the University of Toronto.

We also managed to get the engineers sufficiently mad at us during the year, but again, no physical damage was done. They're really stout fellows all, those Skulemen, and we enjoy taking little digs at them because they are the faculty that lends itself best to such labors. We don't really dislike them, we love them.

Of course we can't let slip without mention the great, immortal, deathless quote from Vic Obeck in answer to how to win football games. "If a team has good conditioning, the will to win, AND THE ABILITY TO PLAY GOOD FOOTBALL, they will certainly go a long way towards winning a game."

Also we would like to pay our respects to an almost saintly martyr . . . . Beauregard Yumpf! This fine chap gave his life so that students could get in the front door of Hart House. The door is now fixed, and Beauregard (may he rest in piece, Amen) has done his bit. Long may his memory live!

We have of course been campaigning for a new field house, but again, the well known student apathy has pervaded the Board of Governors, so that it looks like it's going to be a long haul to get five floors.

Then again, of course we shot off on all kinds of things like financial statements, Hart House meals, and lack of football players. However, these are perennial arguments, and the students of the greatest university in the universe (Hatcha! tcha! That's Our Baby Blue and White!) will be hearing more of these same yaps next year.

We told quite a few stories, too, some of which were corny and some of which smelled still more. Anyhow, some people seemed to enjoy them.

The City of Toronto proved themselves above petty

VARSITY SPORTS

'Mural Trophies Are Evenly Distributed

There are only two more major intramural championships that have not yet been decided: the basketball and the water polo. The other championships were fairly evenly distributed with SPS, UC and Meds leading the way. Victoria won only one title, but that was an important one, the Mulock Cup. In the fall Meds took the lacrosse and volley-ball, beating out UC in both cases. UC in that term won the tennis, track and swim league. SPS in the fall copped the harrier and golf.

Complete Results:
Football — Victoria
Lacrosse — Meds
Soccer — Trinity
Golf — SPS
Tennis — UC
Sr. Track — UC
Harrier — SPS
Swim League — UC
Hockey — St. Mike's
Sr. Swimming — Meds
Sr. Boxing — SPS
Wrestling — UC and SPS (Tied)
Gym — Trinity

UC are favored to win the water-polo and UC seniors, in view of the fact that they have beaten senior SMC twice in the league games, we pick them to win the major league basketball crown.

Fizz-Ed Femmes Outclass Others In 'Mural League

By JACKIE HEFFRON

Once again the PHE girls have chalked up an impressive number of intramural championships. Last year they made rather decisive victories but this year they had quite a bit of competition and had to really put on the pressure to take the top spots.

Their most recent victory was in the hockey loop when they edged out Vic I in a closely contested playoff set. This is the second successive year that PHE has taken the championship in hockey from Vic who previously led the league for several years. This year the playoffs ran to three games, with the first two games ending in a scoreless tie. In the third and sudden death game PHE won 1-0 on a goal by Irma Bullock.

When PHE took the softball league last fall they also came up against the Vic aggregation. This playoff also ran to three games with PHE finally taking the last

Reed Trophy Standings

With only a few more constituencies to hear from, University College are leading in the Reed Trophy race by about 1500 points. The only faculty that has an outside chance of catching UC now is Trinity. SPS have dropped from second to fourth while Trinity climbed from fifth to second, since the last audit. Complete standings follow: 1. UC 12,049.5; 2. Trinity 10,619.5; 3. Vic 10,554.5; 4. SPS 9,943; 5. Forestry 9,138; 6. Meds 7,793; 7. SMC 7,519; 8. Wycliffe 6,188; 9. Architecture, 6,119; 10. Emm. 5,687; 11. Dents 5,342.5; 12. Knox 5,330; 13. Institutional Management 4,588; 14. Pharmacy 4,440.5; 15. Law 3,203.

Blue Gals Mop Up In B-Ball, Hockey

There is only one cup awarded for intercollegiate women's superiority in the sports world and for the third year running Varsity has taken it. The Bronze Baby trophy is once again in the possession of the University of Toronto.

Mickey Barnett coached her basketball team to a perfect record of five victories in five tries, beating McMaster twice, and also McGill, Queen's and Western.

Hockey wins were equally decisive in our favour as the all-Varsity team twice defeated Queen's, 7-2 and 3-1. The hockey team will look different next year when graduation has taken its toll. Goalie Mary Macpherson is on her way out with a degree, along with star forwards Alison Jeffries and Di Rogers. These are the big holes but B. J. Fraser and Irene Hain, to mention only two stars, will be back to fill them.

The volleyball squad met some tough competition in the meet at McMaster and lost out by two points to the home team. OAC and Western were the other competitors. Previous to the intercollegiate round robin, however, Varsity walloped McMaster 33-26 but couldn't repeat the performance in the all-important tournament.

As for skiing, the lack of snow necessitated the withdrawal of the team from the intercollegiate meet held at McGill.

Both in tennis and badminton, Varsity's teams were edged out by one point. Pat Montgomery, PHE, was the only girl to appear on both teams, playing first singles in the tennis at Western and badminton at Queen's McGill won the tennis championship; and Queen's the badminton.

This year for the first time an Archery meet was held at Varsity, but the team bowed out to fifth place, with OAC the winners.

Varsity took another important title by a big lead this year in the swimming department. The meet was held in Hamilton in the fall and not only did they bring back the intercollegiate title to the U. of T., but also Marg Harrington, of PHE, placed first in the individual scoring. Entered in diving, the 50 yr. free stryc, and the individual medley race, Marg came out with three firsts, and shared a first place honor with the other three on the free style relay team.

With the titles the all-Varsity teams have taken, and the solid competition put up in other spheres, the campus girls from Toronto have maintained a creditable place in intercollegiate sports events.

Students Elected To Directorate

In a meeting of the athletic directorate last night in Hart House, the five student members for next year were elected. They are Bill Brewer, Trinity, John Evans, Meds, Bill Farlinger, Vic, Ed Fisher, PHE and Rich Howson, Vic. Nominations are made by both the faculties and the major sports teams. Brewer was nominated by the senior football team, Evans by Meds, Farlinger by Victoria College, Fisher by PHE and Rich Howson by the hockey team. The honor of serving on this committee is one that is respected by all and the undergrad posts on the Association have been occupied in the past by some of the most distinguished undergraduates ever to attend the University.

NOMINATIONS
WOMEN'S ATHLETIC DIRECTORATE

BASKETBALL

BLUES WIN ONE

The Senior Basketball Blues have had better seasons as far as their record of wins and losses is concerned, but they provided the spectators who came out to the Athletics and Sports Nites with plenty of excitement.

Under Coach Bob Masterson's rigorous schedule of league and exhibition tilts, the Blues played 20 games, winning only one, a league game against the McGill Redmen at Montreal. Perhaps the most exciting game of the season was the exhibition battle staged at one of the Sports Nites when the Blues were downed by Buffalo State Teachers College.

Shooting on the part of both teams was nothing short of sensational, but the visitors' edge in foul shot accuracy was the deciding factor in their 52-50 victory. The spectators went away feeling they had seen a real ball game that night.

Prospects for next year seem to be fairly bright. Coach Masterson has initiated a policy of making high school talent familiar with what Varsity has to offer through such practices as the high school games at Athletic Nights. A supply of Freshmen talent coming in every year would certainly go a long way towards earning a championship for the Blues.

Some of the outstanding talent on the Junior and Intermediate Blues this year will get a chance at Senior Intercollegiate competition. Juniors like Floyd Elmer and Dave Bernstein and Intermediates Doug Kettle, John MacKenzie, Don Barbour, Frank Denton and Al Stevenson will be considered by the Blues for next season. Kettle and Barbour have already turned in a few performances for the Senior squad.

The Intermediate Blue hoop squad squad were runners-up to the Western Colts in their league play.

actions. We wrote a derogatory satire about them when they were about to decide on closing Devonshire place and some of the councillors saw it, were amused, and then voted unanimously in favor of the University. Three cheers for a fair-minded city council.

.. And then of course, we must metion our patron saint —Mr. James Aloysius Coleman. In spite of the several unintended derogatory remarks he made about J. J. Kelly, the Demon Blocker, Mr. Coleman has always been high in our regard. Unfortunately there are not enough issues of "The Varsity" to print one of his colums, but we will next year. And those of you who claim we have aped his style, may we say that Cole's style maybe has pervaded ours, but as Professor McCluhan of the English Department says, it is only through another's style that one can discover his own. Anyhow, we have tried to do our best this year, and we hope we haven't made to many people mad at us.

And thanks to all that supported your humble servant in U.C. S.A.C. elections.

Landsakes... I guess I do use Nickel

"Bacon, meat, canned vegetables and fruits are all processed in plants where gleaming Nickel alloys keep them clean. And salt—you know how it rusts most metals. 'Monel' equipment is used in the salt refinery too because it lasts longer, keeps the salt pure."

"My sheets and pillow cases come back from the laundry white as snow because 'Monel' equipment is used in washing them. 'Monel' does not rust or stain. It wears longer."

"The heating elements of my toaster, range and percolator all last longer because they are made of Nickel alloys. My knives, forks and spoons are made of a silvery metal composed of nickel, copper and zinc, then silver plated."

Forty-three years of research have uncovered hundreds of uses for Nickel in the United States and other countries. Now Nickel exports bring in millions of U.S. dollars yearly. These dollars help pay the wages of the 14,000 Nickel employees and also help pay railwaymen, lumbermen, steel and iron workers and other men and women making supplies for the Nickel mines, smelters and refineries.

The Fizzedders got credit for two more championships when Pat Montgomery took double honours in tennis and badminton. Pat defeated Bev. Downey, Vic, in the tennis finals held last fall. The intercollegiate team was chosen from the semi-finalists—Pat Montgomery, Bev Downey, Barb Allmond, Trin., and Ev Aiken, Vic.

The badminton tournament was held at the Strathgowan courts this spring and Pat downed Mary Matthews to take her second championship of the year. The intercollegiate badminton team was also chosen on an elimination basis with Pat Montgomery, Mary Matthews, Trin., Jane Matthews, Trin., and Ruth Nethercott, Vic, making up the team.

PHE also took top honours on the volleyball courts, defeating the Vic squad by a very lop-sided score.

SPS cleaned up the Hart House Track meet for the second week in a row, placing first, second and third in the broad jump, first and second in the high jump, and first in the open two miles.

Dave Barr won the open two-mile in the very good time of 9:41.2, while Frank McCurry of Dents placed second with 10:17 and Paul Forestell of Saint Mike's third with 11:61.2.

In the novice two-mile run, Vic got the first two spots. Charlie Wortman, I Vic, broke the novice record with a time of 10:12.5, and Mal Crawford, I Vic, was second with 10:36.6. Bill Harris I Trinity was third at 10.45.7.

Leon Smith, SPS, won both the high jump and the standing broad jump. His high jump reached 5'7" jumping from a hardwood floor. Bert Maxwell and Endel Tulving were runners up. Smitty's broad jump was 8'11". Sutherland and Maxwell placed second and third.

Basketball

PHE firsts beat Senior SPS 34-29 in a basketball quarter-final, coming from behind a 21-16 deficit in the third quarter. They will now meet Senior UC at one o'clock tomorrow for the semi-final.

Saint Mike's beat Junior UC 36-32 the same day, and will meet Sr. SPS tomorrow at 7 p.m.

WOMEN'S SWIMMING

The combination of Meds, Nurses and Physio Therapy took the honors this year with Jean Cossar, Physio, winning the Isabel Robertson Cup for the highest number of individual points. Charlotte Chisoim, Trinity, merited the Cochrane Trophy for her outstanding diving show.

Another Step Toward A Student Union

VIEW FROM SOUTH-WEST.

This is the last of a series of proposed Students' Union buildings designed by fifth year Architectural students. The designs, drawn up recently as a three day problem for the senior designers, are part of a complex campaign put on this year under the direction of the SAC (described in the story below). This sketch is by D. T. Dunlop and R. S. McCague, and is viewed from the south-west. The building is to be situated next to Hart House and to use its kitchen facilities to save expensive duplication of existing services. Note the sunken terrace near the main lounge and the terrace off the coffee bar over the main entrance. It will also include private dining rooms, offices, a book store and ticket office, and a women's lounge.

By JACK GRAY

At the end of this year the proposed Students' Memorial Union seems little closer than it did when we first came back last fall. In spite of the fact that progress has seemed slow, it has been steady. A report placed before the Students' Administrative Council last Wednesday night outlines the present revised proposal, one that changes the location of the proposed union, and drastically reduces the estimated cost.

Most of the stumbling was over a problem that hits every project of this nature, sooner or later—money. The Students' Administrative Council has no power to borrow or beg the half million dollars it will need without the full approval of the Board of Governors of the University. It is still uncertain where, or how the money will come. But about two months ago the university administration indicated that the money would probably be available—if the plan was right.

Drop Theatre

In those two months the Student Union Committee of the Council under the chairmanship of Fifth Year Architectural Student Ian Maclennan went over the proposed outline of the building in great detail, pruning, paring and rearranging to fit the demands of the new site, along the Queen's Park Speedway south of Hart House. The theatre was cut out, and the kitchen facilities rearranged because it would now be possible to make use of Hart House kitchens. And also a study of administration and financing for the new union was begun.

In its report which the SAC adopted Wednesday night, the Union Committee recommended changes in a report prepared last year. The site has been changed, and the new site offers difficulties.

Poses Problems

"The architectural solution poses problems of careful and imaginative siting of a relatively large building on a complex and limited site, a question of harmonious and complementary relationship to a fine existing building in a traditional style, with important implications of scale, textures and forms and the derivation of a logical plan for the multiple uses of the building," the committee reported. And they added: "That this can be successfully accomplished has been indicated by the solution to the actual problem recently submitted by the senior class of the School of Architecture."

To secure an ideal solution to the problem the committee recommended that a competition be held for the new union when the time comes.

Pare To Bone

Areas of the proposed units of the proposed union are scaled down in the report to what the committee calls "minimal area requirements." These sizes "will not lend themselves to further reduction and still meet SAC requirements" states the report. Most drastic changes from former proposals came in the food areas. Dining rooms have been scaled down, but a Coffee Shop from which the new Union would derive much revenue is larger. Still in of course are offices and lounges, meeting rooms and a workshop, and even the radio studio which would also house the Carnegie Record Collection under the new plan.

Under the heading "Administration," the report deals with some of the proposed operational set-up of the new union. Chief among the proposals is the one which would set up a permanent commission of the SAC to deal with the Union. Two of the Union Commission members would sit on the Hart House Board of Stewards, while the Warden and Comptroller of Hart House would become the Warden and Comptroller of the Union also, to give "continuity, coordination and guidance."

To Complement Hart House

The report also states in general terms the basic conception of the Union's function: It is the purpose of the Students' Administrative Council that the guiding principle underlying the activities of the Student Union Commission shall be to broaden and enhance the activities now being carried on by Hart House on the cultural and social side of student life on the campus.

The Committee report, adopted unanimously by the Council, now goes to the administration with the hope that they will give "some positive commitment to the present Students' Administrative Council. It is beyond the competence of this committee to proceed further with the project without such a commitment and assistance from the University Administration."

And there the matter rests, as The Varsity finishes publishing for the year. No more planning can be done until the administration makes its decisions. The prospects are brighter, however, and a Students' Memorial Union may not be so far away as it seemed in September.

Allow Student To Direct All-Varsity

The Students' Administrative Council voted 10 to 7 to revert to the policy which has obtained in the past with regard to the director of the All Varsity Revue at its meeting last Tuesday night.

This means that, instead of hiring a professional to direct the campus-wide show, a student in attendance at the University will again be given the opportunity to direct the show.

All Varsity Revue Commissioner Nipuer Benson said that in her opinion, a director of professional calibre would certainly benefit the show, but that she was prepared to accept the Council's ruling on the matter. She stated that if a student should be appointed, he should be paid a salary by the council to help to defray his expenses. No action was taken on this point.

The Council also:

—Heard a report from the NFCUS committee which outlined the investigation of book prices undertaken by NFCUS and some steps taken to lower prices and keep them down. NFCUS Chairman Tom Symons stated that a constant check must be kept on book outlets to insure that book prices, lowered now would not be raised immediately the present "hubbub over prices" has subsided.

The report covered, in point form, the activities of NFCUS over the year; its work in connection with ISS scholarships to study in Europe this summer; the Carabin Weekend; the preparation of a booklet to be distributed next fall to acquaint freshmen with the activities of NFCUS.

—Heard a report of the Radio Committee which recommended that a portable unit be purchased to broadcast campus events. The Radio Commissioner also hinted that time might be available on privately-owned AM stations next year.

—Heard a report from the Music Commission that another concert of the University Symphony Orchestra will be held in Convocation Hall this Sunday evening at 8:30. No admission is to be charged for this concert.

Third PM To Speak

Only two other Prime Ministers have spoken before him. The first of these was William Lyon Mackenzie King, in 1927, who supported the resolution that "This House views with favor the conclusions of the committee on Imperial Relations of the recent Imperial Conference." At that debate 533 people attended, with the affirmative winning 408 to 125. Over half of them must have been standing outside the Debates Room, waiting for a chance to cast their vote, since the Debates Room holds only 250.

In his speech the former premier attacked Mr. Bruce, then Prime Minister of Australia, who had just concluded a series of speeches in Canada, in which he plugged for more Empire defence.

In 1934 R. B. Bennett supported a motion approving of Canada's preferred position in the Empire market. Again over 500 voted, the affirmative winning 311 to 190.

Toronto newspapers of the time described Mr. Bennett as speaking "with all the zeal and vigor with which he would defend his policies on the floor of the Commons in Ottawa," and as "ready with retort and apt in illustration."

The result of the debate was discussed in one 1934 editorial in the following terms: "In view of the fact that undergraduates are often radical in their views the result of the debate must be regarded as reassuring. It is highly creditable to the University of Toronto that so many of its students have the intelligence and understanding of world affairs to vote as they did."

The debate this year will be held in the Great Hall of Hart House, which holds 500 people, so as to provide for the overflow. Women will be allowed in for the "special occasion" but not allowed to speak. Admission will be by A.T.L. card.

DVA PAY

DVA will pay on April 14 for those students whose examinations do not finish before that time. Those schools and faculties whose examinations will have been completed before that time have been notified, and most will be paid during the week of April 17th. For the arts courses whose examination schedule lasts into May, another pay will be prepared in that month. These provisions are subject to change.

Book Review

Albert Einstein

ALBERT EINSTEIN by Leopold Infeld (Scribners, published in Canada by S. J. Saunders & Co.) 125 Pages, $2.75.

There have been few men who have managed to capture the imagination of the public as has Albert Einstein. Yet the man whose name has become synonymous with genius, and whose theories have set the pattern for scientific thought for more than a quarter of a century has remained in the background, a shadowy and little known figure. The public conceding him his genius and the profundity of his theories has made little attempt to understand the nature of one or the implications of the other. Such is the myth that has grown up around him that only a select few have felt capable of understanding his work.

Professor Infeld's latest book is a highly successful attempt to explode this myth. He brings to his task a unique familiarity with his subject, a familiarity born of long association and deep admiration. One of the world's foremost physicists, the author conducts the reader on a fascinating journey.

Beginning with the foundations of the mechanistic concept as originated by Galileo and which found its highest expression in the work of Newton, Professor Infeld traces the trends in physical science which logically and inexorably led to the principles embodied in Einstein's theories of relativity.

The underlying structure of Einstein's theories is built up skillfully by the use of simple and highly illustrative analogies. Thus the failure of Galileo's relative velocity principle and his law of addition of velocities is illustrated by an observer on a moving train; the characteristics of a gravitational field by an accelerating elevator, the law of the red shift and the concept of an expanding universe by an inflated sphere. Similar analogies are used to describe the implications of the Quantum Theory and the granular structure of energy. Without being exposed to a single mathematical formula the reader is left with a clear and concise picture of the universe as seen through the eyes of modern scientific thought, "a rational structure — in part philosophical and speculative yet capable of experimental verification, neither metaphysical nor mysterious."

While building up this rational structure the author does not neglect his principal figure. The character of Albert Einstein, the man, is skilfully interwoven with the account of his work and the picture that emerges is that of a man who is essentially a philosopher, rather than a physicist, a man deeply absorbed in the mysterious universe in which he lives, with a great capacity for wonder, living in a world far removed from ordinary mortals; untarnished by the prevailing prejudices, customs and opinions; an objective spectator of human folly. That Einstein himself realizes he is cut off from close association with his fellow man is evidenced in a quotation from one of his own books, but although admitting his loss in some respects, he expresses no regret preferring his isolation to trusting his peace of mind to such "shifting foundations."

In attempting to explain Einstein's appeal to the imagination, Professor Infeld suggests that the fascination lies in our picture of a man impervious to the little irritations of our world, who when voicing an opinion or defending a cause does so with no ulterior motive or hope of personal gain, a man full of humility as to his place in the scheme of things yet full of kindness and compassion for his fellow man.

The author's treatment of his subject leaves the reader with two distinct impressions. The first is Professor Infeld's deep admiration and affection for Einstein as a man, a necessary condition to be able to paint so vivid a picture of his life and his character. The second is the underlying urgency in his desire that the implications of Einstein's work be known and understood by the general public. Early in the book he states; "Ten years ago relativity theory seemed an abstract web of thought far removed from the phenomena that man can witness or experience. Not so today. Not so since 80,000 died at Hiroshima. The relativistic relation between mass and energy found by Einstein in 1905 is no longer a rare laboratory phenomenon. To all of us it has become a matter of life and death."

ASSISTANT DIRECTOR OF HEALTH SERVICE RETIRES

The Health Service announces with regret the resignation of Dr. W. B. Stiver from the position of assistant director which he has occupied since his discharge from the armed forces in 1946. Dr. Stiver is relinquishing his appointment to become medical director of Physicians' Services Inc.

The director, Dr. Gossage, said that in losing Dr. Stiver the Health Service and the student body had suffered a great loss. He was a most efficient clinician and administrator and enjoyed great popularity with the student body.

The good wishes of the university go with Dr. Stiver in his new appointment.

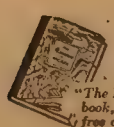
Yeah! Nickel's tough!

Tough job, trucking—and it takes tough equipment to stand up. That's why Nickel alloys are used for the gears and other important parts of trucks subject to severe shock and constant hard wear.



Exhaust pipes and mufflers are up against the problem of hot corrosive gases. These parts are being made of Nickel alloys to reduce costs in the long run.

The gleaming grille and other parts of trucks and cars are Nickel-plated. Nickel has lasting beauty.

Forty-three years of research have uncovered hundreds of uses for Nickel in the United States and other countries. Now Nickel exports bring in millions of U.S. dollars yearly. These dollars help pay the wages of the 14,000 Nickel employees in Canada and also help pay Canadian railwaymen, lumbermen, iron and steel workers and other men and women making supplies for the Nickel mines, smelters and refineries.

"The Romance of Nickel" a 60-page book, fully illustrated, will be sent free on request to anyone interested.
